Thousands of people in Canada today are alive and working with plastic eye lenses, mechanical heart valves, polypropylene covered jawbones, metallic brain membranes, rubber tendons and metal skulls, says the Ontario Division of the Imperial Oil Review. A generation ago they would all have been blind, lame or dead.

Actually this is nothing new, the Review says. Men have always tried to replace diseased or missing parts. But what is new, is the recent rapid development of artificial vital organs, one reason being the availability of new materials, especially oil-derived plastics.

Some of the most advanced work at the moment is being done on the artificial implant—this heart and a promising model has already been designed. It was developed by a team at the Baylor University, Texas, headed by one of the world's leading heart surgeons, Dr. Michael DeBakey, the man who replaced a major artery in the Duke of Windsor.

Dr. DeBakey asserts that within five years doctors will be replacing the human heart almost as a matter of course. Partial hearts, similar to the one used in the Houston operation, will be available to all medical centres in the coming year at a cost of a few thousand dollars each.

What DeBakey is doing in artificial heart research, others are doing in the kidney research. Already many persons head active lives today thanks to artificial kidney machines.

One problem involved in making kidney machines smaller is reducing the space required for the plastic membrane that filters the wastes out of the blood stream.

Recent developments indicate that the filters of the future may come not from medical research but from government laboratories where the looming water shortage crisis has put a note of urgency into the search for filters to sweeten sea water. Experiments use hollow tubes which will filter pure water out of the sea but have been developed in the United States. The tubes will also filter wastes out of the blood stream, and they operate in very much the same manner as the human kidney.

In Canada, desalination research has taken a different tack, and it too has come up with a possible membrane for artificial kidneys. Dr. Srinivasa Sourirajan, a chemical engineer at the National Research Council in Ottawa, has discovered a plastic which distinguishes between fluids in a mixture by the electronic characteristics of the fluid's molecules.

While work on artificial internal organs forges ahead, new devices are being developed to take the place of less vital parts of the body, and old ones are being refined. Television sight for the blind may one day be a reality. So may electronic hearing for the deaf, and computerized walking for the paralyzed.

Today, just about every spare part made has some plastic in it. Those that haven't are coated with plastic to protect them from the body's defences and to prevent reaction to body chemicals. Some plastics do react with the body, but the list of inert plastics is so comprehensive that you can name the properties you want—lightweight, or dense, rigid or flexible; unaffected by the blood or absorbed by it; one that repels body cells, or one that allows tissues to grow into it — and find a plastic to fit the specifications.

There are rigid methyl methacrylate plates for weakened skulls, nylon reinforced silastic tendons with dacron cords that allow well tissues to grow into them and anchor them in place. teflon windpipes and arterias, implantable teflon breasts for women to replace those removed is surgery, acrylic bones, and polyethylene cups to substitute for jawbone cartilage.

TO HIBERNATE OR MIGRATE?

As he grows older, man is less likely to celebrate the season of winter. If he can afford it he jets south. When he can't migrate, he tends to hibernate. The only outdoor activity for many is snow shovelling.

What is the right type of exercise for adults? Can too much exercise cause heart strain? Answers to these and other questions are in the booklet "Get Fit Keep Fit" available from the Queen's Printer at Ottawa.

While many will hibernate, hundreds of Canadians will ski, figure skate, snowshoe, or just tramp through the woods to enjoy winter at its best.

Pre-season conditioning exercises, tips on the selection and care of ski equipment, skiing tips for the beginner and pre can be had in the illustrated booklet, Ski — Fun For Everyone, from the Queen's Printer.

A very filling climax to a long and faithful career of public service was observed at the regular meeting of the Hardisty Council on Nov. 1st, when Mr. Allan Johnstone was presented with a polished brass plate about 8x10 inscribed as follows: Allan John stone in appreciation of 6 years of service as Mayor and Councillor, from 1951 to 1956, in the Town of Hardisty. Fifteen years as Councillor, 30 as Mayor. Presented by the Hardisty Town Council, 1956.

Some 125 persons sat down to a meat delicious banquet sponsored by the Sedgewick Board of Trade in honor of the Oiler Baseball Club which won the Northern Alberta Championship this summer.

Seventy people turned out for the first meeting of the Killam Home & School Assn. A blight of the meeting was a presentation to Miss Charlene Saunders for having the highest grade 9 standing.

The Lougheed Hockey Players are working Wednesday afternoons and Sundays building a new fence around the rink and preparing for winter.

Strong grades 7, 8, and 9 held a Hallowe'en Party at the home of their teacher, Miss Phipps. Everyone had to have a costume or suffer the penalty. Paul Tuzzeneau was convenor for the program. His helpers were Patsy Snow, Agnes Nochtigal, & Donnie Hayes.

Killam Baptist WMS held their fall meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Hiller at Sedgewick, with Mrs. Simpson presiding.

Hallowe'en passed very quietly this year. As a matter of fact we must give the young people credit for acting as sensible.

Prisms and Mirrors (!) at Herman Fedenea, an old timer of the Strome district, were instantly killed at his home a victim of a fatal accident on Monday when a truck in which he was riding with another man near Innisfail overturned and crushed him to death.

Mrs. Cormack of Killam says that if the party who stole the woolen underwear off her clothes line will come to her she will gladly supply them with clothing.

A motor car accident occurred in Sedgewick on Monday morning in the street opposite W. B Murray's home, when Mr. Turnbull's car collided with a trailer being hauled by G. C. Crooks. No one was injured, but the cats were scattered to the 4 winds & both the trailer and Mr. Turnbull's car were badly damaged.

Centennial Report

1867 1967 BY JOHN W. FISHER CENTENNIAL COMMISSIONER

You've heard of the population explosion. Have you heard about the information explosion?

In this fast age, I am told, mankind's total knowledge is increased daily by thousands of new bits of information gathered by scientists, engineers and other professionals. The problem is how to get the information out to people who can use it. It's no good filed away in office cabinets.

In a way we are faced with problems of an information explosion at the Centennial Commission. The Confederation Exhibition Train & Caravans touring Canada from coast to coast next year, for example, will be stopping at more than 800 communities. That means more than 800 place names and more than 800 sets of dates and we can all the people in the 800 communities to know about them.

The Train and Caravans represent merely one challenge in the business of Centennial information distribution. Itineraries for the 1,300-mile Centennial Canoe Pageant, the Armed Forces' Military Tattoo, dates for the naval assemblies in coastal ports, air shows, Festival Canada performances across the land — travelling exhibits of painting and sculpture and world sport championships — people want to know what, where and when about all these and the many more national events of Centennial year. In addition there are still more planned by the provinces and territories, plus local activities sponsored by communities and private organizations.

Advertisements in the press and over television and radio, of course will herald events in the cities and towns in the weeks before the occasions. But to let all the people in all of Canada know months in advance about every date and every location for each event, we believe would create an information explosion on the order of about 8 magnitude. (Our theorist at the Centennial Commission also advise that it couldn't be done!)

It's a great challenge to get information out across the land to all the people, especially when some of the projects are still in the planning stage.

I think one member of my listening audience realized that when she asked a question in an east/western recently.

"I'm from White Rock, B. C. and I'm having friends from the States visiting in the middle of May. Can you tell me what is happening in our area then?"

Well, fortunately I had a set of our concentrated data books with me and was able to answer after a little searching. One of the Confederation Caravans would be stopping in White Rock for two days on May 12th and 13th.

Not that we can come up with all the answers all the time but I realize that a lot of people in many places have similar questions in their minds

May I suggest, if you can't find the right answers, that you try Information Services, Centennial Commission, P. O. Box 1967, Ottawa. We'll try to host this information explosion yet!

SUGAR AND SPICE

A DAY TO REMEMBER

Another Remembrance Day is in the offing. As I write, two things evoke the particular mood that day always holds for me, or rather the combination of moods.

Outside, it's a gloomy fall day. The lowering cloud seeps a dense, acrid drizzle A handful of oak leaves cling to the stark branches and no bird sings. A typical Remembrance Day atmosphere

But on my desk is a letter from an old friend, and the warmth, courage and indomitable spirit contained in it defy the fool of death and [illegible] animals

His name is Alexander Forbes, Cunningham, Ontario. We've never met, but have corresponded. We are both lovers of the printed word and about once a year, he writes a long letter, filled with reminiscence, wit and goodwill. His letters always give me a lift

He has been in poor health in recent years, like so many of his old comrades. But this has not dimmed his spirit. His writing becomes increasingly difficult to read. Not because of infirmity, but because he is going blind.

Cataracts are forming on his eyes, and he will enter St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, after New Year's, for an operation. Does he complain? Not on your life He can even joke about it

The reason he wrote is that he had promised to send me a book, and wanted to get it off before his sight failed completely. It is based on a Yank's experience in World War I, and typically, he adds, "I believe it to be authentic and not a lot of Yankee bull . . . when you have read it, you might lend it to some old sweat at the Legion Hall, particularly if he served in the PBI." Short for Poor Bloody Infantry.

Each year, my mood on Remembrance Day is a mixture of sadness and admiration.

There's a reason for the sadness. Twenty years ago, Remembrance Day was a vital and colorful affair World War II was an immediate memory. The Legion Parade was striking The World War I vets were barely middle-aged and their ranks were swelled by the youthful, swinging veterans of the second war, young, fit and full of beam.

But the grief was real. There were brothers, uncles, sons and fathers missing from the files of Legionnaires And when the Last Post sounded, and the bell tolled in the hush, the tears ran free, and there was a communal lump in the throat

Time passed. Grief eased. Things changed. A whole new generation grew up, to which even World War II was just something in the history books. The veterans of that war are middle-aged now and every year the ranks of old sweats grow thinner.

There is something almost perfunctory about the occasion now. The veterans remember, and the women who lost their men remember But it doesn't mean much to the kids, and for many others, it's just a day to go hunting, or put on the last of the storm windows.

But for me, the second emotion of that day — admiration — does not alter As the talented [illegible] of Canada's gallant lads of 1914-18 turn out for the parade, my heart is with them. There isn't much spring in the step any more, and backs are not as straight But there is still a pride in their bearing.

And there should be Their war was no Charge of the Light Brigade. There was nothing dashing about it. It was cold, wet, mud, lice, rotten grub and relentless pounding It was a brutal, stupid war

But they fought, and they didn't run. And they came home, those who were left. And they were shabbily treated. And they suffered their rotted lungs and their crippling arthritis. And they didn't complain much.

There aren't many of them left, but I hope I'm there to drink a toast to them on Remembrance Day, after the parade, as they swap lies at the Legion Hall.

Alexander Forbes is one of them. May he be reading his beloved books 10 years from now, and I hope some of my other friends among the old sweats will drop him a line

It's lonely when you can't see.

What does Centennial mean to you?
What are you planning for Centennial?
1967. This is the year for Canadians everywhere to stop and think about Canada. To look back on how far this nation has come since its rough and rugged beginnings. To think about Canada as it is now: free, prosperous, and with an unlimited future for growth.
To celebrate, magnificent projects are in the works. The Confederation Caravans will bring Canada to millions in rural and tiny out-of-the-way places. The Caravans unfold an exciting colourful story of Canada: from early beginnings right up to the present. Festival Canada brings Canadians the largest entertainment package ever: from western music to opera, musical comedy to drama. Two companies of 300 servicemen each will travel Canada to put on a magnificent stirring Military Tattoo, portraying Canada's past 300 years of military history!
These are just three of hundreds of Centennial events planned for you in the coming year. But what are you doing for Centennial? What is your own personal project? Other Canadians are painting their homes, flying the Canadian flag, planting Maple trees, hooking Centennial rugs, reading up on their Canadian history. What will you do? It's not important how large or how small your project may be. What is important is that you have stopped and thought enough of your country and what it means to you to take up a Centennial project of your own.
The Federal-Provincial events planned will be magnificent and thrilling. But to each of us, the truly exciting and most meaningful projects will be the ones we create ourselves.
What does Centennial mean to you? And what are you planning for Centennial?

James Gordon Honored On 88th Birthday

DAYSLAND — Mr. James Gordon of Stromo was honored on his 88th birthday with a family gathering in the new Dayaland Community Hall. Members of the family were present from Stromo, Dayland, Lougheed, Edmonton, Bashaw and Red Deer.

After a banquet prepared and served by the women-folk of the family, gifts were presented to the guest of honor by the oldest boy of each generation. A gift from his great grand-children was presented by Richard Johnson; from his grandchildren by Gordon Marlow, and from his wife and children by Alvin Gordon. His sister, Mrs. C. Campbell, also presented a gift.

After thanking everyone Mr. Gordon spoke briefly of the changes that have taken place in the sixty-two years since he came to the old homestead on which he still resides, and where he is still actively engaged in farming.

A musical program by the young people was enjoyed. The great grandchildren sang several songs; an orchestra with Marylynn Lorenson at the piano, Jens Solomon and Suzanne McCowien with accordians and Russell Johnson with an electric guitar, provided accompaniment for a sing-song.

How come we keep ahead in transportation?
Because we know just when to hit the road.
We're Canadian Pacific.
We started out in the railway business. It's still our main line, but we like to open up new roads for you.
Example: trucks
Our trucks roll over Canada's highways day and night, taking your goods where you want them to go.
Our highway refrigerator trailers keep fresh meats and frozen foods safe as in your own freezer.
And then there's Piggyback. That's where we transfer our truck trailers onto our special rail flatcars to make sure your goods go full speed ahead.
Which brings us back to our railway. It serves you across the country. But to keep ahead in co-ordinated transportation these days, you've got to keep moving.
You see, when it comes to shipping your goods, we want to prove roadworthy.
Canadian Pacific
Serving you in so many ways.

Weekly Devotion

(By Rev. Roy Kashal, Church of the Nazarene, Loughead)

TO WHOM DO YOU LOOK FOR A SENSE OF DIRECTION?

The individual is aware of a need of direction in every aspect of his life. He wants to know whether society's norms and customs should truly govern his moral life. He wonders if there is a difference between evil thoughts and thoughts of evil. He longs to understand if religion as such is what is meant as the worship of God, or is there something deeper and vaster?

He asks himself, "Does faith in Christ mean a mental assent to statements of belief? Can a man have beliefs yet have no faith?".

In his predicament and conscious of his need man turns around to seek answers. He looks within himself, but finds only discouragement and more, as he is aware of his inner depravity. He looks to science and discovers that his fears increase that change frequently fall desperately to console.

He looks to society and is appalled at the variety of mores and customs in the various cultures.

He visits the psychologist and leaves wondering why really was the psychologist also so mixed up.

He hopes religion can give the answer, but also discovers there all the life he himself is nothing to be free from.

To whom must man then turn for his sense of direction?

Even though he should respect the learning, the arts and the sciences, man's best bet is the Word of God, the Bible.

It is God breathed. It is eternal. It is adamant against its critics and foes. It has stood the test of the ages. Like an anvil it has broken many hammers. It will silence man's doubts, lighten his burdens, dispel his gloom, alleviate his suffering and mitigate his sorrows. It has the ability to soothe character, satisfy the soul, enrich the spirit, and bless the life. It will reprieve, rebuke, correct and instruct in turn, and will ever be faithful. It tells of Christ, the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

For his sense of direction man has no fear in trusting God in His Word. "To whom shall we go Thou hast the words of eternal life".—John 6:68.

Facts On Arthritis

Hundreds of new discoveries have been observed in bodies found in Nubian graves dating back to 4,000 B.C. This proves that inhabitants of ancient Egypt suffered from gout, tuberculosis of the spine, infectious arthritis and osteoarthritis.

Osteoarthritis attacks the joints of nearly everyone over 60, causing pain in 1 out of 30.

CUT GRAIN LOSSES!

Plans for the construction of Wind Baffle Boards that will fit the front of a truck box are available at the District Agriculturist's office now These simply constructed Baffle Boards will save many bushels of grain from blowing off the truck while travelling down our highways.

Tests have shown that a truck travelling 40 miles per hour on a calm day will lose five bushels of grain, or eleven bushels at 60 miles per hour. The Wind Baffle will allow a truck to travel 60 miles per hour on a calm day before any of the grain will blow off.

Stop in or write for your copy of the "Wind Baffle" now.

THE Homemaker

By Miss Irene Eby, Your District Home Economist

FURNITURE FACTS:

The Cushion — in high-priced traditional styles, may be goose down and feathers or it may be rubber foam, which is non-allergenic and resistant to moths, mildew and insects.

Urethane foam, which is similar to rubber foam, is less expensive and is not affected by spot-removing solvent When using a solvent it is wise to remove the cushion cover first. Foams are compatible with vinyl upholstery; fabric coverings don't slip around, so webbings remain straight along the cushion edges. The upholstery when placed on a urethane foam cushion sometimes forms "bubbles" after sitting on it, and needs to be smoothed out by hand, whereas the upholstery, when placed on a rubber foam cushion, will smooth out by itself Urethane foam is sometimes found as back and arm padding while more resilient rubber foam is used for the seat suchion.

The upholstery may well be the decisive factor in a purchase. Some stores are featuring furniture covered in muslin so that the consumer can select the fabric of their choice. The upholstery material may be woven fabric, vinyl plastic or leather

Fabrics are either flat or pile weaves Many-pile fabrics are filament nylon these days, since nylon offers strength, resistance to matting and ease of spot-cleaning Textured acetate is also used. Pile weaves are monotone in colouring with pattern limited to a sculptured effect with high or low, cut or uncut pile

Flat fabrics offer many variety: matelasses, damasks, brocades, prints, tapestries, textures The fibres used are rayon - cotton blends, nylon, acetate in blends & some acrylics. Leather is traditional for upholstery but expensive. It is durable if properly cared for

Vinyl has become popular because it is easily cleaned. They should have a fabric backing so they will not stretch out of shape Some vinyls are "breathable" in construction, so they are less apt to feel clammy in warm weather 'Expanded" vinyl with a thin layer of foam between the face and backing, gives extra comfort and wear Many vinyls simulate leather grains, as well they are embossed to resemble linen, straw, etc., or printed with a design. Remember that there are various grades of vinyl, just as there are of woven goods The less expensive grades may tear at corners or split at seams.

Always look for welts that are smooth and straight, for fabric patterns that are matched at seams and centered on back or cushions; borns or pleats that hang straight; reversable cushions to distribute wear. Cushions should fit snugly into seat corners and squarely against an adjoining cushion to avoid unsightly gaps. If the upholstery is loose, you will be constantly straightening the welts.

But, above all, is the chair, or chesterfield comfortable? Are the slant of the seat, its depth and height from the floor, in proportion to you? When you lean back, does the top of the back cut your neck at an awkward point? Don't hesitate to sit in chairs or chesterfields before you buy, long enough to be sure they are really comfortable.

The RED X Means TIME TO RENEW

1908 — FIFTY-EIGHTH YEAR — 1966 SEDGEWICK, ALBERTA, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17TH, 1966 Volume 57 — Number 27

LAYING OF WREATHS — As the snow starts to blow, visible against the dark blue sailor's uniform, the citizens of Lougheed and district placed their wreaths at the Cenotaph in memory of departed comrades.

Attendance Up At Nov. 11th Services

Attendance at Remembrance Day Services in the local towns was higher than in recent years, probably due mainly to slightly improved weather conditions.

On November 11th for the past few years the weather has been very chilly and this has been blamed for cutting attendance at Remembrance Day Services. This year, while it wasn't exactly warm, it was better than we have come to expect and as a result the attendance figures were up.

Services commenced at 10:30 A M., with a two minutes silence in memory of the war dead at 11:00, the time of day that peace was actually official.

Following the services at which appropriate messages were delivered by Chaplains and Ministers, there were short services at local Cenotaphs during which time the wreaths were laid by various individuals and groups in memory of fallen heroes.

Most fo the Legion and Auxiliaries held banquets for members and invited guests, and concluded the day's activities with socials, and public dances.

English Cattleman Likes Alta.

Mr. Richard Milner of Much Wenlock, Shropshire, England has been spending several days in Alberta & Saskatchewan, and was quite impressed with the "bigness" of the country. He admitted though that he was as he put it "bloody near" from to death.

Mr. Milner is a top breeder of Hereford cattle in England, running around 170 head of which 60 are cows. His main purpose in visiting Alberta is that he sold several head of his top stock at the recent Bhirne sale at Caster. He visited there for several days, as well as at points in Saskatchewan, and with Mr. and Mrs. Lenny Berg, Sedgewick, Hereford breeders in the local area.

In an interview with Mr. Milner we learned a bit about farming methods in England, which differ in many respects to the methods employed in Western Canada. Over there he farms 800 acres of land, which averages in price $1,000 per acre. On this land he runs 170 head of cattle, 1,000 sheep, and raises 600 acres of grain annually. To make this possible Mr. Milner said, some three hundredweight (336 lbs) of fertilizer per acre is used. The entire 800 acres is fertilized annually and there is no such thing as summerfallow as we know it here. "Land is too expensive to let it lie fallow" said Mr. Milner. He intimated that he is looking around with the possibility of purchasing some land here in Western Canada.

He leaves this weekend for San Francisco, California, where he has sold a top bull, and from there will return to England.

Asked about crop averages in England, Mr. Milner informed us that he raises two tons of wheat to the acre, which in English ton weight is about 70 bushels.

Former Lougheed Boy Tops M.J. Poll

Recent civic elections in Monse Jaw saw incumbent Mayor Lowry sweep back into office. Locally perhaps nobody has heard of Mayor Lowry, but what is interesting about the election is that a former Lougheed boy, John Stoberg, running for re-election, topped the Aldermanic poll. Running on the CRA ticket, along with Mayor Lowry. John took the strongest lead in the race, after completing an election campaign which he himself says, "at times contained strong words, and even at times personal attacks".

Alderman Stoberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stoberg who reside just East of Lougheed, and will be remembered by many as the boy who for years rode his horse to school in Lougheed.

"Independent, But Not Necessarily Neutral, In The Public Service"

The Strike Menace!

With Canada facing another possible costly strike of postal workers on a national scale, it is time that severe action was taken to protect the public which must rely on public services. For the future welfare it is important that some necessary action be taken now. The public Service of Canada Committee, which is currently studying the proposed Act respecting collective bargaining in the public service (Bill C-170) had better come up with concrete and indeed forceful means of seeing that the public is protected. Strikes involving employees of the public service should be prohibited. It will have to be done eventually and it may as well be right now. Bargaining issues should be settled by recourse to arbitration or some form of binding settlement. The business of the public has become also involved and dependent on services to be disrupted at the whim of union leaders or their members. Work stoppages of this nature not only cause no end of inconvenience, but in many cases hardships to Canadian citizens, and we should not have to continually contend with such threats. The cost to business and to the public in dollars and cents is incalculable in such strikes. The only sure result is that the ultimate settlement will not favor the Canadian taxpayer.

Prairie Life Inferior!

"Rural life on the Prairies means inferior housing, lack of public services and economic stagnation," says Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation. We can forgive them in making such treasonable statements, for after all they were mainly talking about Saskatchewan, a province most definitely inferior to Alberta. The Corporation is probably correct in saying that housing in rural areas is inferior to that lived in by urban dwellers, but the statement should be couched in careful language and uttered with reservations, for we can show them rural life has the most likely superior to the ones they themselves live in; homes ranging into the $40,000 class. The lack of public services is of course an item that cannot be helped, although few farms today are without electric power and the conveniences it brings, such as sewage, central heating and the modern accessories. Economic stagnation in rural areas is certainly a fallacy for the most part at least in Alberta, and should be in Saskatchewan presently where the biggest crops in history have been harvested. We have an idea that, like most surveys and studies, most of the work on this one was done from swivel chairs.

The really disturbing part of the survey though is the population decrease, with Saskatchewan having lost almost a million and a half people from 1921 to 1961. A result of this could certainly mean, as the survey says, the death knell of some of the small rural centres. Out of this million and a half people however which the survey says left, only 150,000 left the prairies entirely which indicates that a good many of them saw the error of their ways and moved to Alberta, where a steady population growth has been recorded for some years.

In spite of the lamenting that came out of the survey, we for one would not trade our life on the range for all the city life on earth, where slum areas beat anything in the country. We may be a bit backward by some standards, but we're a friendly sort, and not so backward that city slickers can take very many of us for a ride. No, we would not trade our country life for that of the city; we'll live out our span right here and enjoy life according to God's plan.

Our Brother's Keeper!

The fact that we are, to some extent at least, our brothers' keepers has always been a part of human thinking. True, practiced by some to a greater extent than others, but it has been and still is a basic philosophy of life. Up until comparatively recent years though this activity has been confined more to the local areas, or at least confined to "home". But with the advances in communication and our closeness to humans of other parts of the world, this act of philanthropy has become world-wide. This was illustrated this past week in releases from the External Affairs office down in Ottawa, and indicates that the have nations are assuming more of the responsibility for the development of the have-not nations. This is not only charitable which should be the first consideration but is also good business.

Secretary of State, Paul Martin and the High Commissioner for Guyana have signed a loan agreement making $1,800,000 of Canadian funds available for the mapping of that country. This is part of an international effort to assist Guyana's economic development. Canada is also sending $1,000,000 worth of wheat and flour to Algeria to relieve the food shortage there caused by severe drought. In addition Canada is giving civilian pilot training to Algerian trainees. Mr. Martin announced that Canada will provide relief supplies for victims of the recent earthquake in Peru where 7000 families were left homeless. Canada has also pledged assistance to Zambia by providing a half million dollars for storage tanks, besides $300,000 in co-operation with Britain for railway links to the sea, plus providing and supporting planes to the value of $1,000,250 for an air lift. This on top of bringing 24 students to Canada for education, and sending Canadian teachers and advisers to Zambia. Assistance is also being provided for the recent disaster in Wales.

—Forty-Eighth Year of Service—

— by A.C.E.

The weather co-operated in a half-hearted way on Remembrance Day. At least it wasn't as miserable as in recent years. I attended the service in Lougheed this year, and it was very well done just as it is in all our towns. One thing I noticed particularly was that there were 3 Veterans in full uniform, representing the three services, and I couldn't help wondering just how many veterans can still get into their old uniform. My thanks to the Lougheed Legion, Kinross Branch No. 180 for the invitation to their Nov. 11th banquet.

While the Canadian people were observing Remembrance Day, the air waves were filled with the childish antics of our MPs parliamentarians (??) when we are paying some $20,000 per year ,supposedly to represent the best interests of the nation. And what do they do? They waste our time and resources in petty political wrangling, and childish behavior that would not be tolerated at any meeting of a service organization. This is continually blamed on the party leaders, but let's face it, if even a few of the Mr. H. Pa. of Ottawa had any backbone their leaders wouldn't be able to continue in this way. Having been in the past few years, Canada is past due for some changes; 305 of them.

LEAD THE WAY, PLEASE

Speaking to a group of weekly newspaper editors last week in Calgary, the Hon. A. J. Hooke minister of municipal affairs for the province of Alberta warned that the citizens must stop asking government for help and strive to achieve goals on their own.

Mr. Hooke suggested that when the people ask governments for assistance, they are simply giving more power to governments. Eventually it is a speaker concluded, a government which gains such power could conceivably become so strong as to take away that which it has given. The result: the end of a democratic society.

We can perhaps agree with the minister, but surley the governments and various parties are as guilty as any. Not an election goes by — whether it be civic, provincial or national —that we are not told of some grand plan to save the people from misery. Or we hear how we are going to get something else (and usually for nothing); this is nothing more than irresponsibility and nonsense on the part of the politicians. No one gets something for nothing.

It is not our intention to point the finger at Mr Hooke individually, but we do point, collectively, at politicians who would attempt to woo the electorate with promises of "gifts".

It was interesting that another of the speakers, Mr Murray Stewart, president of Canadian Western Natural Gas Co. and Northwestern Utilities Ltd., said that nothing made him more angry than to be told by governments that they are going to give us something, when in fact they are using our own money.

We would agree with the provincial minister that often governments are asked for help that is ill-deserving. He suggested that oil and other natural resource revenues will not continue forever, and the people will have to be prepared to shoulder the load. If this is so, then it is doubly urgent that every nickel the government spends should be spent with an eye to the future of the provinces and not of the next election.

And Marchand wants power, not for personal use, not for political use, but because he knows that the problems of Canadian Federalism can be solved only by those who have the power to do it.

What brought Marchand into Federal politics was his basic belief that Quebec's future lies within Confederation. He was, and is dismayed at the trend of Quebec leaders like Jean Lesage ad Daniel Johnson towards associate status or quasi-independence for Quebec. Marchand is a realist and a pragmatist. He doesn't believe in fairy tales. He doesn't believe that some grand, constitutional conference can sit down, remake the constitution, and solve all the problems of French and English, Ottawa and the provinces, farm and city.

He sees the major problems of Canada, including the problem of Quebec's relations with the rest of Canada, as primarily economic and social problems.

His role as Manpower Minister, as he conceives it, can help overcome those problems by upgrading the labour force and providing equality of opportunity for all Canadians no matter where they live.

This is a practical, long-term job. But like all other Government activity, it must have a sound constitutional base.

One of Marchand's biggest tasks in Ottawa, and probably the most significant one for all of Canada, has been to help develop a modern constitutional interpretation of Federal role.

He has worked closely in this with the Prime Minister, and with Finance Minister Sharp, as well as with other ministers and members.

The fruits of this effort were on display at the recent Federal-Provincial conference in Ottawa, where the Federal Government seized the initiative and successfully expounded its wider constitutional claims.

The new Federal approach involves the withdrawal of Ottawa from fields of exclusive provincial jurisdiction. But it also involves a claim for Federal responsibility in research, culture, and other activities.

These are all areas which Quebec has claimed for its own, and to which, almost by default, it was gaining complete title.

But the Pearson-Marchand-Sharp philosophy begins with a declaration of Federal responsibility for general economic matters, for employment, growth, for providing equal opportunities to all Canadians.

Under this umbrella the Federal Government can, and has, taken full responsibility for training and retraining adult workers for a modern labour force.

Another aspect of the new Ottawa approach is that it is seeking constitutional interpretations which will give it powers on an equal basis, which permit both levels of Government to exercise their full responsibilities, and which will prevent the isolation of Quebec.

The first step has been taken. It hasn't been universally acceptable to all the provinces, of course. But at last the Federal authority has taken a constitutional position and seems prepared to defend it.

Quebec Premier Johnson, who claims that Premier Stanfield don't really speak for Quebec, says the Marchanda and Sauvet and Pepin would be wiped out if they fought an election on Federalism in Quebec.

But Jean Marchand doesn't think so. He says he's as good a Quebecer as Johnson is. And he, along with others, has accepted Johnson's challenge. They're moving in to Quebec now, defending Canadian Federalism, speaking for Canada as well as Quebec. The whole Federal Cabinet is united behind this effort. Marchand and his supporters are strong and respected spokesmen for Quebec at Ottawa, and for Federalism in Quebec.

That is just about the most encouraging thing that has happened in Canada for quite a few years.

"EARTH IT SEEMS, IS POPULATED WITH LITTLE GREEN MEN ."

A Star Is Born!

OTTAWA — Political astronomers have observed a new star in the Ottawa firmament. Jean Marchand, former head of the militant Quebec Labour Federation, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, has been a Federal Cabinet Minister for less than a year. But he shines already with a brilliance that dims the lustre not only of all other Quebec members of Parliament, but of most cabinet ministers as well.

Marchand is Minister of Manpower and Immigration, a portfolio he is rapidly building into one of the key economic jobs in the Cabinet. He is also interim leader of the Quebec Liberals during Guy Favreau's illness. But even if Guy Favreau were to return, Jean Marchand would remain the strongest and most respected voice of French Canada.

The unusual thing about Marchand, is that he is not simply someone's strong Quebec Lieutenant, he is a genuine power in the Cabinet on all national issues. He did not come to Ottawa to see what Ottawa could do for Quebec. He came to see what Ottawa could do for all Canadians, Quebec included.

It is probably much too early to begin thinking of Jean Marchand as a possible successor to Prime Minister Pearson, but not a few people are thinking of it.

Anyone who has watched the man operate in the past year knows he has been observing a superior type of individual.

Marchand is short, with a ready grin & an unruly shock of brown hair. He is also fearless, a powerful orator, but invariably frank and courteous with the Opposition. This perhaps accounts as much as anything for his success in the House of Commons, even though he arrived there as green and unprepared as any political novice.

Marchand's spectacular rise to a position of power in Federal politics was not, of course, unexpected.

When the Liberals persuaded him to run for them in 1965, along with editor Gerard Pelletier and Professor Pepin, they knew they had scored a great coup. They knew also however, that these three wise men, as John Diefenbaker called them, would not be docile and conventional members of Parliament.

All three were probably closer to the New Democratic Party than they were to the Liberals. But Marchand went Liberal, and left behind Tommy Douglas, because the Liberals were in power.

And Marchand wants power, not for personal use, not for political use, but because he knows that the problems of Canadian Federalism can be solved only by those who have the power to do it.

What brought Marchand into Federal politics was his basic belief that Quebec's future lies within Confederation. He was, and is dismayed at the trend of Quebec leaders like Jean Lesage ad Daniel Johnson towards associate status or quasi-independence for Quebec. Marchand is a realist and a pragmatist. Centennial Report

by JOHN W. FISHER
CENTENNIAL COMMISSIONER

Aviation has made a great contribution to Canada's development & I am still hoping, at this date, that there will be suitable recognition of that fact in next year's Centennial celebrations.

I am referring to civil aviation and, in particular, the bush flying era of the twenties and thirties. In those days of northern development when aeroplanes were still relatively flimsy things, more freight was moved through our north country than anywhere else in the world & the courage figures rivalled those of the Suez Canal.

The bush pilots who flew by the "seats of their pants" without modern navigation aids have stamped their names in Canadian history and have left colorful legends known to many all over the world. Wop May, Whitey Dahl, Sandy MacKenzie, Grant McConachie, J. H. Tudhope, J. Romeo Vachon, Punch Dickins — these are but a few which come to mind. Some have taken the last flight beyond the cirrus clouds, others are still around.

Bush flying, the two world wars and imaginative, daring and courageous men gave Canada its aviation heritage. Canada also received the world's recognition for being an important aviation country when the headquarters of the international Civil Aviation Organization were established at Montreal. Many Canadians don't realize that delegates from more than 110 countries are based at Montreal to set and maintain standards, procedures and recommended practices for civil aviation throughout the world. (An associated agency of the United Nations, the international Civil Aviation Organization is the only UN body based in Canada).

Canadian military aviation will receive recognition next year in the various air shows, with vintage and modern aircraft, and fly - past which are to be held along with events such as the Armed Forces' Military Tattoo and other spectaculars. The first international free balloon race in Canada also will be a big feature of the air displays during the summer of 1967 and the Centennial International Abbotsford Air Show, at Abbotsford, B.C., will be held August 11, 12, and 13, 1967.

The National Air Museum at Ottawa has been developed into one of the best of its kind in the world and it, with its collection of new planes from World War I to today, is a tribute to military, civil aviation. (I am pleased that recent acquisitions of vintage aircraft and plans for more are making the foundations for a historical bush flying collection at Ottawa.)

I still have hopes that non-govern ment organizations or associations will spark interest in further events to recognize general aviation next year.

A handicap air-race for vintage aircraft and displays from the 30's and 40's could be organized by aviation historical associations and flying clubs working together. I'm sure it's not too late and a meet or race would attract many Canadians by road and by air. These aviation enthusiasts in the United States and other countries who recently have developed a keen interest in restoration of old and aviation historical interest also would attend in great numbers, I'm sure

Strong Competition In World Wheat Market

WINNIPEG— R. L. Kristjanson, Commissioner of The Canadian Wheat Board, says that Canada in the 1966-67 crop year will be faced with strong competition in the world's import wheat markets. Mr Kristjanson was addressing 324 delegates at the United Grain Growers 60th Annual Meeting in Winnipeg at the Royal Alexandra Hotel.

"World wheat production in 1966-67 is estimated at 9.5 billion bushels — a new record," he said. "A high level of production is indicated for the major exporting countries of Argentina, Australia, the United States and Russia Yields in western and eastern European countries are above average. In Asia the wheat crop is higher than the 1960 - 64 average Africa is the one continent where the 1966 wheat production is generally unfavourable.

Mr Kristjanson stated that this year Canada produced a very high quality crop, over 80% of which is expected to grade No 2 Northern or higher "The may cause some problems in selling," he said. "While it is to the farmers' advantage to produce a high grade of wheat, some of our customers prefer to have lower grades at lower prices."

However, Mr. Kristjanson indicated that while Canada will have only a very limited quantity of the lower grades of wheat to offer this year, there are some very bright aspects of Canada's sales outlook for this crop year. Including:

- Firm contracts with China and the U. S. S. R.
- Other Eastern Bloc countries will import wheat under terms of their existing agreements with Canada.
- Japan has booked her Canadian wheat requirements for 1966-67 and will import a record quantity.
- Wheat sales to Canada's other major traditional customers are well advanced.

"This does not mean that Canadian Wheat Board will be able to dispose of all the record crop that Canada produced this year," Mr Kristjanson said. However he feels confident that Canada will do well in maintaining her share of the commercial trade in the world's wheat markets.

Mr. Kristjanson was optimistic that a satisfactory international grains arrangement will be reached. "Progress under the Kennedy Round of GATT has been slow," he said. "If, however, momentum is not sustained, then steps will have to be taken to convene a conference for re-negotiating the International Wheat Agreement."

Calvin had been sent out to look for his brothers and sisters. He thought they might be down by Beatberry Creek. As he was walking along the creek he suddenly spotted little 23-month old Jacqueline Bateman. She was completely submerged in the water — caught under a board. With great presence of mind and no thought for his own safety, 13-year old Calvin plunged into the creek. After freeing Jacqueline and making sure she was breathing normally he rushed her back to her home. As Mrs. Bateman says, "What can you say? Thank you' doesn't seem enough." Calvin's courage and quick action undoubtedly saved the little girl's life.

PAST PACTS ABOUT POTATOES

Potatoes are one of our least expensive foods and can be a boon to the family budget

When properly cooked, potatoes contribute significant amounts of Vitamin C and minerals to the diet. For best flavour and food value they should be cooked in their jackets.

One daily serving of potatoes is recommended in Canada's Food Guide.

Potatoes are not high in calories when compared to other foods and should not be considered fattening. One boiled, medium potato contains only 100 calories. It is the added butter, gravies or sauces that increase the calorie content considerably.

Potatoes can be served frequently in meals without monotony. They have a mild flavour and combine well with other foods. In many areas they are eaten for breakfast, dinner and supper.

Canadians eat about 138 pounds of potatoes per person each year. About 30 pounds of this amount is consumed as processed potatoes (chips, frozen french fries, etc.)

Potatoes should be handled carefully during shipping and storage to prevent bruising, damage and decay.

Potatoes are best stored in a cool, well-ventilated dark place at around 45 degrees.

Potatoes turn green when exposed to light. If packed in transparent bags they should be covered with paper or stored in a dark place to prevent greening.

Canada No. 1 is the grade most generally available.

Potatoes are now grown in most of the occupied parts of North America The principal potato areas lie within a few hundred miles on either side of the Canada-United States border.

Potato varieties respond differently to the location in which they are grown. For example, in Western Canada, the Netted Gem and Red Pontiac are considered top quality varieties while in Eastern Canada and the Atlantic Provinces Kennebec, Keswick and Sebago are highly rated.

Varieties which have a high dry matter content are mostly in mature when cooked and generally produce the best bakers The 'Idaho potato' which for many years has been praised as an excellent baker, can be grown right here in Canada It is sold under the variety name of Netted Gem.

Potatoes served at home are most often simply boiled, and mashed, baked or fried; but when you eat out in better class restaurants you may notice that potatoes are often served under the glamorous names of "duchess", "hyonnaise", "oisiette", etc. Perhaps there is room for a little ingenuity on our part to dress up this "plain Jane" of the vegetable world in our every day meals. There are innumerable ways of serving potatoes. The Canada Department of Agriculture booklet No 1058 - "Potatoes" gives over fifty ways of using them. The booklet is available free of charge from me at the Department of Agriculture, 114 Provincial Building, 4967 - 50th Street, Camrose, Alta.

We don't remember how far that unidentified Rams ball carrier got on this play, but neither the referee or the little girl got trampled.

Local Men Attend Regina Convention

Dr. Karl Hollefeld of Saskatoon was installed as president of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada in a festival service Nov. 8, celebrating the birth of the first autonomous Lutheran Church body in Canada The service highlighted the constituting convention of the new church held in Regina, Nov 7, 8 and 9 Dr. Hollefeld has served since 1961 as president of the Canada District of the American Lutheran Church, which on January 1st 1967 becomes the ELCC who protects the rights of Alberta's working girls . . . and men?

Have you ever wondered...

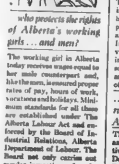
The working girl in Alberta today receives wages equal to her male counterpart and, like the men, is assured proper ratios of pay, hours of work, vacations and holidays. Minimum standards for all these are established under The Alberta Labour Act and enforced by the Board of Industrial Relations, Alberta Department of Labour. The Board not only carries out regular inspections of working conditions and investigates complaints but also protects the new employee by providing him with full information as to the regulations when he establishes a business. In addition, the Board of Industrial Relations provides conciliation officers from its staff when labour disputes reach an impasse and the parties involved request assistance. The record shows that 68 per cent of the disputes handled by these officers have reached successful conclusions.

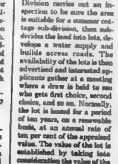


. . . what northern Alberta has to offer you?

Whatever your reason for considering this northern area of the Province, as a place to live, a location in which to open a business, or a good investment prospect, the Northern Alberta Development Council is the agency to ask for information. If they don't have the answers to your questions, they know where they can be obtained. This is the clearing house for intelligence on northern Alberta, collected from all departments of government on all phases of life in the north. In addition, the Council advises both government and industry on economic and social development in that area of Alberta lying north of the 56th parallel.

. . . who brings power to rural residents of Alberta?

The residents de - with the assistance of the Co-operatives Branch of the Alberta Department of Industry and Development. This Branch supervises the Revolving Loan Fund, which is available to Rural Electrification Associations for financing their projects. These are formed by any group of ten or more farmers who can prove that electrification of their area is feasible, practical, and acceptable to the residents. Once this has been established, the R.E.A. can borrow all but $100 of the cost of each installation. So far, over $61 million has been borrowed by such associations to light up rural Alberta.



. . . how you can help develop a summer resort area in Alberta?

Write a letter to the Lands Division, Alberta Department of Lands and Forests and tell them about the area in which you'd like to acquire a lot. If enough requests are received, the Lands Division carries out an inspection to be sure the area is suitable for a summer cottage sub-division, then subdivides the land into lots, develops a water supply and builds access roads. The availability of the lots is then advertised and interested applicants gather at a meeting where a draw is held to see who gets first choice, second choice, and so on. Normally, the lot is leased for a period of ten years, on a renewable basis, at an annual rate of ten per cent of the appraised value. The value of the lot is established by taking into consideration the value of the land plus the cost of developments. The lessee must pay taxes on the leased site as well. Once the land is improved by the construction of a cottage, which must be completed to approved plans within two years, the owner may then purchase it outright except in certain forestry areas of the Province where cottage sites are leased only.

. . . who does the flying under Alberta medical services?

In Australia, they have flying doctors. In Alberta, we have flying patients. Any resident of an outlying area of the Province who has to be moved by air to a larger centre in order to receive the medical or surgical care he needs will be flown out by the Emergency Air Ambulance Service of the Alberta Department of Public Health. Doctors fly, too, on occasion. When the situation is urgent and the patient can't be moved, a specialist will be flown in. Another use of the Emergency Air Ambulance Service is fast transportation of blood for transfusion. In any case, the tab for transportation by this service is picked up by the Provincial government.

. . . what you're supposed to do if you discover a cave-in!

Chances are that the cave-in has occurred at the site of one of the more than 1,700 abandoned coal mines in the Province, so your best move is to call the Mines Division of the Alberta Department of Mines and Minerals. Inspectors from the Division keep a very careful eye on all these locations, checking regularly to see that there are no openings which would present a hazard to the general public. If a cave-in is discovered, it is filled in and closely watched until all signs of settling have disappeared. Safety conditions at the 50 active coal mines in the Province are also the responsibility of the Mines Division and major sub-surface operating mines are checked once a month, smaller underground operations three or four times a year, and strip mines every two or three months.

Ex-Lougheed Reporter Writes From Calgary

The Community Press received a letter this past week from Mrs. "Phil" McClure (nee Rogers) who has been visiting her parents at Calgary. We are indeed sorry to report that Phil says her father "Fred" suffered a severe heart attack on October 28th, and his condition up to November 3rd was considered very serious. Fred seems to have rallied a bit since then but is not out of danger by any means.

Mrs. McClure flew out from Powell River, B.C. with her daughter Mrs. Arlis Foort, and her sister Mrs Joyce Hord came out from Vancouver. Fred will be in the General Hospital for some time yet. As a former reporter for Lougheed, Fred's column "Through The Window" will be remembered by many for its homey and newsy wit. Phil is another former Community Press reporter and both would be pleased to hear from old friends here. Fred's home address is: 127 Bow Valley Lodge, Memorial Drive, Calgary.

Autopsy May Help Solve Death Riddle

An autopsy was to be held to assist doctors in determining the cause of death of a provincial brand inspector

Donald J Fairfield, 39, of 9810 - 39th Ave., well known throughout Alberta as a rider in rodeo competitions, died Tuesday after a two-week confinement in hospital.

The man's illness remains a mystery He had complained of severe headaches prior to being admitted to hospital Relatives said he suffered an injury this year in a fall from a horse but it was not considered serious Also being investigated is the possibility he contracted encephalitis, sleeping sickness, from animals at rural rodeos or during his work as brand inspector.

It may take two weeks to fully assess findings from the autopsy.

Mr. Fairfield was born in Edmonton and spent most of his youth in the Hardisty district. He returned to Edmonton in his late teens and forthe past five years has been a brand inspector with the provincial government.

Survivors include his wife Shirley; two daughters: Jodi and Christine, both at home; his parents Mr. David Fairfield of Edmonton, Mrs. Mar Jorie Alderdice of Gonn; two brothers John of Edmonton, Gerald of Gunn, and eight sisters; also grandparents Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Martin of Edmonton.

The funeral was held Saturday at Holy Trinity Anglican Church. Canon Leadbeater officiating, and burial in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. —Edmonton Journal.

Hospital Auxiliary

STROME — The Strome Hospital Auxiliary held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Butler, on Friday evening with 13 members present. The usual reports were given and approved. The president thanked the ladies who had helped with the masquerade dance. Treas. report showed only a few dollars had been made. Members felt lack of advertising was the reason for such a poor attendance, and it was suggested that running an Ad in the local paper would be a better way of advertising than with posters.

Sick convenor reported cards and magazines had been sent to Mrs. D. Hayes and Anna Kreba while in hospital. Final plans were made for the annual bazaar, tea, white elephant and bake sale.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Mel Frankier. As it is the annual meeting the president asked that all reports be ready for presentation. It will also be a Christmas party with an exchange of gifts, cast not to exceed $1.00. Members may invite a friend.

Three members were appointed to serve the lunch as a larger attendance is expected, and a more festive lunch will be served. It was also decided to buy candy as an extra treat. Attendance prize was won by Mrs. K. May. Following adjournment lunch was served by hostess, assisted by Mrs Mel Orr

Bill Matthews Writes From Gambia, Africa

October 20th — Well it is nearly the end of another month, the rains have started, and we have slowed down But it should not last long, so December is the hot month here.

Our first Gorillas have shown up although I have not seen one as yet. One came out on the right-of-way and the welders saw him but had no camera. Another female with a young one surprised one of the native help. He had sneaked off to have a sleep and she came up and sniffed him! He jumped and ran, and the Gorilla, apparently just as shocked, let out a roar which we all heard, and went the other way. He was very lucky; she could just as easily have grabbed him Needless to say he sticks very close to the work now. Those native people don't mind Leopards, Elephant or Buffalo, but the great Apes scare them silly. Probably the close relationship. I'll get a picture of one if I have to track him down.

Our camp is certainly getting international. We have American pipeliners, English engineers, Dutch welders, French drivers, and one Canadian operator. We had some Norwegians on tugs but enroute from Port Harcourt they sank in 300 feet of water. No lives lost, but a lot of equipment is on the bottom forever. These are very treacherous waters.

We are in what is known as the doldrums, but there is always a heavy ground swell and heavy surf, and the water is surprisingly cold. To dive at all you have to go deep or not at all. I have been down to sixty feet.

We have a Frenchman here who has been down 300, but he used a special nitrogen charged air mixture.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

WHERE'S THAT 25th HOUR?

This week, I have a lot of things on my mind, but none of them is worthy of the brilliant, penetrating essay in which you wrap your garbage

Therefore, the column will be something of an Irish stew. Or a Hungarian ragout. Or better still, a French pot-pourri. Speaking of which, congratulations to all my Dogan friends. They can now eat meat on Friday. And destroy the market for fish. And miss all those wonderful food values in fish and turn into meat-stuffed, red-faced birds like us Protestants.

Speaking of which, one of our churches had a "fish" service last Sunday. The occasion was a confirmation in town of Our Christ on boys. We biketed two of them. For Kim's sake, I ordered, from the billeting chairman, two at-last, handsome chaps with rich fathers.

What we got were, well, two boys. A short, stocky, cocky one; and a long skinny, shy one. Neither was handsome. Neither had a wealthy father.

But the service Sunday was fantastic. You should have seen the look on the tiny-headed elders as they beheld not, "Go Tell It On The Mountain," with the electric guitars whanging away. The other accompaniment, a sort of dull rumble, was the boons of Calvin, Martin Luther and John Wesley, twirling in their graves.

And the red-headed kid, darting from organ preludo to choir loft to electric guitar, back to organ for the offering, back to choir, back to guitar, was our baby, busier than the proverbial one-armed paperhanger.

Speaking of church reminds me that I'm supposed to be the guest preacher at our church this Sunday. It's Layman's Sunday. Very inspiring. All the laymen get up & bellow hymns off-key. Those who can't even sing off-key read the scripture. And whatever is left over preaches the sermon.

Haven't quite chosen my text yet, but there are still several days to go, and I've narrowed it down to three or four. My first idea was, "Frailty, Thy name is Women." Then I decided that "Something is Rotten in the State of Denmark" might be safer. By the way, there are from 5'- 9"ths, I hope.

There's always the old standard, of course, "The Demon Rum." But I don't think I could stand the mockers. And my brother brought me a jug of Newfoundland "screech" recently, from the Kingdom of Joey.

Perhaps I'll settle for the theme, "The Hour Hour-ality." If only I can find out, before Sunday morning, what it is, I'll be in business. As soon as I can discover, it's doing whatever you want, and getting away with it.

Speaking of which, I feel both wicked and guilty, because I don't answer letters. Here's part of one from a wealthy older bachelor asking for defending today's kids.

He says, "Give me one of the depression kids, with a Grade Eight collection of myths, fables, a few facts, a smattering of the three R's and the seat out of his pants. The last is most important. The kid would be dangerous for a job and would learn more spelling and grammar in three months from an old camp boss than your graduate system learns in the years six to 16."

Mrs. C. Braham, of Bruderheim, Alta., writes telling me what to do about my refrigerator that stank when the power was turned off and the meat went rotten. Thank you, dear lady, but your're almost as lousy a correspondent as I. Your letter is dated August 10. I received it this week.

And how do you like this chap from a publishing house asking when I'm going to write a book? All I can say is that if he wants to take over for a week, I'll produce a book. All he has to do is: write a column, a sermon and a letter to the town council from the library board; try to keep my wife from going around the bend; help my daughter with her "weak" subjects: Latin, French, Math. Science, Geography; read and criticize 89 essays; set two exams; rake the leaves that have fallen from 16 trees; throw into the cellar a pile of fire-wood that's been resting in the rain for two weeks; answer all my letters; prepare lesson plans & teach all day; drive my daughter 300 miles for a music lesson on Saturday; and help with the dishes.

I'm game if he is. A book would be child's play.

IMPORTANCE OF KERNEL DAMAGE

Sound Canadian wheat and barley attracts both domestic and foreign buyers. Keeping kernel damage to a minimum will help maintain market preference for these grains and may mean increased income for those who produce, store or market them.

Types of Damage. The major types of kernel damage that lower grades are: (a) sprout damage, immature or green kernels in wheat and skinned and broken kernels in barley; and (b) frosted and sprout-damaged kernels, and severe weather wring. The types of kernel damage that occur after harvest include the following: (a) germ damage, heat damage, mold, marvel or insect damage; and (b) contamination by seed treatment chemicals, rodent, bird, or insect excreta, or other undesirable substances. Common and durum wheat containing damaged kernels makes inferior flour and semolina, and therefore commands a lower price per bushel than a sound grain. Malting barley containing even small amounts of damaged kernels makes inferior malt and thus commands a lower price than sound barley. Obviously then, every care should be taken in harvesting, storing and handling wheat, barley, as well as other grains, so that kernel damage is kept to the yowest possible level.

Prevent Storage Losses. High moisture content is the chief factor that results in germ, heat, and mold damage caused by storage fungi Usually when such damage occurs it means that the moisture content is above 13%. Such high moisture grain should be "turned" or cleaned and reblanned as soon as possible to reduce its moisture content and to lower its temperature. Watch your stored grain closely Grain in the bin is like money in a vault. Don't let insects, mites, molds, or other grain pests eat away your grain — and your income.

District Agriculturalist

Considerable interest has been indicated in the new varieties of grains The following gives some of the highlights of the more promising ones

MANITOU WHEAT has been tested now for over three years by the Research Stations. It is similar to Thatcher but incorporates two extra genes for stem rust resistance and one gene for adult plant leaf rust resistance.

Manitou is particularly suited to areas of the province where rust is a hazard. Under Alberta conditions Manitou has ranged from one to five days later maturing and equal in yield to Thatcher. Manitou performs best on brown & black soils

PARK WHEAT is a potential replacement for Selkirk wheat that is grown primarily in the black soil zone o fthe province It is as early as Saunders and has consistently out-yielded it. Park is similar to Thatcher and Saunders for disease resistance. Reports from the Sedgewick District have been quite favorable for the growing of Park Wheat. Park bleaches less than Thatcher

CANTHATCH wheat is similar in all respects except that it is more resistant to stem rust. This can be a definite advantage in the areas where rust appears.

CONQUEST BARLEY is a six-rowed, smooth awned variety eligible for CW grades. It has excellent straw strength and is resistant to loose smut and stem rust. It is slightly earlier than Parkland Barley. Conquest Barley has yielded 4 to 5 percent more than Parkland in the black soils of Alberta, but less than Husky or Jubilee (Pend Reboyo).

HARMON OATS is similar to Rodney in appearance and maturity. It yields about equal to Victory but has a stronger straw. Improved disease resistance is one of its big features. Information would indicate only limited use of Harmon Oats in Alberta.

M.D. Council Advances Date Of Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the council of the M. D Flagstaff held in advance of its regular date due to the School Trustee and M.D. Conventions being held during that time, was held in the board room at Sedgewick on Friday, November 4th with all councillors and the secretary-treasurer present.

After some discussion with shop foreman Mr. Whitehead regarding type of chimneys for the motor grader sheds, it was decided that the foreman proceed to have constructed brick chimneys constructed as each o fthe new grader sheds.

Mr. C. Weir, engineer for the Rural Road Study No. 13 (a which the M D. is a member, met with the council and explained the proposals for the secondary road system as outlined in their letter of Oct. 31st. Maps of the area on which was plotted the proposed secondary road system were given over in detail as it affected the M.D.. Mr. Weir advised that the study area group of which the County of Camrose was a member, had not approved the construction of the proposed road along the CMRR from Alliance to Bawlf, and so that portion of the road from Heisler to the right-of-way had been deleted and the road from Heisler to Daysland had been added.

Coun. Bussey advised council that in his opinion and that of many people the road along the CMRRW should be deleted entirely as it was serving no useful purpose. In its stead he would rather see the following roads added: From Forestburg to highway 36; road from Galahad north to its junction with the road east from Forestburg.; from west through 17-45-13 and that the Department be requested to construct the bridge near foot wider then the previous bridge. A rep of the Bridge Dept. will be requested to meet with councillor Lien and Reeve Matthews to inspect the bridge at that location.

Orville Likness, road gravel foreman met with council to discuss the proposed Winter Works program. It was agreed that the programme should start as soon as possible and by November 14 at the latest.

A discussion took place regarding the amount of the minimum Medical Plan, which in past years had been set at $32.00 .It was moved and passed that the minimum tax for ratepayers and contract holders under the M. D. Medical Scheme be $27.00 for 1967.

Wm. Lewis, gravel crushing foreman met with council to discuss the crushing operations, and some repairs needed for the rolls. He also requested direction for the use of the cook house during the winter works program.

By-law No. 372, authorizing the purchase of all that portion of the original road allowance 66 feet in width lying west and adjoining the S.W. quarter of 7-43-7 and south of road plan 46726 from the C. P. R. for the sum of $43.73 cash, for the purpose of constructing a road, was presented, was given three reading and duly passed.

By-law No. 373, authorizing the purchase of a 30 acre parcel more or less our of the S. W. 35-39-15 for the gravel deposits thereon for the sum of $15,000 was presented, given on three readings and duly passed.

By-law No. 374, authorizing the purchase of a half acre parcel of land out of Block Q lathe S.E. Quarter of 15-45-13 for the sum of $300 per acre for the purpose of erecting a motor grader shed and any other building deemed necessary for the operation of a motor grader in the Alliance East and Alliance West area of the M. D., was presented, given three readings and passed.

By-law 375 authorizing the erection of a motor grader shed by Parkland Lumber for the sum of $2318.00 on a half acre parcel in Block Q in the S.E. 15-45-13 was presented, given three readings and passed by council.

By-law 376 being a by-law to amend by-law 366 by adding to section 5 and 7 various intersections at which the vehicles must yield the right-of-way and authorizing erection of yield signs at the intersections so designated, was presented, given three readings and passed.

Secretary advised council that Mrs. Florence McKee would be leaving the employmens of the M. D. on November 15th and that Miss Donna Kvill had been hired to take her place as a machine operator. as of October 31st. Bussey moved that the arrangements entered into with Miss Kvill be approved.

Four metal tax roll trays will be purchased for storing Assessment and Tax Roll cards.

The meeting adjourned at 6:45 p.m. to meet again on Saturday, November 19th at 10:30 a.m.

Flagstaff Savings and Credit Union

Our Credit Union represents people within the M.D. of Flagstaff who have joined together to pool our savings and to make low cost loans to each other. Our purpose is to encourage thrift and the wise use of credit. Elected officers ensure the confidence and safety of your business. We are chartered to conduct this enterprise under the Credit Union Act of Alberta.

Our members OWN & OPERATE this credit union. YOU, too can become an owner-operator — by joining now.

TO JOIN, you simply complete a membership application, pay a $2 membership fee, and proceed to build your share savings account.

SHARES represent your accumulation of savings dollars and each share is valued at $5.00. DIVIDENDS are paid on share accounts at the end of each calendar year (December 31st) and they are directly related to your share account as it has been built up over the year. In Flagstaff Savings & Credit Union our dividend rate for 1965 was 5"

Savings & Loans are also insured in most cases.

Our Credit Union has group life insurance contracts in force with our own insurance Society — Cuna Mutual, that provide very valuable coverages for our members. The Life Savings contract insures dollar for dollar the life savings of our members to a maximum of $2,040 on amounts deposited prior to age 55 and at reduced rates for deposits made between age 55 and 70. The Loan Protection Contract provided that, in most cases, "the debt shall die with the debtor" and loans outstanding are insured for unlimited by death prior to age 70 and for total & permanent disability prior to age 60.

Note Well! There is no direct charge to the member for this valuable protection.

The COSTS OF BORROWING by our members is controlled by the Credit Union Act and our present rate of interest is ONE PER CENT PER MONTH ON THE UNPAID BALANCE. I e. 12"- per year It is important to note, however, that this rate, applied to a regularly recurring loan balance (retired by regular monthly payments) provides the members with insured loans at a cost of only $9.80 per year for each $100.00 borrowed (@ 12% add on interest). This is the true COST OF BORROWING FROM YOUR CREDIT UNION. There are no other service charges.

Here is an example of how doing BUSINESS WITH HIS OWN ORGANIZATIUN benefited one of our members. — he wanted to purchase a car priced at $202.00 over a period of 18 months. Finance company charges on the transaction would have amounted to $178.60 WITHOUT life insurance.

Ours member BORROWED FROM HIS CREDIT UNION and having met his obligations of repayment, paid only $48.32 in total rent saved $121.28 and in the meantime, he knew his loan balance was insured against his untimely death or unfortunate disability.

We know we have a FINE ORGANIZATION & invite YOU to join us!

Meteor has the longest wheelbase in its class... gives you a smoother, quieter ride at no additional cost.

It's the extra things we put into Meteor that make the difference.

Meteor has the longest wheelbase in its class. It's the smoothest, most comfortable-riding car in the popular price field. Independent, all-coil suspension lets Meteor's wheels step individually over bumps. Cushion-link rear suspension takes the "jar" out of dips and hollows. A compliance-tuned frame flexes slightly to help absorb road shock and vibration.

That's Meteor. And that's the difference!

Baptist Church

Work on the new manse has been started due to the weather. The basement forms have been installed and the first mild day will see the cement poured.

The mid-week service was well attended with the Pastor conducting a study on Baptist distinctives. The young people met on Friday evening at the Ted Rott home. Program leader was Judy Danielson. Games were led by James Nethercott. Pastor Nethercott spoke briefly on the topic, "I dare you to use what you have for God".

For the Sunday morning worship service the Pastor brought a message from Isaiah 55 in the subject "Seeking God". Communion was observed. Pastor Nethercott held his first service in the Auxiliary Hospital on Sunday. The Sunday evening service was well attended. A vocal solo was given by Anita Erickson.

We extend our best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Smith (nee Sanada Wylie) whose wedding took place in the Killam Baptist Church on November 12th.

FOR THE MEDICAL CENTRE — Mr. John Golka, President of Sedgewick Agricultural Society, Mr. Bill Barnes, President of the Light Horse Association, present cheques to Mr. Reg Harrison for use in paying the final duties of the Hardisty Medical Centre. The Centre was completed this year, ready for use.

Flagstaff E.M.O. Practice Exercise

The Flagstaff Emergency Measures Organization which includes the M. D. of Flagstaff and all the towns within the M D with the exception of Hardisty, held an E. M. O Government Headquarters practice for four nights last week

The first two evenings were spent familiarizing the representatives from Lougheed, Alliance, Forestburg, Heisler, Strome, Killam and Sedgewick with what their duties are in an emergency, and the last two evenings were occupied in a practice exercise which involved fallout from an atomic bomb and the crash of a large passenger airplane in the M. D. of Flagstaff

Purpose of the Emergency Government Headquarters is to provide a central point in the M. D. where the responsible authorities (Mayors and Reeves) can be provided with up-to-date information on the current situation during an emergency which might be a plane crash, a school-bus-train collision or the collapse of an arena This would enable them to direct and control survival operations in their communities during the period of the emergency

During the first two evenings Mr P Starr and Mrs. J. Henderson of the Civil Defence School in Edmonton gave instruction on the organization of a Headquarters, proper message writing & telephone communicands, the use of resources boards and situation reports, and other operations involved during any emergency

On the last two evenings of the practice, the entire Emergency Measures Headquarters was put through an exercise which involved two simulated emergencies — the dropping of two atomic bombs to the south of the M. D. & the crash of a large passenger airliner southeast of Alliance. It was the job of Headquarters to direct the rescue of the survivors and control at the same time to provide assistance to refugees from the areas that had been bombed.

The practical training which was given at the course could be very valuable in a situation such as the Lamont school bus crash of a few years ago, or in any large scale gasoline or man-made disaster which might occur in Flagstaff M. D.

Hon. "Bob" Clark To Speak Locally

One-half of Alberta's population is under the age of twenty-five. Hon. Robert Clark, Alberta's Minister of Youth, will be primarily interested in this particular age group. Juvenile crime is on the increase all over the world, and is caused by many things as lack of facilities for recreation, leisure time poorly spent, and bad environment. The youth ministry will assist in projects worthwhile for Alberta youth.

Many of the Provinces have sent delegations to Alberta, and letters of inquiry, to study the youth ministry, preparatory to starting one of their own.

The Young Social Creditors of the district are honored that the Youth Minister has accepted an invitation to speak in Killam on Tuesday evening, November 29th. The public is invited, with a special invitation to 4-H Clubs, recreational and educational young people's groups. There will be a question and answer period, as well as a short film on recreation. Lunch will be served. A collection will be taken to help defray expenses.

Centennial Hardisty Stampede Discussed

The Hardisty Stampede Association held its annual meeting Monday, November 14th in the curling room of the curling rink. This meeting is normally held in February or March, but was moved ahead this year because several decisions were required by the executive before they attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Rodeo Assn. in Calgary later this month.

The executive was instructed that it is the wish of the Assn. to have the date of the Stampede returned to the second weekend of June, which was the date of the Hardisty Stampede for many years. The executive will request this from the annual meeting at Calgary.

Hardisty Stampede Assn. and the Light Horse Assn. started the evening with a banquet at 6:30, with the meeting following. The treasurer's report for the year was prepared by Mrs. Kitty Wells and read by president John Golka. Despite the rain which came very close to completely washing out this year's Stampede, the Association showed total receipts of $14,021, with a small profit of $674. While the profit was much smaller (than normal), the executive was happy that the poor weather had not caused a loss on operations.

Some discussion was devoted to ways of increasing revenue at the Stampede and also ways that the operating costs might be reduced and several suggestions were put before the meeting.

It was decided to make a donation of $650 to the Hardisty Medical Centre. The Light Horse Assn. donated $100 to the Centre.

A motion was passed assuring the Medical Centre that the Stampede Assn. would give all the financial report it could in months ahead.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning!

When winter closes in and the heat is turned on be alert to the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning.

Carbon monoxide or CO sickens and kills because it cuts off the oxygen supply from the tissues of the body.

Ordinarily oxygen is carried to and from the lungs to all parts of the body by the red blood cells. When oxygen and carbon monoxide are breathed in together, the carbon monoxide displaces the oxygen. Carbon monoxide can unite with red cells 200 times more readily than oxygen.

Carbon monoxide is a tasteless, odorless, invisible gas. It is produced by the incomplete burning of fuels, gases, liquids or solids. When the improper burning of fuel is combined with insufficient ventilation, CO poisoning results.

Symptoms of CO poisoning include severe headache, dizziness, fatigue, faintness and loss of consciousness. Artifical respiration is imperative. Over a long period, carbon monoxide can cause permanent damage to nervous and circulatory system and eventually, death.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is a threat in the home, plant, garage, on the highway or in any place where fuel-burning appliances are used.

Before lighting a heater, furnace or stove after a long period of disuse, check to see if it is in good operating condition and that the flue or chimney is unobstructed.

Never use a space heater in a small, unventilated room, or turn on the kitchen oven of a gas stove for over-night heating purposes.

Traffic Fatalities Rise!

Traffic accidents have claimed 278 lives in the province of Alberta at the end of September, the Alberta Safety Council reported. The total is an increase of 18 fatalities compared to a year ago.

The fatality chart shows R.C.M.P. reporting 211 deaths for the nine months, a reduction of 4; Edmonton 29, up 10; Calgary 22, up 3; Medicine Hat 4, up 1; Fort Saskatchewan 3, up by the same number; Lethbridge 2, the same; Grand Prairie 1, the same; Red Deer, Wetaskiwin, Lacombe and Sylvan Lake one each.

The 30-day month of September recorded 38 deaths. R.C.M.P. reported 22 fatals, a reduction of 13 from last September; Edmonton City Police investigated 6 deaths, the same as a year ago; and Calgary 5, up 3.

A total of 27,396 accidents have been recorded in the province at the end of the year's three-quarter mark. This represents a 6% or 1,557 accident increase.

Major centre breakdowns for accidents are as follows: Edmonton 11,000; Calgary 6,731; Lethbridge 734; Red Deer 460; Medicine Hat 286; and Grande Prairie 195. R.C.M.P. tallied 7,262 mishaps which points out that Edmonton still harbors the poorest drivers in Alberta.

Know Your Canada!

The first votes for women was in 1884, but was given only to widows and spinsters. In 1885 the last spike of the CPR was driven at Craigallachie, B. C., and the first through train of the CPR left Montreal in 1886. It was in 1891 that Dr. James Naismith invented the game of basketball for the purpose of filling the gap between the football and baseball seasons. Now, we've got them all going at the same time. In 1894 the first Monday in September was declared a holiday and called Labor Day. The year 1897 saw the Womens Institute, now a worldwide organization, founded at Stoney Creek, Ontario by Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless.

In 1899 the Crows Nest Pass Agreement by Parliament set rates for railway moving of the Prairie grain, and the next year the South African War broke out and a Canadian contingent left for the scene; and in 1900 an anonomous person made the statement that the 20th century belonged to Canada. The way we wrangle today we sometimes wonder who Canada belongs to.

At the turn of the century, on January 22nd, 1901 Queen Victoria died and King Edward 7th followed in line. This year also saw Marconi receive the first trans-Atlantic wireless message at St. John's Newfoundland. Two years later the Alberta village of Frank in a Rocky Mountain pass was completely buried by a rock slide with the loss of 65 people.

In 1905 a big event took place in Alberta when the Province, along with Saskatchewan was created and proclaimed a Province. The permanent Canadian Militia was created this same year as the last British garrison was withdrawn. The Lord's Day Act of Canada, prohibiting non-essential work on Sunday, was passed by Parliament in 1906. In 1907 transatlantic wireless was opened for public service; the first heavier-than-air machine was flown by Dr. Graham Bell, in the form of a tetrahedral kite.

In 1908 the Canadian Mint was established at Ottawa; the other big event of that year was the birth of your editor. In 1909 Thomas J. Ryan invented 5-pin bowling; Admiral Peary reached the North Pole. In the first Grey Cup game the University of Toronto defeated the Ottawa Roughriders. On May 6th, 1910 King Edward 7th died and King Georgie 5th succeeded. In 1913 a great 4-day storm on the eastern Great Lakes wrecked 24 ships and cost Canada 300 seamen. The 18-year period of the building of the CPR and the opening of the West brought 3 million immigrants to Canada, one million of them from the U. S.

According to the Imperial Oil Review, research is going on to come up with a bottle that combines all the virtues of various containers: light, strong, colorful, inexpensive, squeezable, unbreakable, tamper-proof, leak-proof, reusable and disposable. When the ideal bottle is perfected it will be time for Justice. It's only a matter of time, says the Review until such items as milk, wine, beer, fruit juices, etc including pop will be bottled in the new containers. Good

Do you know how Alberta got it's name? Probably not many people do and I didn't until this little story came my way. Alberta was named by the Marquis of Lorne, who was the Governor-General of Canada at the time. The province came into being. It was named Alberta after H.R.H. Princess Louise Caroline Alberta, fourth daughter of Queen Victoria, and the wife of the Marquis. She was named after her father the Prince Consort.

It has been suggested that if all the women who are protesting the price of groceries would go on a strict diet and stay with it for three months, they would be more in debt down around than all their picketing and boycotting of certain stores.

THE UNRULY YOUNG PEOPLE

The young generation of the present are oftentimes criticized by their elders for unbecoming conduct. But that is a trait which has passed down from elders to youngsters over the ages.

The following comment sounds like the beginning (or end) of a letter to a metropolitan newspaper, or the lament of old-fashioned parents of the twentieth century. Here it is —

"Our youths now love luxury. They have bad manners, contempt for authority, disrespect for older people. They no longer rise when their elders enter the room. They contradict their parents, chatter before company, gobble their food and tyrannize their teachers."

That consonent was written by Socrates, 2500 years ago, in the Golden Age of Greek culture, which is part of our noblest heritage. —Brooks Bulletin.

Canada Pension Plan Office In Edmonton

The opening of a Canada Pension Plan District Office in Edmonton was announced recently by National Health and Welfare Minister Allan J. MacEachen.

The Office, which is located in the Federal Building, 9925 Jasper and 107 th Street in Edmonton, will serve residents of the northern section of Alberta and the Northwest Territories. It is under the direction of Mr. C. W. Gewing.

In addition to the services available in the Office, the Edmonton District Office will operate mobile units which will visit other main centres on scheduled basis to provide services to the people in those communities. Times and places of the visits of the mobile unit will be announced locally, later.

District Offices are organized to provide a comprehensive range of services. These include receiving applications for benefits, assisting in the completion of applications where necessary, counselling, explaining pension computations, securing documentary proof of age, and providing information to the public on all aspects of the Canada Pension Plan.

Edmonton is one of 34 centres in Canada where District Offices are established to provide the most convenient service to contributors and their families, in urban and rural areas.

The staff of District Offices are now involved in furnishing local communities with information on the Plan. They will commence receiving applications for Retirement Pensions during December 1966. Those pensions become payable for the first time in January, 1967 to contributors who are 65 years of age or over provided that, if under 70, they are retired from regular employment. Everyone 70 years of age, Retirement Pension will be payable regardless of whether they have retired.

Enquiries regarding Canada Pension Plan benefits may be addressed to The Manager, Canada Pension Plan, Edmonton District Office, Box 742, Federal Building, Edmonton or telephone 424-0251, Local 810.

Try This On Sadists!

(By Bill Smiley)

A good many people, decent, kindly, warm-hearted in most respects, have a morbid streak. They get a big vicarious bang out of the gruesome or the gory.

Eyes glisting, voices lowered, they discuss with relish Aunt Sadie's cancer of the liver, the weekend accident in which a pillar of the community smashed his pelvis while heading for his city with his mistress, or Uncle George's advanced dropsy.

It's a shame, then, to disappoint these people when there's a chance to add a little color to their lives. This week I had that chance. I cut my foot rather badly. Nothing serious, but enough to give me a good heavy limp.

It happened on the weekend, and Monday morning I was all ready for them. The first eager enquirer caught me just inside the door, as I arrived for work. What was it? Red fall and a broken ankle? Arthritis getting unbearable? Cystic?

No, no, nothing as simple as that. I assured her. I explained that my wife and I had been practising our karate on Saturday night, as usual. Growing bored with smashing those big desks in the refrigerator with the sides of our hands, we'd decided to try some footwork. I'd launched a jump-kick at my wife's teeth. She, a real karate expert, had stuck out her tongue, and it was as sharp she'd opened a 4-inch gash in my foot. Four inches deep, that is.

I don't know whether the lady felt sad, mad or bored me. I just walked off and left her standing there, mouth open,eyes slightly glazed.

The next enquiry came from one of those loudmouths who like to embarrass one in front of a group. He tried. Very loudly. "Whacks do? Got drunk and fell down the cellar stairs, ho-ho?"

Not at all, I told him calmly. I'd got drunk, been locked out, slept in a snowbank all night, wakened with a frozen foot, and had to have three toes amputated. I asked him if he'd like one as a souvenir, but he didn't seem too keen.

The next customer was a mutilation old bat who looks like the flower, but in reality is the serpent under't. "Been fighting this year wife again? It's about time she put her foot down. On yours, hee-hee."

Control, we weren't exactly fighting." I told her. "I had the shotgun out and was just trying to scare her a little, just in fun, when the darn thing went off and blew a hole in my foot the size of an orange. Wants one?" Si s turned green and started to sway, so I left her.

A fourth interrigator, a young lady who loves trouble — other people's that is — came up to me, eyes glistening, and solicitously hoped it was nothing serious. I said not really, just a few severed tendons. Never be able to wiggle my toes again, but lucky to get off so easily. "After all, it was a 30-foot drop".

Gasping, she parroted, "What in the world happened?"

"Nothing much. I fell off the roof and landed on one of the iron spikes in the front porch railing".

"But what in the world were you doing up on the roof, in the middle of winter? You must have been out of your mind."

"Oh, no, not really. I was just trying to get my wife to come down out of the tree." And that shut her up.

As the day went on, I told three more that: A Greyhound bus had stopped on top of my foot and didn't move until the lights changed; the foot had been burned beyond recognition by a faulty electric blanket; that my daughter had been helping to chop kindling for the fireplace, missed and lopped off all but my littlest toe.

Getting my coat in the cloakroom at the end of a pretty interesting day, I heard two females, unaware of my presence, reconstructing the accident.

"Drunk as a billy-goat, they say, and climbing a tree after black squirrels, with a shotgun."

"No, no. I heard he'd gone after his wife and kids with the axe, and dropped it on his foot."

I limped off. Quietly. Triumphantly.

"That reminds me I must dash home and fix Fred's supper!"

5th Annual A.I.C. Awards
Calgary Power is proud to announce 1966 Award Winners

ROY UMBACH,
Carstairs

Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year.

16-year old Roy is a favorite in his community. He always has a cheery "hello", a winning smile. He is a good student, always willing to try a new endeavour. Roy is a keen sports fan and participates in many school sports activities. Besides this, Roy is very interested in animals and is a member of the Carstairs 4-H Club. He attends church regularly and is a member of the Sunday School.

Roy does all these things despite a severe physical handicap. He was born with no hands and malformed feet!

Last year, Roy's duties as Alberta's Easter Timmy took him far and wide in the cause of public service

This courageous little boy is a worthy winner of the Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year award!

We congratulate Roy and thank Alberta's Weekly Newspaper Editors for their active co-operation in the Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year program, sponsored by Alberta's investor-owned electric utility companies.

This is one of a series of Junior Citizen Award announcements. Our special thanks to Mrs. J. Currie, Editor of the Carstairs News and to Roy's nominators, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Stiles of Carstairs.

SUGAR AND SPICE

KIDS ARE GREAT

My heart aches for the parents of young children. All the parents of all young children. They are like soldiers who have done their basic training, but have never heard a shot fired in anger. The real war lies ahead.

I know there are some young mothers with several children who think they are going through a rough time right now. But this is merely purgatory. Hell comes later, and is hotter.

Little kids are lovable. As babies, they are soft and warm and, if changed frequently, small good. They grin, they croup, they gurgle, and they cheep, and every day, in every way, they grow smarter and smarter

Late is full of landmarks: the first tooth, the first step, the first word, the first fist-fight with the little girl next door, the first day at school, the first big crush on a member of the opposite sex.

They're very funny and they're very sweet. And there's always a bit occasion not far away. There are Halloween costumes to make, and the thrill of that first time out in the eerie October night, one hand clutching a huge paper bag, the other clutching firmly the hand of the bigger girl from next door, as the rounds are made

There's Christmas coming, and the growing excitement of carols and the part in the Sunday School pageant, and roasty pater as close, and the long-raising hope that give in mounting the tree.

And there's Valentine's Day, with the great moral decisions to be made, about who gets the five-cent one and who gets the 10-cent one. And there's Fire-cracker Day, when they have to stand in a circle and watch their father burning his fingers and scorching his eyebrows while he shows them how careful they must be.

All in all, little kids are about the greatest single blessing we can find in this vale of tears. They're a laugh a day. They can make you feel big and strong and capable, and honest. and whole.

There's only one thing wrong with little kids. Inevitably, inexorably, relentlessly, they become big kids. And as they grow, their parents shrink. Physically, mentally, spiritually. And financially.

The tensions of the family body begin to stretch, under constant pressure. The family joints begin to creak, under constant strain. Not to labor the analogy, let's just say that your chortles have become teenagers

Momma's tolerance thins with the same rapidity as Dad's hair, and daughter's lipgloss increases at the same rate as son's surliness.

What was once merely an exercise in exhaustion — getting them to bed — becomes a superhuman effort — staying up till they get in.

But this is just the home life, something to be borne, like ingrown toe-nails, or varicose veins. What really grabs you is the influence of the outside world.

Everybody, from the prime minister to the local plumber, tells your kids they have to stay in school. It doesn't matter whether they have the brains of a goose. A drop-out, these days, is practically a felon. In fact, don't be surprised if all drop-outs are sent to the moon, as soon as we have established a colony there.

Similarly, your daughter has an irresistible attraction toward books. Vainly, you nudge her in the direction of some class-cut, home-ec-dent son of a wealthy WASP doctor. Her reaction? "That flik!"

And she makes a date with some long-locked, Yamaha-riding character who is in his fourth year in his two - year technical course, makes $28 a week in his part-time job at the super-market, probably kicks, and will be rich by the time he is 18.

And your son? Same, only more-so. He leads on LSD with the same interest with which you looked on the Literary, Social and Debating clubs when you were his age. He helps himself to a beer with the same nonchalance with which he used to take a banana.

But cheer up, parents. There's one satisfaction. If you can't help them physically, you're going to be able to sit around and laugh yourself sick when your kids are bringing up their kids.

TRANQUILITY. The first snows which blanket portions of Northern Canada each November bring with them a feeling of peace and serenity. For it is this time of the year that trees are almost barren and foliage is nearly non-existent. As the watery mist envelopes lakes and streams the lone sentinel often proves to be only a jutting rock or mound of clay.

"COOLING OFF" PERIOD PROVIDES OPPORTUNITY TO CANCEL CONTRACTS

(Taken for "Within Our Borders")

PERSONS WHO BUY or offer to buy goods from door to door salesmen now have the privilege of rescinding sales contracts covering these purchases within four days, or, in some cases, within one year, under the terms of new legislation which came into effect in Alberta on July 1st.

The Direct Sales Cancellation Act, passed at the last session of the Alberta Legislature, is similar to the Hire Purchase Act 1964 of the United Kingdom, and is related to legislation passed in 1965 by Manitoba and Saskatchewan. In general all, the Act provides a period of time for buyers to reflect on the wisdom of purchases or offers to purchase which may have been influenced by high - pressure sales tactics.

The Act states that a schedule containing a statutory notice of the Direct Sales Cancellation Act must be affixed to all direct sales contracts. This schedule sets out in a general way the rights a purchaser now has under this new Act. Unless the contract signed by the buyer contains this schedule, it is void.

The new Act does not apply to sales which take place at a seller's normal place of business. Nor does it apply to sales conducted in a market place, auction, trade or agricultural fair, or exhibition. Also, in some cases the act does not cover sales contracts between manufacturers or distributors and retailers or wholesalers. Perishable goods, or food products do not come under the terms of this Act.

The general rule is that a buyer may cancel any contract to which this new Act applies by giving the seller a notice of cancellation within the next day "cooling off" period. This notice may be given either by delivery in person, or by mail. The buyer is always advised to make and keep for his own use a copy of any notice of cancellation he issues, and to note the date on which it was delivered or mailed to the seller.

As well, the buyer may cancel such contract within one year if the goods and services specified in the contract are not provided within 30 days of a specified date, or within 180 days of the date of purchase where no delivery date is specified in the contract. The buyer also has one year to cancel the contract if it later turns out the seller, or his salesman or agent, was not properly licensed at the time the sale was made.

Both the four day time limit, and the one year time limit begin from the date a copy of the complete signed contract is received by the buyer. The Act stipulates that such a copy must be received by the buyer before a contract can be considered complete. This copy must also contain the name and address of the seller or other responsible person, or else the contract is void. The buyer's copy may be delivered by mail, or in person.

Princess Royal I.O.D.E.

KILLAM — The November meeting of Princess Royal IODE was held at the home of Mrs. Stewart.

A paper "Guerrilla Tactics" was read by Mrs. McCabe. The paper stated that the Soviet-guided subversive political machine in Canada is well oiled and functioning smoothly and to deny this is to be blind to demonstrable fact.

The provincial letter was read, and the business dealt with. A report of the Legion banquet was given and everything turned out well. A report of the Services Sec. from the semi-annual meeting in Red Deer showed that 1,181 knitted and seven articles valued at $7,371.32 were donated by the I O D E groups all over Alberta. This is only part of the work, and does not include the Bundles for Britain parcels and Christmas hampers, etc.

These things are given to adopted schools, Indian, Military, boys camps, orphanages, and wherever they are needed.

Margaret Manning reported that the Doll and several outfits of clothing were ready for the raffle.

The business of the meeting ended with the singing of God Save the Queen.

Night Riders!

Scores of youngsters are killed, and thousands injured annually in car - bicycle accidents. On busy streets cars may be forced over to the opposite lane to avoid hitting cyclists. At night in poorly lit urban and rural areas, motorists are often surprised by the unexpected cyclist in their headlights.

It is important during the low visibility months of winter that the cyclists be seen. Battery powered front and rear lights and light reflective material on the front forks and rear of a bicycle should be standard equipment at all times.

In Memoriam

McGEE — In loving memory of our Grandfather and Great Grandfather Charles McGee who passed away on November 25th, 1983.

We cannot bring the old days back.
When we were all together;
But sacred years and loving hearts,
Will live with us forever.
You are not forgotten. Grandfather dear,

Nor shall you ever be,
As long as life and memories last.
You will be remembered by me.

Ever remembered and sadly missed by — Marlene, Sean and Children. 39 1 p

In Memoriam

McGee — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Charles McGee, who passed away November 26th, 1983.

This day comes to us with deep regret,
Brings back a time I will never forget;
You fell asleep without goodbye,
But memories of you will never die.

"Thy will be done" seems hard to say,
Where one we loved has passed away,
Some day, perhaps, we'll understand
When we meet again in that better land.

Ever remembered and sadly missed by loving wife Ada and family. 39 1 p

Message On Safe Driving Week, Dec. 1st to 7th

The purpose of Safe-Driving Week, the oldest all-Canadian road safety campaign, is not merely to reduce death and injury on the roads and streets for a single week. What is learned and practiced during Safe Driving Week (Dec 1 to 7th) can be put to use through the year to save lives and prevent suffering and property loss

What I would like to do is to explain why the Council emphasizes defensive driving.

This is not done to protect the value of vehicles and safe highways. They have definite importance in the over-all safety scheme. Since more than 90 percent of Canada's road crashes occur through human failure, we must concentrate on that aspect

Defensive driving is little more than common sense. Simply, it means learning how to know potential dangerous situations, learning how to avoid them, then putting that knowledge to use. Since 47% of the people surveyed in connection with The Canadian Driver's Test the value placed on safe vehicles and safe highways. They have defthat few people know where danger lurks. The driver is our principal target.

The Canadian winter, with its tumult of ice, snow and sub-zero temperatures is almost with us. Defensive driving becomes more important now than ever. There is no place on our highways for the unthinking, over-aggressive driver. But he will be there to plague us, so we must avoid him. We must prevent his atrocities from killing and maiming and destroying. This can be done through defensive driving

Patricia Paterson Wed At Lougheed

St Andrew's United Church, Lougheed, was the scene of a pretty wedding on June 18th, when Patricia Eileen, daughter of Mr and Mrs Bill Paterson, became the bride of Donald Ian MacKinnon, son of Mr and Mrs Rod MacKinnon of Lougheed. Rev Don Lewis officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, wearing a floor-length gown of Legeda silk, with detachable bouffant train. A bouffant veil fell from a crown of pearls and crystal droplets, and she carried a bouquet of baby orchids encircled by stephanotis

Matron of honor was the bride's sister, Mrs Jim Walsh, and Mrs Gerry Miller and Miss Maureen Malone were bridesmaids. They wore identical sheath dresses of sky blue satin with over-skirts of floral silk organza, and carried bouquets of white shasta daisies. Their headpieces were small rhinestone tiaras.

Groomsmen were Duane Freeman, Jim Paterson and Orville VandeWark. Gerry Miller and Robert Drager were ushers. Billy Paterson ushered the bride's grandmothers and Mrs. Paterson into the church

Mrs Lloyd Peacock was soloist, accompanied by Mrs Bill Routledge at the organ

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Paterson chose a sheath of old rose lace with matching coat, white accessories and a rose corsage. Mrs MacKinnon wore a turquoise ribbon sheath dress complimented by white accessories and a yellow rose corsage

An open reception for 250 guests was held in the Community Hall. The bride's uncle, Bud Paterson, proposed the toast to the bride, which was ably responded to by the groom. Sue Ellen McGreevy was in charge of the guest book.

A dance was held in the Sedgewick Community Hall

For her going-away outfit the bride chose a pink suit, complimented by white accessories and an orchid corsage

GETTING CATTLE ON FEED!

To prevent digestive disturbances such as bloat and rumen overload in cattle, care must be taken when starting them on feed.

According to P. J. Martin, Nutritionist with the Alberta Animal Industry Division, starting cattle on about two pounds of grain per head per day on the second or third day after they come into the feedlot, is the conventional way of getting them on feed. For the first day or so they should receive only hay. Oats are often used as a starting feed The daily ration is gradually increased until the animals are getting as much as they will eat. At this point barley can be gradually substituted for oats.

Mr Martin points out that it is very important that the grain allowance be increased gradually because any sudden changes in the amount or composition of the ration can cause serious digestive disorders. Free-choice hay should be provided throughout the feeding period. As their grain intake increases the cattle will eat less hay. Hay should be restricted if the cattle are not eating enough grain.

It is essential, Says Mr. Martin, to watch the cattle closely during the feed adjustment period. Make sure that they are cleaning up the grain at each feeding and that all the animals are eating. An animal standing off by himself may need attention and could be an indication that the grain ration is being increased too rapidly.

Remember, calves require more time to adjust to full-feed than do yearlings The latter usually take about a month while the calves can take as long as five weeks

Mr Martin says several commercial feedlot starter rations are now on the market The label directions explain how to start this type of feeding as well as how and when to change over to grain feeding.

The approximate cost of commercial feedlot starters is about $2.50 per head for the recommended two week feeding period One of the advantages of this type of feed is that the cattle are in the feedlot for a shorter time than in the case with conventional feeding. An experienced feeder can have his cattle on full feed within a week, but operators using this type of feed for the first time would be wise to take at least two weeks to get his cattle up to full feed Another advantage of commercial feedlot starters is that there is less risk of digestive upsets at the beginning of the feed period.

All feedlot cattle should receive Vitamin A and a supply of free-choice minerals The Vitamin A requirements of a yearling steer is 20,000 international units per day. Whether or not a protein supplement is needed, and if so, how much, can be determined by a grain analysis test. Informaton on feed testing is available from all district agriculturists

Mr. Martin says Diethylstilbestrol (DES) can be used to advantage in a fattening steer ration DES can either be implanized or fed with the protein supplement.

LOUGHEED MEETING!

Don't forget the afternoon meeting on Soil Conservation and Erosion Control in Lougheed on December 8th. Conservation of our soil is most important.

We tend to take the good agricultural soil that we have in this country for granted. It is only when the threat of losing something important arises that we get concerned. For the sake of future generations lets learn to do the best job we can in conserving our soils today.

His Honor J. W. Grant MacEwan, Lt.-Gov. of Alberta, at the Alberta Department of Agriculture Conference this fall, spoke of his trip to countries around the Mediterranian Sea. He told us about the run-down condition of agricultural soils in many of the countries and their low productivity in the face of increasing populations. He stressed the urgency of people working our land to conserve our most precious asset —our productive soil.

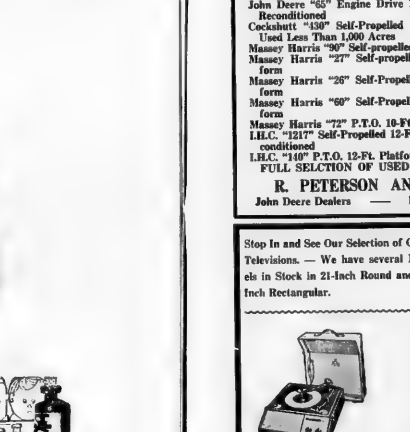
Have you ever wondered...



... who keeps Albertans informed on government activities?

To make sure that as many Albertans as possible know as much as possible about government activities and services is the responsibility of the Alberta Government Publicity Bureau Although attached to the Department of Industry and Development, the Bureau's scope includes all departments and, to keep the public informed, it utilizes many forms of communication. Advertisements, such as this, news releases provided to all media, a variety of free periodicals, all help keep you informed on the activities of your Provincial government and the services it performs on your behalf.

... what is the most important use of water?

Water is VITAL to the sustenance of human life; necessary for irrigation and industry; preferred for the production of power; and desirable for recreation. These are the priorities set for the use of Alberta's water by the Water Resources Division of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, and it is the responsibility of this agency to see that the supply is distributed accordingly. To help accomplish this purpose, no one may divert water without authority from the Division and permanent records are kept of all water diversions. This careful control is necessary for the long term planning required to assure Alberta sufficient water for all uses through the growing years ahead

... if the rights of any Albertan are being destroyed by discrimination?

The continuance of the traditional Alberta policy of judging a man by his personal worth, not by race, creed or color, is the purpose of The Human Rights Act. Administered by the Alberta Department of Labour, this Act is designed to safeguard the dignity and human rights of all residents of the Province. In order that each Albertan will know his rights and responsibilities under The Human Rights Act, an extensive educational and informative program is currently being prepared by the Department of Labour.

... about the flowers that beautify Alberta's public buildings at special events in mid-winter?

It's summer all year 'round in the Provincial greenhouses maintained by the Alberta Department of Public Works and it's there that plants which bloom at different times of the year are specially raised in preparation for specific occasions such as the opening of the Legislature for Christmas. By some green-thumb magic, plant growth is speeded up or retarded to allow their blooming to coincide with the special event. The greenhouses are also the source of seedlings for the flowerbeds decorating Provincial buildings all over Alberta. Over a quarter of a million plants are grown here during those important first three years when he needs all his capital to establish his buildings and obtain equipment. He doesn't start paying taxes or payments on the land until the beginning of the fourth year. In return for these advantages, the homesteader agrees to cultivate a minimum of 40 acres per quarter section within four years and to establish residence on the property for at least 12 months to qualify for title.

... if homesteading in Alberta is extinct?

Homesteading is still very much alive in our Province, sustained by an average of more than 1,000 applications for land received each year by the Lands Division, Alberta Department of Lands and Forests. Under homesteading regulations a man can purchase land at the going price, without competitive bidding, and he doesn't have to make any payments

... what precautions are taken to provide immediate treatment of accidental poisoning?

Every general hospital in Alberta has a poison control centre where information of poisonous substances is immediately available to the family doctor, the hospital nurse or, in emergencies, to parents. Maintained by the Department of Public Health, these centres have a quick reference system which provides details on whether or not a substance is poisonous and, if so, what the active poisonous material is and what can be done about it. In addition to these poison control centres, poison information centres are located in Calgary and Edmonton, where information on special treatment of unusual poisons is immediately available to doctors or hospitals.

Baptist Church Young People Meet At Home Of Mr. and Mrs. John Kvill

Rev. C. Nethercott was in charge of the Sunday services, and chose as his Sunday morning topic, "The Excelencies of Christ".

Following the prayer service on Tuesday night, a business meeting was held at which time plans were made for the church to become Incorporated.

The Young People's meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kvill this week. A layman spoke on the topic, "I Dare You To Be Brave In Damascus", when he encouraged young people to do things for Christ. and be willing to participate. Don't forget the Singspiration (a complete musical evening) this Friday night. Special musical numbers will be provided by many invited church groups as well as our own. The Bible Today

The 1967 Budget for Bible translation and distribution work through out the world was fixed at almost $7,000,000 at a meeting of the United Bible Societies' Executive Committee recently in Berlin. This represents the amount needed to be found by the Bible Societies to cover the cost of the work in non-self-supporting areas of the world.

Deficit is a necessary concomitant of the Bible Societies' policies: almost all editions are subsidized; the Bible Societies sponsor or are related to current Scripture translation or revision work in 70 languages (1700,000); Scripture distribution facilities are maintained in 120 countries.

The Executive Committee reported with regret that a number of projects for 1967, costing in all $250,000 had had to be omitted from the budget. The U.B.S. Secretary, Dr. Olivier Beguin, commented: "It is disturbing that work should have to be curtailed at the present time when widespread opportunities are offered for Bible work throughout the world.

"The Bible Societies are faced with opportunities for spreading the Word of God which they cannot for lack of funds. This is a sad story," added Dr. Beguin.

Sportsmen's Dinner Attracts Full House

The first venture of the Hardisty Arena Assn. into the field of Sportsmen's Dinners proved to be a success beyond the hopes of the sponsors, with a sell-out crowd representing several areas of Alberta attending. At $10 a plate the overflow crowd was treated to a royal roast beef dinner for which Hardisty has become famous.

Mr. Len Anderson, one of the emcis "Sparkplugs" behind the venture, welcomed those present and thanked them for their interest in coming, some many miles to attend. He introduced the head table guests and paid special tribute to all who had assisted in putting the dinner across in such fine fashion. He then introduced the M.C. for the evening, "Tiger" Goldstick of Edmonton, who has been prominent in the sports field there and in Alberta for many years as trainer and coach. Tiger in his opening remarks stressed the importance of youth in the development of a strong nation and the necessity to encourage them in group sports and sportsmanship at a time when cheerless buildings is so important. He introduced the speakers with remarks about each which have made them people of importance on the Alberta scene.

To kick off the well known list of speakers at the dinner was "Mike" Carstead, well-known Rodeo Rider who has gained a wide reputation as a bull rider. The Kid entered his first Rodeo in the 1950's, which just happened to the Hardisty Stampede and he went on from there to amass an impressive array of trophies.

Glen Precious, former Eskimo Line Backer from 1954 to 1960, and now a Professor at the U. of A. and the coach of the Golden Bears, in his remarks dealt primarily on college football. Glen said that in 1966 the U. of A. team trounced Queens in the East-West game 35-7, to start the supposedly inter-provincial college football program that we have today. He invited all present to visit Second Century Week in Edmonton next March when some 750 college athletes will be national competition.

Alex Rostanski, former Eskimo & Lions, a big push behind amateur wrestling and school sports, dwelt on the visit of the Canadian wrestling team to Jamaica recently. The team won a gold metal, 3 silver, & one bronze. In closing he stressed the importance of youthful guidance in sports, saying, "It is easier to build a boy than mend a man".

Next speaker was the Hon. "Bob" Clarke, Alberta Minister of Youth Bob was elected to the Legislature six years ago and taken into the Cabinet this year. He said that Canada had a wealth of Natural Resources which she is developing at a rapid pace, but is backward in developing its human resources of the youth level. Mr. Clark said he was looking forward to assisting communities such as Hardisty with their youth activities.

In introducing the main speaker of the evening, Rabbi Ginsberg, the M.C. paid glowing tribute to the work being done by the Rabbi with the young people of Alberta, and his willingness to be of help to anyone in difficulties.

Rabbi Ginsberg, a witty and delightful story teller, kept the audience in stitches with pointed jokes and stories leading into his subject for the evening. He deplored the fact that Canada, the birth-place of ice hockey, and where the rules were formulated, had only two teams in the national league to 22 in the U.S.A., three semi-pro teams as compared with 30 in the U.S.A., and no established high school leagues in Western Canada. The speaker stated that he can find

MR. AND MRS. J. P. KINZER of Killam celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary on Tuesday, November 22nd. Mr. Kinzer is in his 94th year and his bride is ten years his junior. They moved to the Killam district from Ocamonse, Idaho in 1911 and have resided in Killam and district for the past 54 years. Both enjoy exceptionally good health and reside by themselves in their Killam residence.

IT IS NO DISGRACE TO LOSE — That is what Rabbi Ginsberg is emphasizing in his address as Canada's National Hockey Team. Rabbi Ginsberg was guest speaker at the Hardisty Sportsmen's Dinner. Seated to the left is Mayor of Hardisty Mr. Ben Rempel. To the right of Rabbi Ginsberg is "Tiger" Goldstick, M. C. for the evening and the Hon. "Bob" Clark, Minister of Youth for Alberta. In the background is an impressive array of trophies and the sports equipment used by players who provide entertainment at the Hardisty Sports Complex.

Beverly Fossen was initiated into the lodge.

District Deputy Lady Francesur was presented with a corsage and a gift from the Heisler Lodge. Lunch was served buffet style.

The date for the Christmas party will be announced at the next meeting which will be held on Monday, December 5th instead of on Thursday as usual.

Heisler 4-H Plan Christmas Party

HEISLER — The Heisler 4-H Clothing Club held their third meeting in the Heisler School Library, on Tuesday, November 15th.

The meeting was adjourned, followed by an enjoyable lunch.

B. of T. Executive 1st Meeting

KILLAM — The first meeting of the new executive of the Killam District Board of Trade was held on Tuesday, November 22nd.

First business on the agenda was the appointment of officers for the various committees, which include Arena, Medical Centre, Sports, Retail, Agriculture, Municipal and Membership.

It was decided to accept the tender of Mr. Doug Kisner for the position of manager-caretaker of the arena for the winter. Heavy stress was placed on the help and co-operation Mr. Kisner would require not only from members of the Board, but from the general public, in conducting the affairs of the arena for the current season.

The committee also decided to inform Sunwapta Broadcasting Co. (Channel 3) that they were strongly in support of the need of a T. V. satellite station in the general area.

Membership dues for the year were set at $2.00 per person, but it was hoped that the business community would add a voluntary contribution to help offset the heavy expenditures anticipated.

In early December, after the drawing up of the schedule for the hockey games, there will a definite fixed time made available for public skating. It was also decided to conduct figure skating classes twice weekly with competent instructors to handle the teaching.

Fees for public skating were set at $7.50 per family, $3.00 per individual and 75c for any one day.

Due to the fact that finances of the arena are at a low ebb, and after consulting with the operators of several arenas, it was noted that all persons using the skating facilities of the arena will be required to pay the skating fees.

The next meeting of the Board of Trade will be held on December 6, at 8:00 p.m. in the fire hall, and a cordial invitation is extended to the general public to attend.

Bigness Is The Trend!

We have watched the trend toward bigness which is taking over like a giant octopus in our land. We have seen fewer farmers working bigger and bigger farms, small corner grocers forced out by chain stores. Now, a disturbing follow-suit trend of machine companies is in the immediate future. Larger & fewer agencies is predicted spread over ever larger areas. Well informed sources predict the day is not far off when the major suppliers of farm machinery will have only two outlets, one in the southern portion and one in the north-central areas of Alberta. Others predict that the spread between agencies will be about 50 miles.

While this trend may well be one of economy for the machinery producers, it is doubtful if this will be reflected to the buyer, who must have machines as required and who certainly will want repairs without delay. It is a known fact that the bigger the operation the poorer the service and with today's demands by labor for shorter hours, we foresee trouble ahead for farmers.

Bigness to a degree brings on economy but beyond a certain point extravagance takes over. With all the predictions being handled about, we would like to make one of our own. It is that the machine company wise and sensible enough to put service ahead of bigness, and establish-es outlets not too far apart, are the companies which will draw the biggest share of business.

The small machinery dealer has given service as good as he found possible in the past, but today he is being forced to comply with company policy. No orders shipped out after a certain time of day; no service at all on Saturdays. He is being forced out of business for lack of funds to get big. We don't like the way things are going, and predict a return to a saner policy after an inevitable trial period.

Future Of Farm Labor!

There is no denying today's rapidly changing agricultural picture, and there is the likelihood that by 1980 there will be only about 35,000 farms in Alberta, a 50 percent decrease in the number recorded in 1961.

Predictions are that by 1980 an economic farm unit will need a capital investment of $50 to $100 thousand dollars compared to today's $30,000. Gross farm income is projected at from $30 to $25 thousand, with requirements for hired labour being somewhere around 25,000, compared to today's 18,000. Many farmers who sell out their land holding in the next ten years, will be the logical and the most interested in farm work besides being the best equipped to provide that labor force for the remaining farms. But to attract and hold these individuals, will require an essential adjustment of wage rates to ensure that the farm worker is paid in proportion to his contribution to production.

Know Your Canada!

Disaster hit in 1914 when war was declared with Germany and the first contingent of Canadian troops (33,000) landed at Plymouth, England This contingent proceeded to France in 15 and on to Flanders. The Parliament authorized an increase of troops to 500,000 in 1916, and the same year the House of Parliament was destroyed by fire.

Women were given the vote in federal elections in 1917 and the first woman was elected to a Legislature in the British Empire in the person of Mrs. Louise McKinney in Alberta. In 1918 Bulgaria surrendered Sept. 30, Austria-Hungary on Nov.4, Mons was captured on Nov 11, and the First World War Armistice was signed. World-wide Flu epidemic broke out in 1918, taking the lives of more than 20 million people, 45,000 of them in Canada.

The year 1919 saw the formation of the Organization of the CNR and a general strike at Winnipeg. The League of Nations Assembly began its first meeting in Switzerland in 1920; the Royal North West Mounted Police force merged with Dominion Police and the combined force was re-named Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mrs. Agnes MacPhail was the first lady elected to Parliament, and this was in 1921. She represented the United Farmers Party. In 1923 Sir Frederick Banting was given the Nobel Prize for his discovery in 1921 at the University of Toronto, of Insulin for diabetes, one of the greatest medical achievements of the century. The Diamond Jubilee of Confederation was celebrated in 1927, and the first air mail service was instituted.

Pitchblende, source of Uranium was discovered in 1930 near Great Bear Lake by Gilbert LaBine and Charles St. Paul. Mrs. Cairvine Wilson was the first lady elected to the Senate during the same year. In 1931 the Statute of Westminster established complete legislative equality of the Parliament of Canada with that of the U. K.

The Welland Ship Canal was opened in 1932, and two years later Newfoundland's constitution was suspended due to financial problems and the government was taken over by a commission. 1935 saw the end of the big trek of 2000 reindeer from Alaska to Aklavik to replenish Eskimo supply of caribou. In 1936 the CBC was created in order to give the government control of all radio programs. King George V died this year and was succeeded by Edward 8, who abdicated on Dec. 11th and was succeeded by King George VI.

When somebody says something nice about you behind your back, it is a real compliment.

by A.C.S.

For years now the United States of America has been the "Sugar Daddy" to the rest of the world, usually getting almost instead of thanks, and most nations have seen fit to take advantage of this generosity; often by devious methods. Recently the huge Intrs. Bank of Lebanon found that it was unable to meet the withdrawal demands of it's customers and closed it doors, causing a major banking crisis in Lebanon. Naturally the Lebanese Government is trying to solve the crisis and it is estimated it will require some seventy million dollars to do this. Now comes the devious part. When Fidel Castro took over in Cuba he issued new money and has steadfastly refused to redeem the former Cuban notes, now known as "Batista Pesos" which were worth $1.03 U.S. and are now worthless, or at least as long as Castro lasts. To solve the Lebanese crisis a group of Iranian citizens wishes to purchase 87% control of the Intrs Bank using 200 million dollars worth of the now useless "Batista Pesos" which the Lebanese government it trying to talk the American into buying at face value. Lebanon would keep 70 million U.S. dollars and the financiers would walk off with the other 130 million. Some way to solve a crisis. In summing up the fellows who offer to sell the Golden Gate Bridge to new-comers to San Francisco. . . . .

Every fall's hunting season brings another rash of protests from farms on the conduct of the hunters using their land and killing their animals. This is caused by a few who have no consideration for the people who own the land they are hunting on. In the Amisk news of this paper there is a story of a different type of accident accidently killed a cow and reported in and paid the farmer for his loss.

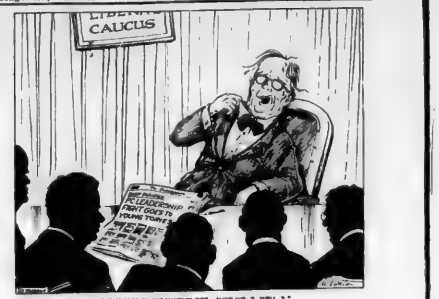
The political implications of the activities of Pope Paul may be of far reaching consequence to the world and particularly to Canada. Not only does he rule the Vatican State in Rome, he is the spiritual leader of a potential 400,000,000 people who in turn have considerable political influence in the civic affairs of many countries. No other Pope has travelled quite as extensively as has Pope Paul.

With the release of the news that he may visit Canada in 1967, coinciding with Montreal and Expo 67, there is a possibility that for the first time in the history of the world, a Pope will have visited this largely Roman Catholic populated country. If he comes, no definite length of time for his stay has been set.

There have been rumors in times past that the Vatican State might be moved to Canada some day. Such a visit would add strength to such rumors. Quebec City, for instance, has a total population of about 498,000. According to reports 88 percent are Canadian French and 82 percent are Roman Catholic with only nine Protestant churches supported to exist in the entire city. This is one of the strongest Roman Catholic centres in the world outside of Rome itself.

It is hard to separate the spiritual and political effects of such a possible move. In a time when Anglicans and Catholics are talking of union, the Vatican state would be much more ideally situated in Canada than in Rome. The Church of England has great strength on this continent whereas it is virtually non existent in Italy and Spain. The ecumenical movements in both the Protestant and Catholic hierarchies are calling forth the best in the diplomatic relations between both groups. Certainly if the Pope's proposed visit to Canada should materialize, it will have far reaching significance and be of lasting consequence. It is another sign of the times in which we live.



* MACDUFF REPORT

End Of An Era

OTTAWA— The Diefenbaker era is over, but it will take many months for the Conservative Party to decide where to go from here.

After last week's bitter battle, everyone is licking his wounds. The Party will never be the same after its public humiliation of the leader, but it is in no hurry to embark on the path to which it is now irretrievably committed.

Dalton Camp — the man who ensured that John Diefenbaker must go — is resting. There is no reason to hasten the next move, which must come from the old chieftain.

After fuming in his tent about the ultimate cruelty of political war, the formerly unsurpassed political warrior is back in his favorite house, the House of Commons. He shows no signs of giving up his leader's chair and no rival is yet ready to demand it.

Temporarily, John Diefenbaker can count on the support of the majority of the elected Conservative members. Most of them owe their seats to him alone, and it would take extraordinary inhumanity for them to forget it immediately.

Eventually, however, the new facts of Conservative life will assert their toll of reality. Members who seek to stay in politics will have to realign themselves with the views of the Conservative majority outside the House Many staunch Diefenbaker supporters are already beginning to do this.

Behind the battle lay one basic division of Conservative opinion. The Diefenbaker Loyalists believed there was no need to result the leader, who had done so much, with the call for a leadership convention because he would step down gracefully anyway — at a time not too far off when an heir was ready.

The Camp supporters considered this naive, wished thinking Having failed privately to get him to indicate a retirement date they concluded that a public confrontation — however distasteful — was the only way out.

The conference winners now expect him to recognize the reality and bow out at a time of his own choosing before next Fall. If he does not, Mr. Camp's national executive now has the power to set the date of a leadership convention.

Even before this is done, the spotlight will gradually shift to the new men who will seek the leader's mantle. Ontario Premier John Roberts is the front runner if only because he has the largest power base. But Mr. Roberts is as yet undeclared. He has a provincial election to dispose of first.

Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin is another strong possibility. He could expect the support of many of the winner, living in the Manning house formerly occupied by Mr. Joe Green.

The Elks Bingo at Smyth Monday night drew a good crowd in spite of the stormy weather. The lucky blackout winner was Mrs. Kerwas Golka, while Mrs. Aimee Moody won the door prize. The draw was made for two $50 bonds, these going to Ken MacDonald and Sue Mah.

Mrs. M. Vanelswaal has gone to Edmonton to spend the winter.

Busy Bees Club met with Charlotte Golka on Tuesday evening. The winners were Louise Thorp and Fanny Wilder.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Shultz and family have been transferred to Fawnburg. The Paul Dion family have moved to the house formerly occupied by the Shultz family.

Mrs. Herb Rombough spent some time in Edmonton with her mother Mrs. Bill Landals, while Mr. Landals was in hospital for surgery.

Correction — Mr. Archie MacDonald will be there in the Hardisty Auction Market in Mr. Wm. Grygolo of Carbondale, not Stettler.

Sedge. Council Nov. Meeting

SEDGEWICK — Mayor Bailey and all councillors were present for the regular council meeting of the Town of Sedgewick on Nov. 12.

Mr. L. Rombough was present, representing the Sedgewick Elks Club on a project which the Club is considering at the Recreation Centre. Tentative approval was given pending a thorough investigation into the feasibility of the proposed changes.

Minutes of the last meeting, Natural Gas Board, Flagstaff Lodge and Recreation Centre were read and approved.

Business tax and peddler licenses were discussed and a committee set up to recommend changes to the existing by-law.

It was decided to have the Gas Utility Man read the gas meters every month instead of every two, as this offers an added safety factor in that he might detect a hazard which is being overlooked by the customer. Starting the first of January 1967, there will be a monthly billing on Gas and Sewer accounts instead of every two months.

Council agreed to pay $300.00 towards the cost of the new water system installed at the Rec Centre.

General Account bills No. 814 to 872 and Gas Account bills No. 154 to 187 were passed for payment.

How we at Canada's First Bank put your savings dollars to work in 1966

Clyde Clark, Manager Sedgewick Branch Bank of Montreal

This is a personal report to the customers of my branch describing the way the Bank of Montreal employed the money you entrusted to us in 1966.

At the Bank's year-end on October 31st, 1966, the personal savings of people like yourself amounted to almost half of the total deposits of $4,905,388,152. This figure is another record high for Canada's First Bank in its 140 years of operation. Of that total, $3,278,897,060 was on loan to people in all walks of life.

What's more, $906,150,079 was invested in high-grade Government bonds and public securities which have a ready market, and $339,545,590 in other securities – mainly short-term credits to industry.

Yes, they were busy dollars those Savings dollars of yours . . . They were put right to work to help people improve their standard of living – by financing the purchase of cars, household goods of all kinds and home improvements – and to assist business size and small to expand, thus employing more people.

Your money went into new industries that created new jobs . . . helped farmers improve both their farms and their way of living . . . constructed new schools and helped students get a better education . . . aided fishermen to increase their catches and their incomes . . . built new roads and highways . . . supported community projects, large and small, of many kinds.

Your savings dollars worked hard in 1966 — hardest of all for you. And because they are steadily accumulating at interest they are building a sound investment for you and your family towards a better future.

Speaking for Canada's First Bank, may I say "Thank you" for your confidence in the B of M and for the support you're giving us as we work together to build a more prosperous Canada.

ST. PAUL'S U.C.W. PLANS FOR BAZAAR

HARDISTY — The November meeting of St. Paul's UCW was held in the church basement with 13 members and 4 visitors present.

The members were pleased to welcome Presbyterial officers, Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Gallagher of Edmonton, and Mrs. Atkin, president o fthe Provost UCW. These three women offered valuable help on programming and membership.

A program on Stewardship was presented by the convenor, Mrs. Drager, using the playlet "The Encounter", in which Mrs. Zwicker & Mrs. Edworthy took part. An interesting discussion followed.

During the business plans were made for the December Bazaar & Tea on December 3rd; also for the Christmas party on December 15. Contributions are to be sent to St. Stephen's College, Naramata, the Over and Above Gift, M & M Fund and also the annual christmas gift to the Manse. The supply allocation is to be purchased by the convenor, Mrs. Moulder, with limited items to be supplied by the members. Plans were made to purchase a Christmas centrepiece for use in the church, and also for a remembrance to a local youth who is to matriculate.

Meeting closed with a social hour during which lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Drager.

LIQUID FERTILIZER NOT ECONOMICAL!

Liquid fertilizers are not an economic form of supplying plant nutrients to cereal and forage crops in Alberta. At current prices, liquid fertilizers supply plant nutrients at more than five times the cost of nutrients in granular form. Although liquid fertilizers can be applied to the seed, to the row or to the leaves, none of these methods of application are economical. For example if 25 pounds of phosphate are required per acre it will require 2 gallons of 10-30-10 liquid fertilizer at a cost of $22.00 per acre. This amount of phosphate at 90 pounds of 11-48-0 granular fertilizer would cost less than $3.60 per acre. These figures are arrived at by using the liquid fertilizer weighing 15 pounds per gallon and costing $1.75 per gallon and granular fertilizer at $120 per ton.

The application of liquid fertilizer to cereal crops may present some problems. The required amounts of plant nutrients, for example 30 to 70 pounds of nitrogen and 25 pounds of phosphate, cannot be applied as a seed treatment. Seed treatment with the liquid fertilizer can supply only a few ounces of nutrients where many pounds are required. On the other hand, applying liquid fertilizer to the seed row can supply sufficient quantities provided adequate amounts of plant nutrients are added, say up to 10 gallons per acre. The application of liquid fertilizer to the leaves of cereal crops is limited in that the required amounts cannot be supplied entirely as foliar spray.

Tests in Alberta have shown that liquid and granular fertilizers are equally as effective in raising crop yields when equal amounts of plant nutrients are applied (Research Station results).

However, it has not proven to be economical at current prices of the liquid fertilizers. Fertilizers should always be purchased on the basis of their plant food content and not on the price per ton. Nutrients in the granular form in Alberta cost approximately 11, 8 and 5 cents per pound for nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium respectively. The equivalent costs using liquid fertilizer at $2.75 per gallon for 10-30-10 nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are 60, 50 and 40 cents per pound.

It is suggested that liquid fertilizers can be applied with herbicides and sprayed on the crop in one operation. Most selective herbicides should be sprayed early (5 to 6 leaf stage) and at a pressure of 30 to 35 pounds per square inch. Since the liquid fertilizer should be applied at a pressure of 70 p.s.i. and at a later stage of growth of the crop, mixing of herbicides and liquid fertilizers for one application is not too practical. Many herbicides are not effective when sprayed at high pressures due to complete volatization.

If farmers wish to try liquid fertilizers, they should plan to apply granular fertilizer in strips alongside, in which equal values or equal quantities of plant food are used. Farm tests of this type can be quite revealing.

much wrong with the present system whereby a boy of 15 to 20 years of age become tied for life in rendering his athletic abilities to some team or organization with little or no recourse to release should he not be happy.

Senator Molson and others in the top echelon of hockey today came in for criticism from Mr. Gumberg for their stand that Canada should retire from International competition simply because her teams have been taking a few lickings. He implored that it was no disgrace to lose, but it most certainly is a disgrace to quit because you don't win. He spent much time discussing the National Hockey Team of Canada and felt convinced that if the proper methods and procedures are followed in the future that Canada will once again reach the top in (ice national) competition. It was his opinion that the Western Major Junior League is a step in the right direction and will result in the betterment of hockey in Canada at all age and status levels.

Mr. Lew Anderson again thanked all who attended, and intimated that the success of the venture assured that the event would become an annual affair.

rond allowance would cost about $15,000 00 He said it appeared wise to hold the matter of construction of the road in abeyance pending the completion of a study

Secretary informed that maps for the Rural Road Study Area No. 13 as instructed by the M. D. had been forwarded to the Villages of Heisler, Forestburg, Galahad and Alliance. Letters from Forestburg & Galahad informed council that their councils were in favor of the East-West, North-South road system, as shown on Plan B. Heisler also favored Plan B, but recommended the road from Heisler south be moved one mile east of where is was presently shown on the map. It was moved that the road system shown on Plan B be accepted as the most satisfactory for the southern area, and that the revision as recommended by Village of Heisler be approved. The motion carried.

The priority to be given the roads as recommended by the Road Study Group was discussed further, and it was moved and passed that the road south from Daysland to the Dosdela road west of Forestburg be given first priority with the remaining roads left as previously designated.

Letter from Alberta Municipal Financing Corp. advised that the Board had decided that for 1967 the purchase of debentures by the Corporation would not exceed $50 per capita for any M. D. borrowing, due to the tight money situation.

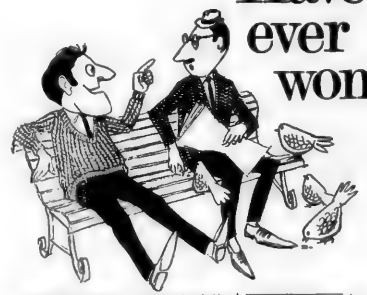
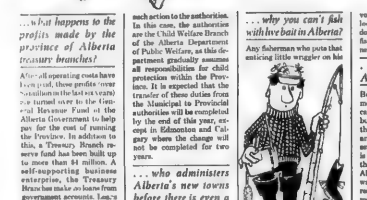
C. B. ROBERTSON,
Secretary-Treasurer. 20 1 c

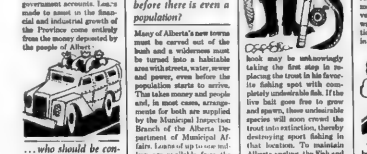


Have you ever wondered...



...what happens to the profits made by the province of Alberta treasury branches?

After all operating costs have been paid, these profits (over $2 million in the last six years) are turned over to the General Revenue Fund of the Alberta Government to help pay for the cost of running the Province. In addition to this, a Treasury Branch reserve fund has been built up to more than $4 million. A self-supporting business enterprise, the Treasury Branches make no loans from government accounts. Loans made to assist in the financial and industrial growth of the Province come entirely from the money deposited by the people of Alberta.



...who should be concerned about Alberta's "neglected children"?

YOU should be. It is the duty of every Albertan to help prevent any child from being harmed through neglect or ill-treatment and, under the terms of The Child Welfare Act, it is obligatory to report such action to the authorities. In this case, the authorities are the Child Welfare Branch of the Alberta Department of Public Welfare, as this department gradually assumes all responsibilities for child protection within the Province. It is expected that the transfer of these duties from the Municipal to Provincial authorities will be completed by the end of this year, except in Edmonton and Calgary where the change will not be completed for two years.

...who administers Alberta's new towns before there is even a population?

Many of Alberta's new towns must be carved out of the bush and a wilderness must be turned into a habitable area with streets, water, sewer and power, even before the population starts to arrive.

This takes money and people and, in most cases, arrangements for both are supplied by the Municipal Inspection Branch of the Alberta Department of Municipal Affairs. Loans of up to one million are available from the Branch form a Board of Administrators which will oversee the growth of the town until the population and property become sufficient for the local residents to assume control

...why you can't fish with live bait in Alberta?

Any fisherman who puts that enticing little wriggler on his hook may be unknowingly taking the first step in replacing the trout in his favorite fishing spot with completely undesirable fish. If the live bait goes free to grow and spawn, these undesirable species will soon crowd the trout into extinction, thereby destroying sport fishing in that location. To maintain Alberta angling, the Fish and Wildlife Division, Department of Lands and Forests, plant two to three million trout in Provincial waters each year. Half a million of these are yearlings, seven to eight inches long, the rest, fingerlings. This year, plants were made in 11 children's ponds, 105 lakes and reservoirs, 91 beaver ponds, 13 locations where spawning does not take place, and 3 fish-populated areas where new species were introduced

...who measures Alberta?

Before homesteaders can move in, before communities can be started or subdivisions built or roads constructed, the land has to be measured and boundary monuments established. To see that this is done properly is the job of the Surveys Branch of the Alberta Department of Highways. In addition to being responsible for the establishment of base lines and surveying of townships and highways, the Branch has direction over all surveying done in the Province under the Alberta Surveys Act, and examines all plans of survey to ensure their compliance with that Act. The results of all this work are recorded on plans which are registered in the Land Titles Office and subsequently reflected in a variety of maps produced by the Mapping Division of the Surveys Branch.

...who's fighting the war on weeds?

Alberta farmers wouldn't have much chance of winning their war against weeds if the enemy could keep calling up reinforcements from uncultivated roadsides and abandoned lands. And home weeds down in those "no man's lands", the Weed Control Section of the Plant Industry Division, Alberta Department of Agriculture, supplies ammonium thiocyanate and technical to individual farmers. Effective weed control chemicals are provided at cost to municipal authorities and at less than cost to farmers to encourage them to eliminate patches of dangerous weeds in uncultivated ground. A special spraying program kills weeds along roadsides and these areas are kept free of weeds by sowing appropriate mixtures of grass seed supplied to the municipalities by the Provincial government.

Behind The Scenes

There is one charge that many newspapers are guilty of - especially the weeklies - and that is failing to explain themselves and the basic principles on which they operate. Surprisingly this charge is seldom made. The result is that those in the profession tend to assume that their readers understand and so explanations, or statements of policy, are rarely made.

Over the years new crops of readers come along to whom no explanations have ever been offered. The result is that the fog tends to become pretty thick at times.

Unfortunately there are a few papers which completely disregard the basic interests of the newspaper profession - that was once tagged as the Fourth Estate by a British prime minister. Such papers add a lot of murk to the fog that beclouds the understanding of other papers.

Probably the least understood thing about newspapers - dailies or weeklies - is the separation that exists between an editorial, which this is, and the news content of the paper.

The opinion of the paper is never expressed except in an editorial. If such an expression of opinion is considered important enough to go on the front page, it must carry a line at the top stating that it is an editorial.

To those who learned the profession under sincere and capable mentors, this seems so obvious that they forget it is rarely explained to the readers.

Countless young reporters have had their stories toned back or them their heads eaten off by city editors because they inadvertently expressed their own opinion in a report.

All an editor wants from a reporter is who, what, where, when and how?

Opinions may be expressed in a news story, but they must be the opinions of the people who are named. A reporter may rightly say that Joe Blow expressed the opinion that the bridge which had just collapsed was in the wrong place from the start, but he must quote Joe Blow. He can not express this opinion without stipulating who it is. If he finds that many share this opinion about the bridge, he may say that such is the case but he should bolster this statement at least a few names and direct quotations.

A good paper and good reporter will be fair enough to say that there are others who believe the bridge was in the right place. They too should be quoted if they can be found and will make a state ment.

If the paper feels strongly about the blasted bridge, it may express its opinion in an editorial- but only in an editorial.

Here is where the first sidetrack in unethical journalism takes off. Papers published for political or various personal reasons, tend to distort their presentations of news by presenting only the facts that suit them — Pembina Herald.

Honor Fr. McCarthy On Fortieth Year

BEST IN ALBERTA — The Sedgewick Cadet Corps has been judged the best in Alberta, out of a total of 54 Corps in the Province. This is the fifth time the local Corps has won the Award, which is the highest honor attainable in the province. R. B. Bennett Shield, shown here being presented by C. S. B. Hutchinson, president of the Sedgewick Legion, and Cadet Lt. Doug Bailey, by Captain Ron Masters, C. T. O., Northern Alberta.

On November 18th, 1926, Reverend Father McCarthy celebrated the 40th anniversary of his arrival in Killam. He celebrated a Mass of Thanksgiving in Killam at 4:30 p. m., at which were present His Grace Archbishop A. Jordan, D. M. I. and Father McCarthy's sister Rev Sister Edeltrude, Sister of Zoo from Saskatoon. Mr. B Engel on behalf of the parishioners, presented Father with a beautiful ciborium and gave a history of the parish since Fr. McCarthy's arrival

In the evening an anniversary banquet was held in Strome Elks Hall Grace was said by Archbishop Jordan ,and toasts to the Queen and to Fr McCarthy were given by Fr. M Heiferman of Hardisty. Approximately 143 persons attended. Former members of the parish returned to honor Fr. McCarthy Letters from the U.C.W. catered to the banquet The ushers were Ed Kroetsch. Michael Niehaus and Joe Eshpeter

The head table was centered with a beautiful anniversary cake, flanked on either side by tall white candles and yellow mums. The cake was the art of Mrs. Norman Zimmel, the top of which was an altar, beside a mass server, with steps of red carpet leading down the table, displaying 40 years of service. At the head table sat His Grace Archbishop Jordan, Fr. McCarthy, Fr. Schmaltzhaus, Fr. Kroetch, Fr. Heffernan, Sister Edeltrude, Sister Justina, Sister Mary Kevin and C. P. Hayes.

Mr. C. P. Hayes was master of Entertainment was provided by the Camrose Northern-aires The decorations, the work of Joe Granlick, depicted a fall theme. Beautifully executed posters contained greetings for the 40th anniversary

Presentations included a spiritual bouquet and a Mass to honor him, presented by Mrs. Lorraine Lereau from the C.W.L., and a beautiful Alb presented by Mr. Vernon Kepler on behalf of the parishioners

Rev. Peterson, United Church Minister, gave an inspiring address of congratulations to Fr. McCarthy.

Greetings from the Archdiocese were given by Archbishop Jordan, from the Deanery by Fr. Schmaltzhaus; from the ex-parishioners by Fr. Kroetch and from the parish by Mr. C. P. Hayes.

After the banquet there was an informal gathering of old and new friends. Present for the occasion were Fr. MacDonald of Camrose. Fr Bryden of Galahad, Fr Elsbo of Viking and Fr Hickey, Heister. Fr Elkin of Daysland, and the Sisters from Killam and Galahad.

At the conclusion Fr McCarthy thanked all who were responsible for such an entertaining evening

HEY! THAT BALL'S HOT — Not really, and another girl hesitated to grab it, as it might appear in the picture. This was some of the action in a recent basketball game between Central High and Donalda. Both Central's girls and boys teams won their games against Donalda.

"Bob" Clark Reviews New Ministry Of Youth

KILLAM — The Hon. "Bob" Clark, Minister of Youth for Alberta, gave a comprehensive review of his department and the things it hopes to accomplish for the province., in an address to a rather limited crowd at Killam last week. The public meeting was sponsored by the Sedgewick-Coronation Young Social Creditors as part of their current year program.

Pending the arrival of Mr. Clark, the audience was entertained with films on Wildlife and Basketball, along with vocal solos by Miss Byble Larson.

Mr. Robert Barth, Vice-President of the Killam Board of Trade, welcomed the speaker to Killam, and made a presentation to him. Doug Munro introduced the speaker and a presentation was made to him by Elner Brandingen on behalf of the Young Social Credit group.

At the conclusion of the evening coffee and doughnuts were served.

The Hon. Mr. Clarke said that it was the aim of the ministry to get you"h activities grouped under one program, which would include such things as training for leadership, physical fitness, cultural and business affairs and sports leadership.

The speaker said that he was elected a member of the government six years ago and appointed to the cabinet in July of 1986, and since that time has seen changes in the Junior Forestry program and the 4-H Club work which has been under the Dept. of Agriculture. He emphasized the fact that 4-H work would be carried on with the full partnership of District Agriculturists and Home Economists and that the program would be enlarged Athletics and Recreation would be carried out through a Community Services Branch working in co-operation with groups at the local level where definite programs and facilities were now being managed

While not lingering at length on a current problem of society, that of Juvenile Delinquency, he stated that while the problem did exist, that the situation was being caused by less than ten percent of the young people, and that basically 90 percent were non-offenders.

A Royal Commission has been conducting hearings of the problem and seeking solutions. Out of it so far has come the need for leadership training, an overall co-ordination of activities, and some research into the various programs to find out just how well they work.

Mr. Clark said that as far as he can ascertain there is no shortage of youth serving organizations, but that the fault seems to be too much concentration on one age group, to the neglect of other age groups, many of whom are attached to no definite organized activities.

He mentioned the Alberta Service Corps, set up to train youth at the University, to go out into the field during the summer and assist and direct youth activities, along with a Youth Advisory Committee which will co-ordinate suggestions for the use of departmental heads.

The Research Branch will work with the human relations branch to make a better us of the province's human resources, by education.

Representatives of the Youth Department will be appointed through the provinces to work at the local level and be responsible to the Department Heads., to activate programs.

A.P. Blatz Re-Elected Councillor

SEDGEWICK — An unofficial news release from the M. D. Flagstaff office, announces the winner of the recent election in Division 7, as the sitting member. Alex Blatz.

The election was held on December 3rd, and figures released show Mr. Blatz with 197, and Mr. Vernon Kapler with 138.

Minutes Of Regular School Board Meeting

A regular meeting of the Board of Killam School Division was held at the Divisional office with all members of the board and the Supt. at-tendance.

The matter of borrowing money from Municipal Finance Corp. for covering expenses to date on the proposed new office, was tabled to the next meeting when the actual expenditures may be available.

The resignation of Mrs. Helen Ness was accepted.

The chairman and Supt. were authorized to attend a meeting with the Wainwright School Board re discussing the joint hiring of an Audio Visual Technician.

Chairman Nicholas reported that a committee had attended a meeting in Edmonton with the Dept. of Education to discuss the bus route that the Forestburg Consolidated S. D. was operating outside their boundaries over routes travelled regularly by Divisional buses, picking up children for which no tuition or transportation agreement had been made with the district Information received was that under present regulations Forestburg would not receive the transportation grant for these children, and neither would anyone else, but Forestburg would collect the pupil grant averaging at $75 per pupil for the 16 involved. Loss in revenue to the Division is about $400 per pupil per year, and will become an additional burden on the taxpayers of the Division. Secretary was ordered to write a letter to parents concerned in the affair, directing their children to attend our schools and pointed out also the loss in revenue to the Division.

Trustees Grant and Niehaus were official delegates to the Convention in Calgary in November. Approval was also given for attendance by any other trustee, secretary and the Superintendent.

Mr. Steve, principal, was given a leave of absence for 4 days to attend a meeting of the committee re-

Extra Holidays At Christmas

A letter from the Retail Merchants Association of Alberta points out that Christmas falls on Sunday this year, and, as a result the Government of Alberta has declared both Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 26 and 27 as holidays.

The Press understands that this will have effect wherever the local municipality does not have a "Holiday" By-law specifying otherwise.

It is expected that the government will also declare Monday, January 2nd as a holiday, but this has not been done as yet, and unless the necessary order-in-council is passed January 2nd will not be a holiday

T. Sveinson Reports For Killam B. of T.

KILLAM — We know it's getting close to Christmas, and this usually brings on human actions that are unpredictable. The Community Press didn't fell ill the weight, yet, it just got fed up in its report of the annual box of tricks meeting. In listing the citizens elected to the board of directors, the names of the following were left out: Adolph Schaffer, Reuben Link, Tom Sveinson and Bill Larson. Carson-Larson got mixed up too. No Mr. Carson was elected to the board. It was the one and only Lan Larsen.

Well, there you are Tom. Now we hope it's right, and we can go on to enjoy the prelude to Christmas.

Parental Authority!

Can it be said that the Canadian family is preparing the young for adult life in a more effective way than ever before? Perhaps the sacredness of human personality is not only stressed, but practised today in an increasing number of families. Children are no longer simply pawns in the life-size game of chess. They are individuals with rights commensurate with their maturity. They are letting this be known, and authority of parents has become more responsive to the opinions of youth, but in most cases it has not become weakened. Mostly it is real and influential. It is no longer simply heavy-handed and assertively loud. This is well. Authority depends more on example, than "do as I say not as I do". Parents today are using other means, mostly, than dominating assertiveness, for many are engaged in the work of strengthening the influences which tend to produce the personality they find attractive in the young.

It is unfortunate that news media must report the youth who rebel, who are court cases, who cause trouble to parental authority, but we should remember that this group is not in the majority. Older children, if consulted, can often give very real insight into the problems involving younger family members. They are more in touch with pressures of school and general authority. They can communicate the desires of the young far more accurately than adults who were reared in an entirely different generation.

Know Your Canada

World trouble started in 1938 when the Sudeten areas were occupied by Germany. In March of 1939 Czechoslavakia was invaded by Germany. That summer the King and Queen visited Canada and the U. S.; in August a German-Russian non-aggression pact was signed. Sept. 1st Poland was invaded by Germany, and on Sept. 3rd war with Germany was declared by the United Kingdom and Canada. On Sept. 10th Canada declared war upon Germany and on Dec. 17th Canadian troops landed in the United Kingdom.

In 1940 the last bastion of male supremacy fell when women were granted the franchise in Quebec provincial elections.

Germany attacked Russia on June 22, 1941, and on Aug. 14th The Atlantic Charter was signed by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt aboard the British battleship Prince of Wales. On Dec. 7th the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor; Canada declared war with Roumania, Hungary, Finland and Japan. On Dec. 11th Germany, Italy & the U. S. formally declared war.

On August 19th, 1942 Canadian troops supported by British, U. S. and French troops made a raid on Dieppe. The Canadian casualties were 3350 out of 5000 engaged. On July 10th, 1943 British, Canadian and U. S. men invaded Sicily and on September 8th Italy surrendered.

In March of 1944 Lt.-Gen. H. Crerar was appointed to command the First Canadian Army and on June 6th Allied armies invaded Europe and the First Canadian Army commenced operations in Normandy as a separate army.

ABOUT MOST ANYTHING

Just recently the Community Press has received complimentary copies of two books which contain so much information it is doubtful if we will ever completely peruse either. They will be very handy references for information, especially in writing editorials. The first is a 471 page history of the Bank of Montreal, which sets out the 130-year history of the bank in terms of Canadian economic and political history, and gives a fresh insight into the country's development. The second is a loose-leaf binder type of book called "A Farm Business Digest," which is published by the United Grain Growers and covers everything from weather forecasting to farm economics, from a history of the 29d Tinners in the West to Agricultural Engineering. To the newspaper published in a farming area the UGG book should prove very valuable.

Christmas and its custom of giving gifts, presents different problems for everyone, and lately the largest of these is deciding what to give to each person. This year for the first time I and I'm running into new lines my father had many years ago, but which is new to me. This is finding a place to keep the gifts until Christmas arrives. My children are old enough now so that just putting things up on a shelf isn't any good. There is no space in the house they can't get at, and although they know better than to open anything, all that pinching, poking, shaking, and maybe dropping on the floor can raise the devil with any present. In past years all I had to do was keep their mother from finding out what her gift was, but this year I find the problem has multiplied three-fold.

Head Of Steam Building UP

There are indications farmers are rapidly building up a head of steam that may prove powerful enough to change some present trends of thinking in certain sections of Western Canada business circles.

The head generating this steam is the recently adopted policy of some major farm implement firms in which not their dealerships in small towns and concentrate on big dealerships in big towns or cities.

The result is that many farmers will have to make a round trip of as much as a hundred or more miles to get repairs — some of which may be worth less than the cost of the trip.

This is not merely a trivial annoyance. A trip will involve at least three hours at a time when it is almost impossible to estimate the cost of lost hours in the field. It is no exaggeration to say that the value of this time is, under certain circumstances, could be fifty to a hundred times the amount of the repair part needed.

Add to this the sad fact that sometimes the part does not help when you try to put it on — changes in models, part numbers, and human errors make this by no means a rare occurrence. That involves another long and expensive trip with the chance that even then the right part will have to be gotten from bigger stocks somewhere else.

This is what makes a farmer feel that he has to be the ground, jump up and down on it, and threaten mayhem and revolution.

The same problem is involved when a farmer has to buy new machinery from some distant centre. It is seldom that a new machine can be made to work right without a lot of adjusting and tuning by an expert. It these super-dealerships are going to serve their farm customers efficiently they will have to establish such a big staff of travelling trouble-shooters that there will be mighty little profit left in the centralized project.

This idea was tried out in Central Alberta some ten or fifteen years ago. The firm trying it is no longer in business.

Such organizations as the United Grain Growers and the Farmers' Union of Alberta are reported to be thinking on remedi-

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Tough Hombre

OTTAWA— Seventy-one Progressive Conservative elected members of parliament have asked John Diefenbaker to continue as national leader of the Conservative Party.

By this action they have given directly against the feeling manifested at the annual meeting of the Party in mid-November. That convention while endorsing Mr. Diefenbaker as leader for the time being coupled the motion with a provision that there be a national leadership convention called before January 1, 1968.

This was a slap at Mr. Diefenbaker and was calculated to start the process of unseating him.

The younger elements of the Party went away from the convention strongly self-satisfied. They thought they had settled the "old man" once and for all. But it was only a few days later that this self-same young element in the Party was complaining "He's dead but he won't lie down".

Mr. Diefenbaker is a veteran of many political battles. He carries scarcs of scars inflicted in the fighting that goes on continually in all political parties. But in the Conservative party the blood-letting becomes downright violent. That Party is prone to kicking its leaders when they are down and pounding them in public until they are humiliated beyond what any man in political life should be expected to endure.

However in the person of John Diefenbaker the Tory party has discovered a tough hombre from the West who refuses to remain beaten to a pulp. He keeps coming back for more and springing into life just when his political opponents think he is finished.

Thus when everyone appeared to have written off Mr. Diefenbaker as down and out and ready to retire, the wily veteran of the political wars was working behind the scenes with his lieutenants. Gordon Churchill the Conservative Member of Parliament for Winnipeg South Centre let it be known that there was a decision and up in his office which those supporting Mr. Diefenbaker as leader, could sign.

There are 95 elected members of the Conservative caucus.

After one week Mr. Churchill announced that 71 of the elected members of the caucus had signified their support. Twenty-one did not sign as the document was restricted to elected members of the caucus.

The preamble to the document read: "We the undersigned members of Parliament of the Progressive Conservative party, request that the Rt. Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker continue as leader of our Party."

There are 34 members of the Tory caucus who did not sign. They include four former members of the cabinet that served under Mr. Diefenbaker when he was Prime Minister — R. D. Fulton, former Justice Minister; Douglas Harkness, former Defence Minister; Marcel Lambert former Veteran Affairs Minister and Richard Bell former Immigration Minister.

Among those signing were 7 members of the caucus who were in Mr. Diefenbaker's Cabinet. They were J. W. Monteith, former Health Minister; Hugh John Fleming, former Minister of Forestries; Gordon Churchill, former Trade Minister; Walter Dinsdale former Northern Affairs Minister; George Hees former Transport Minister; Alvin Hamilton, former Agriculture Minister, and J. Angus MacLean, form er Fisheries Minister.

By its action the majority of the caucus has challenged the action of the national executive. This opens up the Party to a serious split. The Members of Parliament supporting Mr. Diefenbaker contend that the caucus is supreme. But there are those who argue that the Party's association decides who is to be leader.

The document — Mr. Churchill says it is not a petition — could have two meanings: (1) It could be a declaration that the members of Parliament want Mr. Diefenbaker to stay as party leader regardless of what the Conservative association does about holding a leadership convention. (Mr. Diefenbaker is believed to be determined to stay. He may end up by splitting the Party in two.)

(2) The document could be an expression of a wish by the M.P.'s who make up the caucus that he not resign pending the leadership convention which will be called sometime next year.

But this latter interpretation is flatly rejected by the pro-Diefenbaker members of the caucus. They point out that it has no time limit on how long they will support him as national leader.

It is only in recent years that the Conservative party has chosen its leaders at Party conventions. It was in 1927 when R. B. Bennett was selected. Since then the Conservatives have chosen their leaders at conventions of the Party delegates.

But Mr. Diefenbaker may seek to reverse the process and turn back the pages of political history. He has been endorsed by an overwhelming majority of his caucus as their leader despite the lack of confidence in his host ership conferred by the recent national convention.

Heartened by this action of all caucus the "Chief" will fight on. His critics and political enemies within the Tory party may eventually destroy him but it may well be that they destroy their own Party with the destruction of their leader.

Meantime the New Democratic Party sits back and benefits from this turmoil. They hope to scramble into power as the effective opposition over the wreckage of the Conservative party.

Make a change for the better...
Falcon '67

The nicest thing about buying a Falcon is that you get a lot of car for your money. Sure Falcon is a compact — but it rides more smoothly, runs more quietly than any compact has a right to: that's why it's called "the limousine of the compacts."

And if loving it up and saving a little at the same time appeals to you, then Falcon is your kind of car. Did you realize that on Falcon you can get just about every luxury option the biggest cars offer? And generally pay less!

Falcon offers you bucket seats, headrests, full carpeting, all-vinyl interiors, a Stereo-Tape System, vinyl roof, power steering, power drum brakes, power front disc brakes . . . and all the rest for big power, order one of Falcon's two 289 cu. in V-8's. Performance is sparkling and economical!

And to put this sparkling, economical power into action, choose a 3- or 4-speed manual or 3-speed SelectShift Cruise-O-Matic transmission that lets you shift manually (a feature many big cars can't even offer).

It's a fast-moving, luxury-loving life with Falcon. Go talk to your Ford or Mercury Dealer about a new Falcon. He'll show you how to get a lot of car for your money.

BEEF CATTLE NEED SHELTER

Beef cattle can withstand low temperatures because of their body makeup, but for the best gains they should be protected from the wind and rain. Dr. S. B. Slen, head of the animal science section at Lethbridge Experimental Station, says.

Cattle, Dr. Slen says, can resist cold reasonably well. This is partly because they are large which is an advantage in saving heat. In addition, cattle have a good heat exchange between the arteries and veins in the body. Cattle have a hair coat which holds air and helps insulate them from the cold. Finally, cattle have a high rate of heat production per unit of surface area.

When temperatures go below the comfort zone of 40 to 60 degrees fahrenheit, cattle must produce extra heat to maintain body temperature. This requires some of the energy of the feed. The result is that winter gains are usually less efficient than summer gains. When this is complicated by rain, snow, mud, wind and fluctuating temperatures, heat losses are increased.

In the cold, Dr. Slen says, body temperature and heart rate tend to increase and the breathing rate goes down. To protect cattle from wind and snow and rain, Dr. Slen recommends building 10-foot high fence with spaces between boards or slabs to let the wind through. He suggests using an eight-inch board or slab and allowing a two-inch open space.

This fence plus covered bedding can gain 4 pounds of feed per day over cattle with no bedding, according to results obtained by Dr. C.M. Williams of the animal science department of Saskatchewan.

Dr. Williams said this .5 pounds daily gain was more than enough to cover the extra charge for bedding and manure removal.

The Saskatchewan researcher has estimated the following profits from steers supplied with bedding:

Cost of bedding for straw at $12 a ton was $2.75 per steer. The extra gain from bedded steers which gained 97 pounds more at 20.2c per pound was $15.86. The increased profit from bedding was $13.21.

Dr. Williams said he concluded from his experiment that bedding for yearling steers can be recommended as an economic practice. The advantages for shelter are not as great as the bedding, but a minimum of board fence seems advisable. Bedded steers will reach the market grade two weeks earlier than those not bedded.

Don Myrehaug Wed At Tilley, Alta.

Bouquets of white and yellow gladioli decorated Bethany Lutheran Church in Tilley, August 20, for the afternoon ceremony which united in marriage Joanne Hendrickson of Brooks and Donald Myrehaug of Sedgewick.

Jeans, Joy of Man's Desiring" sung by Linda Sharpe, began the service Then, to the organ strains of "Trumpet Voluntary", the bridal maids, Irene Myrehaug, sister of the groom Diane Hanton, of Tilley, and the maid of honor, Lorraine Hendrickson, sister of the bride, preceeded the bride to the altar The three attendants were identically attired in sleeveless, floor-length gowns, empire styled in green duchess satin. A floor length train fell from a bow of the same material at the empire waistline. Their bouquets and head Lands were of white shasta daisies Wrist length white gloves and dainty pearl necklaces and earrings completed their ensembles

Led to the alter by her father to the accompaniment of "Trumpet Tune", the bride was radiant in a floor length gown of white nylon organza over satin Her veil of silk illusion misted from a headpiece of silk illusion petals and seed pearls Her gown was simply styled with a slim skirt jewel neckline & bilypoint sleeves Floral lace appliques and a soft nylon bow at the waist accented the front of her dress while a flowing train of nylon organza over satin fell from a pretty arrangement of nylon petals at the back. A pearl necklace and ear-rings, gifts from the groom, a bouquet of red tea roses and white gladioli completed her ensemble

The groom's attendants were Peter Myrehaug of Sedgewick, Rod Schalt of Camrose, and Harold Myrehaug, also of Sedgewick

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Hendrickson chose a two-piece dress of blue lace over taffeta, a matching blue hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. M. Myrehaug, mother of the groom, wore a dress and jacket ensemble of pink linen, white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses

During the signing of the register, Linda sang, "The Wedding Prayer" accompanied by the organist, Dave Knudson The happy wedding party left the church sanctuary to Larg. Ekert's. "Now Thank We All Our God "

The church parlour, decorated with green, yellow and white satin ribbons and bows was the setting for the reception following. The bride's table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake, decorated by groom's mother. A lovely lunch was served by the Bethany LCW to the many guests from Tilley, Brooks, Calgary, Sedgewick, Camrise, Edmonton, Jasper, Hay Lakes, Viking, Wainwright, Wetaskiwin, and Alsask Saskatchewan Donna Hendrickson, cousin of the bride, was master of ceremonies. Arvel Loberg proposed the toast to the bride.

For their honeymoon trip to Banff and Jasper the bride chose a three piece going away suit of muted green wool with grey plaid trim Dark grey accessories and black leather gloves completed the outfit

FORMER SEDGEWICK MAN HEADS CANADA'S LARGEST ATOMIC PLANT

Mr John Leroy (Roy) Olsen, son of Mr and Mrs Lind Olsen of Camrose, and formerly of Sedgewick, has been appointed general manager of Canada's largest experimental organization in the nuclear power field which employes more than 300 men. General Electric's Atomic Power Department was responsible for the design and construction at Nuclear Power Demonstration, Canada's first power reactor, operating since 1962.

A native of Sedgewick, Roy grew up in the "hungry thirties" and took his high school and university training in much shorter time than usual graduating with a B. Sc. degree in mechanics from the University of B C. He served with the R.C.A.F. for 4 1/2 years during World War II, in Canada, Bournemouth, England, and the West Indies.

Mr Olsen has been associated with Canadian General Electric since 1950, and since then with the company's work in the field of nuclear energy His early assignments included manager of facilities engineering at G.E.'s turbine plant at Downsview, and with the industrial power division

Mr Olsen was a member of the original team of 14 who formed the nucleus of the present atomic power department in 1955. After two years as liaison engineer at Atomic Energy of Canada at Chalk River Nuclear Laboratory, he was named manager of marketing for the Atomic Power Department in July, 1965, from which position he moved up to his appointment as general manager.

World Traveller

An experienced world traveller, Mr Olsen is a familiar figure to many international electrical utilities and government agencies. He has circled the globe four times, visiting more than 20 countries to promote the sale of CGE's nuclear power reactor, and played a vital role in negotiating one of the largest overseas contracts ever undertaken by Canadian industry — the sale by CGE of a complete nuclear generating station in Pakistan. His most recent trip was to Finland this summer Roy was the organizer of the Venture Project held in Peterborough last month when atomic engineers from 14 different countries participated The project is a plan to sharply increase Canadian exports of nuclear products.

Mr Olsen resides in Peterborough and has two children, Greg 17 and Brenda 13. He visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lind Olsen, and sister, Mrs. Norma Olsen in Camrose this past summer and expects to return to attend the golden wedding anniversary of his parents this week.

Food And Shelter

The Ottawa committee that is attempting to find out what is happening to living costs, and why, has selected foods as its first field of interest — retailing, wholesaling and manufacturing. It would be a good move if the committee next turned its attention to housing.

Apart from household operations and supplies, the Bureau of Statistics report on the cost of shelter only is pretty startling.

Based on 1949 as 100, tenant costs are up by 48 per cent and home-ownership costs by 77 per cent. Under the latter heading, property taxes are up by 76 per cent, mortgage interest by 22 per cent, repairs by 88 per cent, new houses by 89 per cent and personal property insurance by 58 per cent.

Food and shelter are the two essentials of life. After the Ottawa committee finds out all it can about food, it should tackle the problem of shelter in Canada today. — Brooks Bulletin

Alex Redman 90th Birthday Honored

Mr. Alex Redman who was ninety years old on November. 30th, celebrated his birthday at his home in Hardisty on Sunday.

Daughter, Betty-Lou, together with Bob, Linda-Lou and Sally Morgan of Calgary, and some sixty friends from Sedgewick, Lougheed, Rosyth, Amisk, and Hughenden, as well as from Hardisty and district were present.

At the social gathering last Sunday in his honor, Mrs. R. J. Harrison and Mrs. Bev Rempel poured. The table was covered with a most beautiful Italian hand-cut cloth, centered with a gorgeous flower arrangement. The flowers were presented by the Hardisty U.C.W. The flowers were flanked by a candle bra holding six candles on each side. There was also the traditional delicious Birthday cake

The open house was sponsored by the Hardisty U.C.W. who presented the guest of honor with a lovely bouquet of flowers and a box of chocolates.

B. of Trade Protests Over Coast Strike

SEDGEWICK — Through its Executive Committee, acting for the organization, the Sedgewick District Board of Trade and Agriculture last week took action relating to the unfortunate and somewhat unpalatable Longshoremen Performance strike on the West Coast. The Executive Committee felt the government should take strong and prompt action to avoid further crippling of the whole economy of the nation, especially as it affects the Western Provinces. The strike was blocking all grain shipments to the West Coast terminals and seriously affecting the government's delivery commitments to our foreign wheat sales, as well as import commodities needed by our people. The committee felt the government should not hesitate to take any legal action possible to keep the distribution system of our country operating at normal levels, while negotiations were going on.

The following telegrams were sent to Minister of Labor, the Hon. Mr. Nicholson, and to our M. P., Mr Smallwood:

Hon Mr. Nicholson, Ottawa.

Longshoreman strike appalling. Request immediate government steps to halt same.

Mr. C. Smallwood, Ottawa.

We think the B. C. Longshoremen strike outrageous. Request you urge government to intervene immediately. Strike is crippling economy of all Western Canada. Can interim administration be established. Your constituency here adversely affected and deeply concerned.

Copies of these messages were sent to Prime Minister Pearson. It is difficult to determine how we can effect these telegrams, together with hundreds of others that were sent from the area will have. but it is noteworthy that a settlement of the strike was announced shortly afterwards, as a direct result of government pressure on management and labor.

The Board of Trade and Agriculture is eager to be of any service possible to the community, and will welcome suggestions.

A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO '67

By Tracy S. Lucington

Any day — for six months in summer '67 — you can see the wonders of 70 countries of the world in Montreal and have the time of your life doing it !

Pausing for a moment to think of it — Montreal is in a most strategic location for the greatest show on earth. It is the world's largest inland seaport, home of the world's two largest transportation corporations, and on the international air map, Montreal is the air-crossroads of the world !

Now with the opening day of April 28 a half-year away, enthusiasm for Expo is mounting at a steadily and rapidly-increasing rate, in the city of Montreal itself, throughout Quebec province generally, and Expo-philia is spreading all across this country.

From the outset, and through the preliminary period of gestation, a great deal of the Expo story had to be taken on faith. True, the International Exhibitions Bureau had authorized an Exhibition of the 1st Category outside of Europe for the very first time — but the very magnitude of the undertaking was beggaring for many to grasp, and the task of developing man-made areas in the mighty St. Lawrence River appeared to some too great to be capable of achievement.

During the first week of October, however, the word was flashed: Expo will be ready on time !

Immediately there was a great upsurge of interest in all parts of Canada, so great an upsurge in fact that the over-all total in fact attendance forecast was upped from 30,-000,000 to 35,000,000.

And on the fabulous site, like mushrooms on a spring lawn, the Theme buildings, the National Pavilions, bridges, harbors, underground surface-level and overhead transportation systems are springing into view as if by magic, in all their weird and wonderfull forms.

Many Canadians visited the Chicago, Seattle and New York World Fairs — those were largely commercial and not sanctioned by the International Exhibition as a Bureau some Canadians visited the Paris and Brussels Exhibitions, but these were in Europe, and travel was a costly business.

Expo '67 is in Canada. Expo '67 is next summer — with Montreal's location and today's modern transportation. Expo '67 is at every Canadian's door-step

Looking over the long list of fabulous features being prepared for the visitors to Expo, one realizes immediately that superlatives have lost their meaning in the attempt to do justice to a great many of the individual exhibits. Never before has the genius of so many lands been assembled at one place at one time.

A day, a week, even a month would not suffice to see every phase of all exhibits being set up for Montreal's 'greatest show on earth' — but in full realization of this, arrangements have been made so that the visitor may select, and having selected, be freely transported to the land of his or her desires.

Daily there are new news bombshells about Expo — the possibility that U.S. President Johnson will open the American Pavilion for example — and weekly in this column will be gathered the most titillating of the titbits, so that the man-in-the-street in each and every Canadian town and city will be kept abreast of the latest and best at Expo as plans are made for a visit to 'the greatest show on earth' that opens April 28, 1967 and continues until October 27, 1967, seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and with the entertainment area open until 2:30 a.m.

BUY THE TOY FOR THE CHILD

"Don't buy a toy that you would like; buy it for the child," cautions the National Safety Council.

The League pointed out that buying Christmas toys should not be a haphazard operation. Rather, consider the child it will go to. For example, a child too young to know the dangers of a chemistry set should not be given one. You may find your rest and your child in orbit. Toys for infants should not have sharp edges or pieces that could be swallowed. Select every purchase with care.

CLEANING RATES CHANGE!
Farmers are reminded that the price of cleaning grain at the four municipal Seed Plants in the M.D. of Flagstaff changes from 4c to 5c per bushel on January 2nd. Depending on how heavy the bookings have been, you may still get your grain cleaned before the new year. Check with the Seed Plant managers now. Clean seed does not cost — it pays.

FARM RECORDS!
Good farm records are becoming more of a necessity than ever. The staff of Alberta Agriculture recommends that farmers who go to the trouble of keeping records should be able to use them to help an analysis of their farm operation as well as to file income returns.

The Prairie Provinces Farm Account Book, available from all District Agriculturists and U. G. G. Elevators was designed to help farmers to keep records for farm analysis purposes and costs only $1.00.

Make arrangements to pick up your account book for 1967 soon.

HELP WITH RECORDS!
Any farmer who would like help to start keeping better records in the Prairie Provinces Farm Account Book should contact your District Agriculturist. We would be pleased to arrange a series of meetings with 4 to 10 farm couples to help you get started on the right foot in keeping your record book.

FARM BUSINESS REPORTS
Copies of the Farm Business Report for the 1965 year for farmers in the Dark Brown Soil Zone are now available. Reports from the Thin Black Soil Zone are also on hand. Reports from farmers in the M.D. of Flagstaff are included in each of these Business Reports.

SOIL CONSERVATION MEETING WELL ATTENDED!
Forty-three farmers attended the meeting on Soil Conservation in Lougheed on December 6th, to hear Adolph Gentzel, Supervisor of Soils Mr. Gentzel discussed soil fertility and soil conservation as it affects the production of feed supplies. He Stressed the need of farmers to be alert in their farming practices to try and prevent wind and water erosion. To correct an erosion problem after damage is done, is not only costly and time consuming but the best soil can never be restored.

Season's Greetings

The past year holds many special memories for all of us. We remember happy associations with old friends, the pleasure of new acquaintances, accomplishments of which we are proud and difficulties we have overcome.
One outstanding achievement this past year has been the great steps taken towards unification of the Christian church.
This surely is a message that we, who stand on the threshold of our country's centennial, should head. Let us all resolve to work together to strengthen the many bonds that unite our country and seek to bridge the gaps that divide us.
The management and staff of Calgary Power join together to wish you all the message of Christmas — "Peace on earth and goodwill to all men".

BAPTIST CHURCH

Many braved the cold weather on Wednesday evening to attend the WMS Missionary Thanksoffering program. Two special numbers, as well as the congregational singing, were based on Missions & Thanksgiving. Miss Hagglund, Missionary on furlough from Ethiopia, was the guest speaker and showed slides of the work being accomplished in that field. It was encouraging to see many of that country being won to Christ and now doing personal work amongst their people.

The Young People's meeting was held on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sorenson with a good attendance. A full-color film strip entitled "Christian Choices in Action" was shown. When Dennis & his friend Eddie go to school Monday morning, they find that vandals have broken into the gym over the weekend. The incident, and eventual discovery that the culprits were so-called "good guys", motivate Dennis and Eddie into doing some serious discussion about what involve to make everyday choices & decisions in the light of Jesus' teachings. They decide that too many people put themselves first in making choices; that a person cannot always follow the crowd and follow Christ too; that one's attitude affects his behavior, and that love for God and neighbor is basic in making right choices.

Seven young people from the Alberta C. Y. F. executive were in charge of the Sunday morning service, with Rev. Nuthercutt speaking at the evening meeting.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Oran Hirsch (nee Marlene Bergerson) on the birth of a daughter, Maureen Louise.

Christmas Message From Lieutenant-Governor

From the office I have the honour to occupy, I extend the Season's richest greetings to all the people of Alberta and beyond, to the people who live in our villages, towns, and cities, to those who make homes on farms and ranches, to those who live in our vast northland, to those who travel, to those who must work to maintain public services on the holidays and to those who may be confined to sick beds or who are restricted in any way.

It is a time when good will and good cheer should fill every heart. Families will be together as they should be, and it would be my hope that family gatherings will be happy ones with young ones having fun & young and old enjoying big appetites. May happiness prevail.

I would hope also that Canadians would not let the Christmas Season pass without pausing for moments of thanksgiving for all the great gifts of nature which we enjoy and which have contributed so greatly to our comfort and prosperity. These rich treasures have been entrusted to us, not to be squandered in the shortest possible time, but to be managed wisely to make them serve mankind as long as possible.

And along with all the people of Alberta, I would join in the hope that an ever growing measure of peace and goodwill may prevail throughout the world.

Grant MacEwan, Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta.

Hardisty and District News Items

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Harrison on the arrival of a new grandson, born to Barbara and Ian Blatchford of Pincher Creek.

Season's Greetings from your correspondent to all our readers, with thanks to all who send in news items.

Recent new-comers to the town are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hahn and daughter, Deborah of Regina, who have taken up residence: in the I. P. L. home, formerly occupied by the Garland family. Mr. Hahn is an operator at the IPL pumping station. We are happy to welcome them to our community.

Jack and Evelyn Edworthy, Hardisty, in lieu of sending Christmas cards locally, wish to use this medium to express the following greeting to their neighbors, friends and acquaintances in the community:

"May Christmas joy and gladness stay
All through the New Year, every day."

Personel of the IPL and friends enjoyed a Christmas party at the Legion Hall on Friday evening. Games, eats and Santa's visit made for a very good time. Dancing concluded the festivities.

St. Paul's UCW held their annual Christmas party following their meeting on Thursday night. Members and friends enjoyed a program of carol singing, with readings by Mrs. Cankee and Mrs. F. Dragor. Gifts were exchanged and a lovely lunch served by the hostesses.

Recent Hardisty visitors were Mr and Mrs Billy Saville from Maple Creek, Sask. Bill says it is some 38 years since he has been here.

Edna and Elmer Dodds from Lac Le Biche spent the night of Dec. 15 at the home of Walter Kobzinach, celebrating their 14th wedding anniversary at Edna's parental home, where they were married.

Mrs. Bob Morgan of Calgary motored to Hardisty last week to visit her father Mr. Alec Redman who is a patient in St. Anne's Hospital. Mrs. Redman returned to Calgary with her for a few days.

Mrs. Hazel Voros has been a patient in St. Anne's Hospital.

Members of the OORP entertained their brother Elks and others at a Christmas party on Wednesday in the IOOF Hall. Military whist was played, with musical items by Doris Powell and Doreen Ball. Carols were sung with Dorothy Krauser at the piano. A delicious lunch and exchanging of gifts finished off the enjoyable evening.

Mrs. Loretta Proudlove has returned from a short trip to Vancouver where her mother was ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Jensen from Kelowna were visitors in town and district last week.

Sponsored by the Hardisty Elks, Santa Claus made his annual pre-Christmas visit on Saturday. A show in the Vista Theatre is treat for all were enjoyed by a large crowd of children from the Town & surrounding district.

A number of people were ill from food poisoning on Saturday following a Christmas party. Among the hospitalized were, Mrs. Marie Sooke, Paul Klassen & P. Gossard.

The Explorer group of St. Paul's Church have been busy making baskets from used Christmas cards. These were filled with cookies to be given to children in the hospital. A very thoughtful gesture on the part of these small girls.

ANDY'S HARDWARE

Christmas Devotional From Ministerial Association

Almost everyone I suppose has heard or read the narrative of Jesus birth. It is a story which in it's poetry and romance must touch the heart of every child. But time passes and the romance fades and for many it is never recovered. The story is shelved with our other child ren's stories and quietly put away on the shelf to remain there in obscurity.

Our lives get taken up with other things as we grow older — concerns of business and family — concerns which seem more pressing in our everyday lives. We remember and perhaps hear again the story of the coming of the Christ child as it is read in church, but it has ceased to mean very much as the season of Christmas comes and goes each year.

There are of course many for whom Christmas still retains its significance as a great Christian festival. Good people, church going people for whom the day means so much, and who feel saddened at the commercialization of this great festival of the church But may I suggest that we should not worry too much about all this — personally I doubt if it does very much harm to Christianity anyway — and remember that the world is still in God's hands. Perhaps it is a good reminder to the Christian that he must accept the world as it is (which does not necessarily involve approving it) and work with the world and let the world see that Christianity has something to say which is revelant to it On the other hand for those to whom Christmas is little more than the great social festival of the winter, let us hope that they will become more aware of the great Christian heritage that we have had handed down to us in this land of Canada. Let us remember that as God revealed himself and came into a world which nearly two thousand years ago largely misunderstood Him; yet later His message took root in many hearts. Let us pray in our Christmas services that is may take root in many hearts this year also.

"Lo God is here, let us adore"

The message of Christmas is in our midst as old as, and has come to us through the pages of history, yet it's import is always brand new. Eyes which look upon a great and beautiful picture or country scene never tire of looking as there is always something new to be seen, something new to be learned, something which we perhaps missed before. A world which has become weary of itself, its divisions and fightings and strivings, might look again at this great event and gain strength and hope for another year.

THIS BUSINESS OF FARMING TIME AGAIN!

To take advantage of the opportunity available to all prairie farmers every day between 10:30 and 11: 30 a.m. from January 3rd to 6th inclusive, simply tune in your television set to the 1967 series of "This Business Of Farming".

Sponsored by the prairie provincial departments of agriculture and the CBC, next year's telecourses on This Business of Farming promises to provide answers to a variety of problems facing today's farmers. A great deal of emphasis will be placed on the marketing aspects of agriculture because many people feel that this is one of the biggest problems.

Tuesday's program, sponsored by the Alberta Dept. of Ag., will concentrate on the many changes that have taken place in agricultural operations in recent years, and the adjustments that must be made to keep up with these changes. The need for adequate education and training for farm operators and employees will be stressed as well as the educational facilities available for the different types of training. An outline will also be given of financial assistance available for those desiring to up-grade their present skills and knowledge for either "on" or "off" farm employment, and the opportunities awaiting rural youth who want to leave the farm. The last section of the program will deal with the farm labor problem and contain concrete suggestions for its improvement.

In view of the rapidly expanding use of fertilizers, Wednesday's program, sponsored by the Sask. Dept. of Ag., will deal with prairie soil productivity, and the best ways to get the most from every dollar invested in fertilizers. Facts and figures used to illustrate points in the program have been proved under practical farming conditions.

The growing importance of marketing in today's agriculture will be the theme of Thursday's and Friday's programs, sponsored by the Manitoba Dept. of Ag. Thursday's program will feature a film on television type marketing of hogs, and a comparison of the marketing systems used by Manitoba, Sask. and Alta. An analytical approach will be taken to show how the various systems work. The same program will also feature cereal grain marketing in Canada, with Douglas H. Treleaven, Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board, as the main speaker.

Friday's program will be mainly devoted to cattle marketing and will include such topics as terminal marketing, marketing through country auctions, direct to plant marketing, packer buying at the feedlot, and selling by rail grade. This information will be followed by a panel discussion by experts in the cattle industry. The final section of Friday's program will deal with selling such crops as forage seed, flax, rye, rapeseed, and special crops on the open market.

Several Alberta stations will present half-hour agriculturists to discuss the various topics as they relate to local conditions.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS!

I would like to wish all the farmers and their families a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. On behalf of the Department of Agriculture we wish you the best in farming for the new year. — Art Edwards, Your District Agriculturist, Sedgewick.

Xmas Message

From The Premier Of Alberta

The festive season is with us once again and I sincerely welcome this opportunity to extend to each of you best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and good health, happiness and prosperity in the coming New Year. I hope this will be one of the best Christmases you have ever known.

As we enjoy Christmas Day with loved ones and friends, let us not forget those less fortunate than we for whom this day has brought no festivities and who face only bleak tomorrows amid the ravages of war, privation, oppression and the misery that follows in their train.

Let us also remember that this is the anniversary of the birth of the One who came into the world that men might have life and have it more abundantly. We cannot contentedly honor Him and the purpose of His birth unless we are prepared to yield ourselves to Him as living instruments through which He can bring to pass peace on earth & good will towards men. To this end, let us resolve to work for a world of reason and understanding in which God's will for men may be done, not just among a favored few but among all mankind. Such a dedication of our lives will give a new depth of meaning to our commemoration of Christmas and ensure that its joys and its hopes will abide with us throughout the New Year.

To each of you, on behalf of all members of the Government of Alberta, I extend these best wishes for a joyous Christmas and a peaceful New Year.

Ernest C. Manning, Premier of Alberta.

Heisler O. O. R. P. Holds Xmas Party

HEISLER — The weather man cooperated very nicely on Tuesday for the OORP annual Christmas party. The ladies and their husbands were all in fine form as they indulged in a beautifully prepared hot turkey supper.

This was the first attempt at playing the card game Norwegian Whist with 15 tables participating. Ladies passed all the Christmas dainties in the meantime. Winners at cards were: Ladies, Eileen Leonch and Margaret Martz. Gents, Leander Martz and Norman Ledgen.

Next the ladies exchanged gifts which were piled high underneath the brilliantly lighted Christmas Tree shining forth in all its glory. Alma Martz and Bridget Ledgen did a fine job of tree decorating.

All were pleased to see some of our former members at the party, including Mrs. Walter Zimmer of Forestburg and Matilda May, Mrs. Bendfeld and Mary Bedry of Camrose. It was nice to have them present. Visit again.

At the close of the evening lunch was served. The Heisler ladies wish all their Sister Lodges a Very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Weather Ideal For Yule Season

Since before Christmas the temperature has been in the "above" range, with some days even above the freezing range.

Bachelors Feted At Sedgewick

SEDGEWICK — The ladies of the Prince of Peace in Sedgewick entertained a group of bachelors and widowers at the Chapel just before Christmas.

A turkey, ham and Late Fish dinner with all the trimmings was served and enjoyed by all. Some home movies were shown by Gordon Taylor and a social hour was enjoyed following the dinner.

As the men departed they were handed a box of "goodies" to take home. This has become an annual event at Prince of Peace and has proven to be lots of fun.

NEW VAULT DOOR — On a recent weekend the Bank of Montreal, Sedgewick, had a new door put on the vault, and here the men are shown putting the 4500 pounds of steel into place. The new door replaces the original door put on in 1914.

First Results Of B.R.H.L. Games

Action in the Battle River Hockey League got under way just before Christmas, and then the schedule was delayed because of the Christmas and New Year holidays. As a result most of the teams have only played three or four games, and no official statistics have been released from league headquarters.

Results as known to the Community Press are as follows for the three local teams:

Killam Indians have played three games, winning them all, for six points. Ev Mayne, Indian Goalie, has allowed only one score and had shutouts in the first two games.

Daysland North Stars have played four games, winning two and losing two, for four points. Daysland has scored six times and allowed 12 to the opposition, in four games.

Hardisty Stampeders have won 1 of their three games to date, and have a 15 to 15 for and against goal scoring record.

Hardisty C.W.L. Christmas Party

The Hardisty C.W.L. of St. Josephs Church held their annual Xmas party for the parish in the church basement on Sunday evening. The basement, having recently been painted by the ladies, was all aglow with the decorated tree.

President, Mrs. Jeanette Moran welcomed the Sisters and many parishioners present. Father Heffernan led the group in a Christmas sing-song. This was followed by a Christmas Skit with Terry Watkins as narrater and Dianne Koral, Shirley Watkins, and Joan Lundahl as singers. They were backed by the men's choir. This was very much enjoyed by all.

A lovely fruit cake baked by Mrs. Schatz and decorated by Mrs. Rennings was raffled and won by Irving Devey.

High light of the evening was the appearance of Santa Claus who handed out a present and a bag of candy to each child present.

Local School Rink Wins City Bonspiel

A curling rink composed of four local school boys, won the Annual Alberta Curling Assn. School Boys' Christmas Bonspiel held at the Edmonton Sportex, between Christmas and the New Year.

Members of the rink were, John Anderson (skip), from Sedgewick; Ken Kelpster of Strome (3rd), Jack Hilker from Killam (2nd) and Wes Frost from Lougheed throwing the lead rocks.

The boys won the Championship, or "A" Event of the Spiel, winning seven games without a defeat. The other three events were won by all-Edmonton rinks.

In the final game of the 'A' event Anderson and his rink defeated the Ken Hunka rink from Bonnie Doon High School in Edmonton by a score of 9 to 5.

There were 25 rinks entered in the Christmas Spiel, representing most of Northern Alberta, but the Anderson rink was the only one from the country to go all the way in any of the events. The boys curled very consistantly in all seven games, but especially so in the final, when all four players had averages of over 90% on their shots.

Winning this Bonspiel is a real achievement for our local school curlers, and shows that this area is going to remain strong in this particular sport.

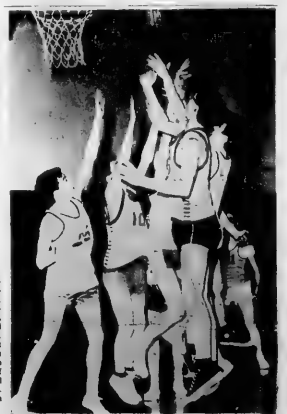
The club also decided to make up hampers for some families for the Christmas season.

The hostess prize was won by Daisy Chonyshen and the raffle by Marion Elo.



OUTNUMBERED — All those hands reaching for one little ball seems a bit unfair, but the ball didn't seem to mind. When the action was all over, Central High had won one more game in the High School league, this time from Forestburg.

Annual Christmas Party Held At Hospital

KILLAM — The annual Christmas Party at the Killam Hospital Complex was held on December 20th, when close to 200 people enjoyed a delicious buffet supper followed by a program, cards and dancing. The party has become a popular affair and is considered the biggest pre-Christmas get-together in the area. Sponsored by the Doctors and Sisters of the hospital for the staff and their invited escorts and friends, the 1966 party also included members of the Hospital Advisory Board and their wives. Another special guest was Fr. McCarthy, who recently celebrated his 40th year as Priest in the Killam-Strome Parish.

The spacious dining area was replete with Christmas decorations and gaily laid tables where the large crowd enjoyed a sumptuous repast of every conceivable variety of traditional Christmas fare, climaxed by the opening of "Fortune Crackers", paper hats and novelties.

While the guests walked off the effects of over-indulgence, the room was cleared of tables and chairs arranged for a program.

Nurse Peggy Orr acted as the M. C., who after introducing Doctors, Board Members and other special guests, introduced the various numbers on the program. Nurse Orr, who gets better and better at the helm, liberally interspersed the numbers with pertinent jokes and friendly "take-offs" on situations that develop in any ordinary hospital during the course of a year.

Mrs. Pettifor and Mrs. Demkiw with Mrs. Blumhagen at the piano, got the program under way with a vocal duet "Merry Bells". This was followed by a comedy skit "Housekeeper Wanted", in which the applicant not only got the job but also became involved in matrimony. A vocal solo by Mrs. Kashai was enjoyed. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Norma Oropeza. Cat Pie was next on the program, in an inoffensive "take-off" on the "grub" served to staff members.

A new and unique part of the program was a Filipino Pageans staged by some of the more recent additions to the staff from that land. The pageant included a short summary of their native land, singing, and a variety of native dances, all of which proved very interesting. The Housecleaning staff brought out in song (self composed) the trials and tribulations of trying to keep the large complex clean in spite of the indifference of many toward removing rubbers and overshoes. Visitors to the hospital can vouch that they do a clever job.

To conclude the program, Nurse Orpha Smith led the assembly in a round of carol singing, after which whist and dancing were enjoyed.

New Year - Good Land

As we close the page for 1966 in the book of Canada's history, we find many things for which to be thankful and numerous accomplishments of which we may be justly proud.

To a great extent at least man's primary concern is for the material things that life has to offer, and in this respect, we, as Canadians have fared well. This year's census figures show that there are now some 5 million separate households in Canada, an increase of 50 percent over the 1951 total. There are few countries, if any, which can point to an equivalent rate of population growth and material progress over the past 15 years.

More dramatic yet is the extend to which these homes have been equipped and furnished with material comforts of our modern society. Today 76 percent of homes have central heating with most furnaces being of the automatic variety. Only 5 percent still burn wood & coal. Today 85 percent have electric or gas ranges in the kitchen.

Only 60 percent of homes had a telephone in 1951: today the figure is 90 percent. Fifteen years ago only 43 percent of all households were equipped with an automobile, while today 75 percent have cars, with 15 percent having two or more.

Television of course was just a baby in 1951 and there weren't enough sets to bother counting them. Today 94 percent of all homes have at least one. We do not know how many have record players, floor polishers and power lawnmowers, automatic washers and dryers, home freezers and outboard motors, but imagine the figure is impressive. Such is the nature of the transformation which has occurred on our domestic scene, an important realm in our lives. It is unprecedented in itself, and all the more impressive for having taken place against a backdrop of a tremendous building program of homes schools, hospitals, churches, highways, factories, offices and businesses. These are all a part and parcel of a high standard of living.

This is a record of material improvement in terms which have meaning for individual Canadians, and to set it against the experience of most other nations, not all of them poor and underdeveloped, is to realize once again how much we have to be grateful for.. There remain regional variations and disparities, but, on the threshold of Canada's 100th birthday there is little to do in reflecting on the rewards and advantages of our dynamic society, this good land in which we are privileged to live.

We Are Affluent!

While the recent demonstrations of Canadian housewives against rising food prices was an exercise in responsible citizenship, it did not show a realistic perspective on such things. The sense of proportion should not be distorted by people's general affluence.

Public health authorities say that in North America more people die of too much food than of too little. Malnutrition has not been eliminated in our society, but obesity has become our big health problem in Canada; far more so than malnutrition. Medical people today are seriously discussing what is called "overnutrition".

This is happening to us while two-thirds of the people of the world are really undernourished. Malunfrition is a major factor in over four million deaths throughout the world annually.

For most people in the world the great problem is not a cold war in danger of becoming hot, but a cold, empty feeling in the pit of the stomach which is likely to become a warm full one unless we, the affluent society, face the problem of world hunger.

But Action Is Needed!

As Canada turns into her second century of confederation her people have no time for lethargy. Clear across the country this land needs leaders in church and university, in school, community and government. Leaders who have a view for future, and will stand a nole calling all to national advancement. Not so much a new idiology as an earnest spirit to sustain the nation in seeking a good and better life.

This is not the time for doting or dreaming. It is the time for seeking knowledge and for taking action; for a sense of purpose plus enthusiasm; to let the divine fire burn through our veins. It is then that the impossible becomes possible.

This is a far cry from the belief of some that an easy life is desirable. Such people look only for what is given them. Bread is supplied and they are content to live by bread alone. This in the end leads but to loss of freedom — "make us slaves, but feed us." Is there danger of this in Canada? The Greeks and the Romans descended to the Slackness and softness came over them to their ruin. They wanted security and comfort more than freedom, and they lost all.

Canada has at present a memorable period in her history. She has spirited and enterprising people of numerous races in an environment favorable to the development of a great society. It is a time for all Canadians to take action and share in a great moment in history. In doing so we need brush aside artificial grievances, throw away scarecrows, spurn easy bait, and exercize divisive influences. Much may be accomplished in the second century of our nation that the future generations should be proud to look back upon from Canada's two hundredth birthday.

Each Christmas for the past few years there has been an upsurge over the large numbers of toy boys which are displayed in toy departments of Canadian stores. This year, while the sales of girls' toys in general were up or then usual, the sale of war toys hit a real slump. There is speculation that the reason is that parents are reluctant to buy war toys for their children when there is a real war going on in Vietnam, because it brings the facts of life too close to home. Whether any few weak war, it just shows that there is a little good even in the Vietnam hostilities.

Mrs. Tina (Arthur) Gollas of Edgewick dropped in at the Press office just before Christmas and gave each employee a jar of home-made Marmalade. You have never tasted anything so good. Mrs. Gollas shouldn't be giving it away, she should be selling it — She'd make a fortune.

Most people are honest, and a recent story from the U.S.A. goes to prove it. A young girl was sent to the bank to pick up change for the employer, some forty odd. On the way back he was hit by a car and the bag full of change broke, spilling coins all over the street. A number of people helped him gather up his money and when he counted it he had $603.65. That's fair interest for a few minutes of work, and shows that not everyone in this day is a crook.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray McCracken celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary just before Christmas and the weather for the day was excellent. Ray says anyone can forecast the weather a week or two ahead, but it takes a real expert to do it fifty years in advance.

Last winter in this column it was reported that the circulation of the Community Press had reached the 1500 mark. On December 31st, 1966, the mailing list of the Press was given its monthly correction and it was found that there are now 1602 paid subscribers, a gain of 100 in something less than a year. With the Drug Stores and Counter sales each week, the smallest press run which now gets us by is 1750, but almost every week we now print 1800 copies of the Community Press, thus avoiding a shortage of extra copies.

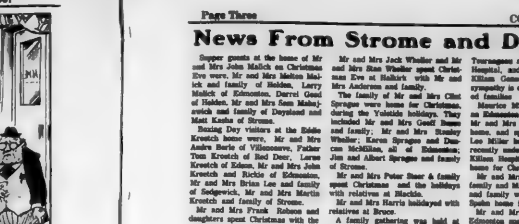
National Disease

We are a sick people. It would seem so from the contemporary headline scene at least. Everywhere there is provincialism, division, and dissension.

We cry for statesmanship, and then make it impossible of achievement by constantly attacking the political leaders of both major parties. Wether they might be better is by the way — their successors will face the same hatchet treatment. Now can any parliamentary body bring effective thought to bear on national problems if he has to spend half his time in fighting? How can a government or an opposition function effectively when it is full of prime themes all aspiring to senior posts? Obviously every decision is coloured by, "where will this take me?" rather than by the problem in hand and the soundness of the proposed solution.

In other fields where leadership is crucial — the university president, the priest or minister, the school principal — the same insidious undoing goes on, with the same disasterous results. The alternative is not blind acceptance, in any cases, the staff, the Board meeting provide opportunities for vigorous discussion, and questions, questions, but a leader must be entrusted to lead, and once a policy is hammered out, there should be a closing of ranks. He should be able to give his best to his primary responsibilities, confident that those with whom he works will loyally support him.

Anyone can criticize, but often those most vocal in erecting, are pointedly(sic) idle when it comes to creative planning and responsible action. —R. Peat Journal



★ MACDUFF REPORT

Nothing For Nothing

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp stands out now as the most brilliant and determined member of the Federal Cabinet, and its most skilled practitioner of power. His intense orthodoxy in finance and in politics is now the dominating characteristic of the Pearson Government.

No one, it seems, says much in Mitch. He came to that habit later with the engaging face of Harlequin has his way with everyone, including the Prime Minister. The most recent proof of Mitchell Sharp's masculinity was the mini-budget he presented on December 19th.

Six days before Christmas he increased taxes by $200,000,000 a year. This almost brutal action may have been financially justifiable, but it must be considered a political terror of the first order.

Taxpayers and voters will heep a long memory of this Yuletide budget and of Mr. Sharp's blithe rectitude. The wonder is that the old hands in the Cabinet ever permitted it. That, one feels, is the measure of Mr. Sharp's strength and his ability to have his way.

The mini-budget, of course was in the Sharp style, which is revealing itself more each day.

The Minister is a didactic, an exponent of the cause and effect principle in Government, a teacher of lessons. His lesson he was teaching in his mini-budget, is that you don't get anything for nothing.

The Government was embarking on a $200,000,000 plan to provide guaranteed incomes of $100 a month to old age pensioners. Very well, says Mr. Sharp, Canadians must realize that these benefits must be paid for. When the cause is a new welfare service, the immediate effect must be felt on the taxpayers' pocket.

It would be foolhardy and irresponsible to pretend that Government services can be provided for nothing. There must be few Canadians however who need reminding that it costs money — their own money — to run a Government.

Even allowing that such lessons needs to be repeated again and again for the benefit of those who are slow in absorb it, there is little justification for Mr. Sharp's baulding of it thus time. In his hands, the budget became not so much a lesson as a chastisement of the taxpayer.

Not only did he raise taxes by the full amount for the program, the costs of which will begin to decline in five years and he administered in tax, he chose to do it just before Christmas when most Canadians have extra financial problems anyway and are in no mood to be preached philosophical with Governments that increase taxes.

Mr. Sharp can make a good case in economics for raising so much extra cash. But he can make no good case for insisting that it be done immediately, at Christmas, when in three months time he'll be presenting his main budget for fiscal year 1967-68.

We've left him with only a few feeble justifications for the mini-budget. First, Mr. Sharp said months ago, in a different economic climate, that he would present such a budget, and he likes to be considered a man of his word.

Second, his object lesson, that nothing comes free, admittedly would have a greater impact just before Christmas than it would next March.

This didactic quality in Mr. Sharp is the source of much of his present strength, but it could easily become the stimulus for his rapid downfall There is something patronizing about him. He is slow to give humour. He likes to be right, rigid, and full of rectitude.

Mr. Sharp, of course, must be considered a candidate for the leadership of the Liberal party, and therefore Prime Minister, when Mr. Pearson retires.

He has abundant qualities for the job, a brilliant mind, administrative skill, a lot of charm.

But his performance this year has aroused some genuine apprehensive, especially a kind of insensitivity to political requirements, and to the nature of a political mandate.

Mitchell Sharp appears to consider himself accountable mainly to those above him or on his level, the Cabinet and the Prime Minister.

He doesn't seem to feel much of the professional politician's accountability to those below him and the Party, Parliament, or the Canadian people.

His decision to postpone Medicare for a year was probably a wise one. But he has yet to justify it thoroughly to Parliament, and only gave a full accounting to the Liberal caucus when he came under enormous pressure from members of Parliament.

Louise Brown and Peter Prymo Vows Exchanged

DAYSLAND — The Daysland United Church was the scene of the November 5th wedding ceremony uniting Louise Marie, youngest daughter of Mr and Mrs. N. Brown of Daysland and Peter Wilfred Prymo, son of Mr and Mrs John Prymo of Daysland. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Mitchell, with the wedding music played by Mrs. Winchester, and singing by Mrs. Mitchell.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor-length sheath dress of white satin, with an empire waist line, flippant sleeves and the bodice covered with lace. Her fingertip veil was held in place with a rosette head-piece and she carried a bouquet of yellow mums and pink roses.

The Matron of Honor, Mrs. Donna Pasigaard of Daysland, and bridesmaid Miss Elaine Erickson, Bawlf, were identical floor-length gowns of gold satin and matching gold satin bow headpieces. They carried bouquets of yellow and rust mums.

The bride's mother wore a jade green crepe sheath with lace sleeves. The groom's mother wore a teal blue sheath. Both mothers had corsages of yellow mums.

Following the ceremony a reception and dance was held for the guests in the Community Centre at Daysland.

The bride's table was centered with a lovely wedding cake decorated by Mrs. Winchester. Bouquets of yellow and rust mums also decorated the table.

Mr John Polubeyko of Daysland acted as M. C. and Mr. Mickie from Trochu prepared a meal to the bride, to which the groom ably responded. In charge of the guest book was Miss Winnas McKee, Trochu.

For going away the bride chose a jade green wool crepe suit and dark brown accessories. Their wedding trip was to Great Falls, Montana and the happy couple are now residing in Dayland.

Nominations Invited For Cal. Power Junior Citizens Awards

Albertans are reminded to send in their nominations now for Calgary Power's Junior Citizen of the Year Awards. The Junior Citizen of the Year Program was inaugurated in 1961 as a public service by Alberta's independent electrical utility companies. Its aim is to make more than enterprising Albertans get the recognition they deserve.

Our readers may ask — What makes a Junior Citizen? Some have performed acts of heroism, frequently at the risk of their own lives. Others are credited in acts of quiet courage such as overcoming physical handicaps or assuming responsibility far beyond their age. Any act qualifies that makes a young person stand out in the eyes of his or her fellow citizens. The winners receive framed certificates and Government Savings Bonds at the annual Alberta Weekly Newspaper Association Convention, held in the fall.

Four of the Junior Citizens of the Year from Calgary Power's service area have even added acclaim because of their heroic actions.

A 1963 winner, Judith Waters of the Paige Colony of Hutterite Brothren of Lethbridge was cited in an article by W. O. Mitchell in the national Canadian magazine for her endeavors towards integration of the Hutterite children in our public school system.

Lynda Dann of Vulcan, a 1964 winner, won her award for rescuing a 10-year old friend from drowning. Lynda was presented with the Mountbatten Medal by Admiral of the Fleet, the Earl Mountbatten of Burma, when he visited Canada recently. Lynda's citation calls it, "the most meritorious rescue of the year".

The 1965 winners have also received accolades for their contributions to their communities and families. Theresa Becher of Bashaw won her citizenship award for the unselfish giving of her vocal talents to her community. In 1966 she won two firsts and a second at the Edmonton Musical Festival. She also won a $30 scholarship from an Edmonton radio station, and an additional $50 scholarship at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Doris Pollard of Chip Lake won a Calgary Power Special Award when she rescued her brothers and sisters from their burning home. She was presented with an award by Lt. Gov. Grant MacEwan on behalf of the Royal Humane Society. Doris performed this heroic rescue when she was just four years old.

Nominations are now being accepted for this year's Alberta Junior Citizen of the Year Awards. Readers who know of deserving young Albertans from 6 to 16 years of age are invited to contact the editor of this newspaper.

"LORD, HELP ME"

Ancient Romans used to throw Christians to the lions. Modern Canadians throw lions to the Christians.

As lions are somewhat scarce in this country, they often have to resort to lambs. This is known as Layman's Sunday.

Last Sunday I was the sacrificial lamb. I preached a sermon. You think those early Christians had a tough time with the lions?

Layman's Sunday is a special day. Usually, I loaf forward to it. It's a chance to get back in the choir, with the other laymen, and belt out the hymns, secure in the knowledge that most of the others, too, are off-key.

Personally, I pray fairly fluently, asking for all sorts of ridiculous things, like a bid wrting a letter to Santa Claus. Last Sunday, before I mounted to the pulpit, which is 84-feet high, all that would come out, over and over, was, "Lord, help me!"

What is a layman, anyway? The clerical definition is: "One not in holy orders." The worldly definition is: "One who is not an expert. I was fully qualified. A clear case of the blind leading those with 20-20 vision.

Let's have a look at the typical layman. Usually, he's an ordinary man, a bit fatter than he thinks at the twenty-ish century: hide, wife, job, and family.

The kids are expected to bloom like roses, but they inevitably have thorns. The wife is supposed to be a gentle, forbearing creature, a good mom and a faithful help-mate for the man, and a pal.

The job is supposed to be a vocation, of which the layman is fully conscious, and a perpetual thrill. Too often it is fraught with frustration. The layman is supposed to be a well-oiled machine which enables him to live with grace, ease and dignity. Too often, he finds the only way he can stand the machine is to keep himself well-oiled.

Upper class, or Grade Three layman, are the types who are treasurers, elders, fund-raisers, that sort of thing. They don't have to be religious. They merely have to raise the loot, pay the bills, pare the expenses, and live the preacher when he becomes intolerable. They rather enjoy it.

Down one in the hierarchy is the Grade Two layman. He's the sergeant-major type, and usually with Scout Group or the Bible Class or chaperoning the Young People's Dance. He's unusually responsible religious. But definitely not an executive type, or he'd be Grade 3.

Further down is the lowly Grade One layman. He looks on the church as a slightly shabby service club, but is willing to give a ride, talk to a youth conference, or tell his wife to make scalloped potatoes for the layman's supper, or serve ice-cream at the Sunday School picnic. Apt to be a keen curler or golfer, but always cheerful. His philosophy is, "I'll have my dinner when they'll leave me alone."

And at the bottom of the heap, striving with all their might to remain there, and out of sight, is the Grade O layman. He takes up the collection, bumblingly, twice a year. He falls behind with his financial pledge. He crosses the street and looks in a hardware store window every time he sees the minister approaching. And he is too stupid, or too cowardly, to laugh heartily and shout, "Don't be ridiculous!", when the latter has asked him to preach the sermon on Layman's Sunday.

As a Grade O layman, I was certain of the chaps on the higher echelons is unbounded. But the guy I really envy is the layman of 2,000-odd years ago.

What a snap he had. He turned up at Temple, or Synagogue, or Mosque, or Church, or Kirk, passed away a few words and a couple of ounces, worshipped, then went home and consulted his wife, his children, his pet lamb, and his blessings. No golf, no summer cottage, no ski hills, no television. Nothing to do for the rest of the day but meditate upon what a good layman he was.

It's a little tougher today. But we've tougher people. Anyone who can stand interviewing Khrushchev the price of beef, and the threat of instant annihilation can cope with anything.

Well, we can do the chores, anyway. Let the rector handle the sick and the infirm and the lonely homes and the mentally ill. After all, that's what he's paid for. And the layman, he makes more than a truck driver.

Ron Sutter Married At Hardisty

St. Pauls United Church, Hardisty, was the scene of a lovely wedding ceremony, held for Ellen Mansul, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mansul of Edmonton, and Ronald Sutter, third son of Mr. & Mrs. Jerrold Sutter of Sedgewick, on November 5th.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. G. Zwicker while Mrs. F. Drager presided at the organ.

The bride, radiantly dressed in a floor length gown of colastered pal de nole with a court train falling from her shoulders, was escorted to the groom side and given away in holy matrimony at the altar, by her father. She wore a full bouffant veil and carried a bouquet of red roses and white stephenotus with streamers falling at different lengths over her gown.

Miss Judy Sutter, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Miss Bernice Erickson, friend of the bride, was bridesmaid and Miss Patsy Mansul, sister of the bride, was flowergirl. Both bridesmaids were identically dressed in Cinderlight sheath dresses of green organza over blue pal de nole and carried colonial bouquets of yellow mums. The flowergirl was dressed in a sheath yellow dress and carried a mixed bouquet; all complimented by white accessories.

Mr. James Sutter, brother of the groom, and Mr. Frank McGowan, freind of the groom, were best-men while Mr. Ronald Mansul and Mr. Bernard McGowan were ushers. Miss Irene Sutter, sister of the groom, attended the guest book.

Following the ceremony a very lovely reception was held at Mr. & Mrs. Ray Sutter's home, where the happy newly weds received and opened their appreciated gifts.

The brides mother wore a lovely red double knit suit, with a corsage of red roses and white orchids complimented with a black and white fur piled hat. The grooms mother wore a lovely dark blue dress, enriched by feathered lingerie and complimented by a black and gold hat and a corsage of feathered blue and white carnations.

Open house followed the reception at the home of the grooms parents, where everyone prepared for a good time at the dance.

During the latter part of the dance which was held in the Loughead Hall, the bride departed to change into a blue tweed suit complimented by fox fur ruffs and white accessories, then returned to three her bouquet.

The newly weds then reparted for their honeymoon which took them on a trip to Williams Lake, B.C., and they returned on November 14th. On November 14th the time came for the groom to return to military duties in the U.S. Navy and the hurried departure separated "them" for one year while Ron ventured overseas to Viet Nam. Upon Ron's return he will reside in the U.S.A. for three more years of service.

Communicate With Businessmen

Your spending choices are a powerful way to tell businessmen what you want, but you can be even more specific in making your needs and wants known. Tell sales people what you like and dislike about products and services. Let businessmen know through letters and calls, when you approve or disapprove of their operating policies. Their services and the products they sell. Tell your friends when you have good results with a particular product or store. "Word of mouth" is one of the most powerful forms of advertising — businesses depend on it. By encouraging your friends and acquaintances to trade with merchant you have found most satisfactory, you help these merchants to succeed and to stay in business. Consequently, customers are willing to return or exchange unsatisfactory merchandise and to complain about poor service or performance. It is equally important to let businessmen know when you like about their merchandise and service.

Just as there are ways to get more for your money in shopping, there are ways to get the best results when you must complain. Grievance range from discourteous treatment in a store to serious flaws in merchandise . . . from not receiving an item you have ordered to receiving an item you did not order . . . from product failure to billing errors.

When you have a problem be ready with facts — a description of the item, service or incident being reported . . . the date of purchase . . . the department and the name or number of the salesperson . . . your sales check . . . any label seal warranty or guarantee that came with the purchase. Generally it is sensible to discuss your problem in person or in a letter than over the telephone.

In most cases you can take your complaint to the salesperson. If he is unable to help, he can direct you to someone who can handle the situation. Many stores have customer relations departments to help you. Most stores will handle your difficulties promptly and fairly. If you do not get results through regular channels, try the owner or someone in a management position. No seller wants you to criticize him, his product or his services to your friends. No seller wants to risk getting a reputation for inferior products and services.

Frequently, problems with faulty products are passed on by the retailer to the manufacturer. If you do not receive satisfaction from a store on product failure, contact the manufacturer directly. He will almost always stand behind his product — especially when goods come with a manufacturer's guarantee or warranty.

Guarantees and warranties are the retailer's or manufacturer's written statements of responsibility for products that fail to perform properly for a specified length of time. The guarantee or warranty may apply to the entire product, to a specific part of the product or to certain characteristics of the product.

To use guarantees and warranties intelligently find out:

— what product or part is guaranteed.

— how long the guarantee lasts.

— what the buyer must do to benefit from the guarantee.

— what will be done by the guarantor.

— who is behind the guarantee or warranty.

The manufacturer's name and address usually appear on the product or on a label attached to the item.

If you have serious trouble with a business firm and do not receive the attention you deserve, contact the Chamber of Commerce or Mr. Brown of the Edmonton Better Business Bureau. These organizations are concerned with fair practices in business and they usually get effective results. It is also a good idea to check with these organizations before dealing with a business firm that is questionable in any way. If you find selling, advertising or business practices that are clearly illegal or fraudulent, contact one of the following:

— the attorney general in Alberta for any type of illegal or fraudulent selling or advertising.

— the Post Office Department for any type of dishonest selling or advertising through the mails.

— the Food and Drug Directorate in Ottawa for any misrepresentation or fraud connected with foods, drugs cosmetics, or medical devices.

— the Department of Trade and Commerce in Ottawa for deceptive practices which involve companies trading across provincial lines and which affect large numbers of people.

— the Provincial Law Societies in Canada for prompt action in cases involving small sums of money.

— legal aid societies — available to those who cannot afford to pay for legal services, in most cases involving any type of illegal action.

— Consumer Association of Canada, P.O. Box 5112, Edmonton, Alta.

If you make it a practice to deal with reliable business firms, it is rarely necessary to seek outside help when you are dissatisfied. Practically all business organizations are fair and honest. Reputable businessmen have no desire to cheat, deceive or inconvenience a customer. On the contrary, they hope to gain customers by offering good merchandise, reliable service and prompt attention and prompt action on customer complaints.

Marvin Romboughs Wed 25 Years On Dec. 23

A number of friends and neighbors gathered at Bashaw on Dec. 23rd in honor of Mary and Marvin Romboughs's 25th wedding anniversary. Glen Breadnigan, as M. C. for the evening, opened the program with a few well-chosen words of welcome to all.

The program consisted of a Reading "Club 25" by Mary Albrecht & composed by Tom McCracken; Songs by Wendy Cookson with her accordian; Reading by Mrs. Ross, "Marriage Changes A Man"; Reading by Elnor Breadnigan, "Wife's Cold Feet"; A Medley of songs taking them "Through the years with Mary and Marvin and family" by a group of ladies (Mickey Galloway, Marlene Simpson, Mary Albrecht, and Helen O'Reilly); Solo by Mrs. Mickey Galloway "Bless This House" brought the program to a close and the M.C. presented the honored couple with a chest of stainless steel flatware and a purse of money, to which Marvin and Mary expressed their heartfelt thanks.

Lunch was served and the floor closed for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Arne Hoas, having played for the wedding dance 25 years ago, played the first waltz and the group of ladies sang the Anniversary Waltz along with them. The Whitelock Orchestra then took over and dancing continued.

THE COYOTE!

Coyotes have been a problem when their numbers were plentiful. The Alberta Government has assisted the farmers to control the Coyote when requests were made. They supplied farmers with Cyanide guns or strychnine pellets. Lately the 1080 baits have been used in many Municipal Districts when requested.

The sportsman never liked the 1080 baits because they killed too many coyotes but we easily they also feared that the coyote might be exterminated. However the Agricultural Service Boards have watched this closely and refrained from using 1080 unless warranted.

Today the controlled Tobogganes are becoming quite plentiful. Many people are enjoying the sport of hunting coyotes with them. Many fields are marked with a net-work of tracks of these toboggans.

Many farmers and Fish & Game Associations are now hunting coyotes for the coyote. He is beneficial in keeping control of the rabbit, mice and gopher populations. The sportsmen who was once very concerned, might now be "collective fear" a greater threat than the controlled 1080 baits ever were.

Can a balance be established? Will the sportsman collectively be the great s threat for the coyotes' survival? We trust not. We hope the sense of the motorized tobogganer & the intention of the coyote will work to preserve a desirable coyote population.

Bill Matthews Tells More On Africa

Well, I imagine old man winter has his icy claws in you by now. Leroy now I would like to give backfirst one a big snow drift right now. We have had some real cold days, trying to explain to the natives the meaning of snow. Only two days this sesquania last week. We had taken a day on and made up a small saucer, went down to the creek and down by Land Rovers. On that trip we saw several acres of water buffalo, some on foot and amongst, but too much else.

The next day at work, I was sitting on the pipeline oozing as usual, when the natives set up a chatter, and was to my wondering eyes and ears, but I could not suspect about 100 yards on. He looked up over, trunk waving and his big ears flapping out. Momentary no second we weren't worth bothering about. And weighed all 1850 a dozen nearby. Right behind him, his mother, two teen more, nine cute cows and tiny calves, a whole procession. They do weigh out the water, crossed over and unappeared. My camera, unfortunately, was back at camp.

I penned a bottle with a note in it out on the ocean. It was in Portuguese and had evidently been thrown from a passing steamer. It was dated September 15th, 1965, and the author, a Portugese seaman, apparently in a bit of depression thinking no would ever in his cage on that trip, was written an answer in Angola. So this one per was known as sorry for his mis-spent life. We dismiss the letter to the ancient mariner, but I wonder what it must mean a lonesome ocean away.

Visitors Win New Year's Tourneys

KILLAM — A crowd of near capacity took in the games at the 44th annual New Year Day Hockey Classic at Killam when four teams fought it out for the top money. The weather was ideal and the crowed were treated to some good brand of Canada s National Sport.

In the first game of the day, the Forestburg Flyers were hard put to win over Daysland North Stars by the narrow margin of 5 to 4. The game was forced into overtime.

Killam Indians took on the Viking Cee Kings in the late afternoon second game and lost out by the close score of 3-2.

In the final encounter of the day, Forestburg and Viking squared off with the result that Forestburg left the ice with a comparatively easy win by the score of 8 to 2.

The purebred Heifer raffled by the Killam Indians, was won by Mrs. Marie Ritter of Edmonton.

The Killam club thanks everyone who turned out to the games, and assisted in any other way to make the day a real success.

Another full house greeted the New Year tournament held in the Hardisty Arena, when four evenly matched hockey teams battled for the top booty and honors of the day.

The honors went to Ramsgate, were taken out by the Maple Leaf Junior squad from Edmonton, in a crowd pleasing game, and in the second encounter of the day, the Manna Club fell before the South Side Juniors from Edmonton. The city club showed superior coaching and pack control to take charge of most of the game.

A good crowd was on hand to witness the evening match between the two Junior clubs. This game produced some nice, fast hockey, and showed up line contention existing between clubs in the Capital City. The South Side Juniors proved the better club and alcoted off with the victory

BIG CHEQUE — Mr. James Davison (left) representing the Recreational Centre Management Board, and Mr. C. H. Wetherell of the Sedgewick Legion, look over the $888.88 cheque which the Legion presented to the Rec Centre on New Year's Eve. This brings to $1888 the amount donated by the Legion, plus cash on hall diamonds and other parts of the Recreation Centre.

Killam Hospital Auxiliary Meets

KILLAM — The annual meeting of the Killam Hospital Auxiliary was held in December with seven members present.

During the year the Auxiliary assisted in the purchase of a Laboratory Fridge, and ice making machine and a patient transfer roller, to the extent of $700.00. To earn money the Auxiliary catered to two dinners, sponsored a Fashion Show, operated the canteen cart and held a silver tea and a raffle.

Entertainment and a social evening was provided for patients by the Auxiliary. Articles were donated for Arts and Crafts, and assistance given in pressing and preparing work for sales. We served lunch at the Arts and Crafts sale and on the Hospital Day. Flowers were presented to the Sisters on Hospital Day and a gift at Christmas. Cards were placed on the trays of all patients at Christmas.

The canteen cart was circulated each week. Weekly visits to the sick were made with 1005 reported. Two bodies assisted each month at the Birthday Party for patients.

Last year's slate of officers will carry on for another year:

Pres., Mrs. Gordon Brodie Sr; 1st Vice, Mrs Simon Bosch; 2nd Vice, Mrs A. Schneider; Treas., Mrs C. Watkins; Sec., Mrs R. Manning.

Sister Angelica thanked the ladies for their assistance, both financial and in the role of public relations.

Mrs. Coyne and Mrs Nielsens were the hostesses.

Stampeder fans went home happy after the January 4th game in Hardisty against Killam. Hardisty was the game by a score of 8 to 3, for Killam's first loss of the season. There is standing rivalry between Hardisty and Killam, especially between the fans.

WHAT A YEAR — UGH!

The beginning of a new year is a sort of "hello-and-farewell" effort. It's a bit like having a party. You are fresh, bathed and charming. Your "hello" to the first guests radiates warmth, affection and vitality. But your "Goodbye, goodbye" as the last guests totter off into the snow is a combination of exhaustion relief and cold horror as you realize what time it is

And that's pretty much the way we feel about the year that's ahead and the year that has passed.

It's a sign of the indomitable human spirit that we can look back on a year that was nothing but an unadulterated mess, and yet look forward with the greatest cheer and optimism to 12 months of what will probably be exactly the same.

Or is it plain stupidity, the irrationality of man, the only rational species?

For most of us normal human beings, each year, like life itself, is a mixture of pitfalls and pratfalls, and victories and conquests and frustrations and accomplishments. It's a good drink, but it has more than a dash of bitters in it.

Maybe your husband had a heart attack But your daughter produced a beautiful grandchild. Maybe your teenage daughter became pregnant. But your old man finally went on the wagon.

You lost some old friends, but gained some new ones. Your hair grew whiter and your tooth bleacher. But your arthritis improved and your Aunt Gerty died and left you $384.

You worried, for approximately four hours about the state of the world and the starving in India, and the war in Vietnam.

And you worried, depending on your age, anywhere from two to 3800 hours, about your hair, your complexion, your constipation; the job, your boss, your bills; your wife, your husband, your children, your roof, your basement; your inability to sleep, your inability to hold your liquor as you used to; your mother-in-law, your daughter-in-law, your annoyance, your lack of security; your brain tumour, your stomach cancer; your waist-line, your bust-line. And eleventy-seven thousand other things of equal importance. Yes, Jack or Jill, you worried. Silly, wasn't it?

But this year Wow! Things are going to be different Your children are going to do what you want them to Your wife (or husband) is going to realize, finally, that you were right all the time.

You're going to be a Better Person. That's it. A Better Person. And no golf-dang fooling about it. You are going to stop nagging You are going to be more tolerant of your nutty children (or nutty parents). You are going to go to church every Sunday. You are going to get more sleep, more exercise. You are going to have a baby, write a book, join a club. That's the stuff chaps.

Well, good luck, Mac and Mabel. You may need it. I have His utmost faith in the human spirit, but you can't lick a dinosaur with a pea-shooter And that's about all we have to fight with when we enter the jungle of another year of life.

However, this is a different New Year. It's the 100th anniversary of the Fathers of Confederation, or something. I know how it stirs all Canadians to the marrow.

There's no doubt that every one of us feels a thrill of pride as we enter this particular year. One hundred years ago, we were a patched-together, uneasy, suspicious, resentful amalgamation of distinct areas, worrying only about local rights and how much it was going to cost us.

But what a change in a 100 years. Today we are a proud, glorious nation. Worrying about how much it's going to cost us, local rights, resentful, envious, suspicious, uneasy and patched together

One cannot help but think, as one looks with shining eyes into the shining new year, our centennial year, that we have made tremendous strides. Sideways.

Hardisty Stampeders Win One Game And Lose Two

HARDISTY —The Stampeders ended up the 1966 portion of the HRHL schedule with a win and two losses. On December 18th the Iron Aces invaded the local arena and skated off the ice with a 6-2 win. The ice was soft and sticky and neither team produced too much in the way of good sound hockey.

On December 21st the Stampeders showing improvement came away with an 8-1 win over the Daysland North Stars. The game was scoreless until the third period, when all nine counters were notched. The game produced 14 penalties, evenly divided at seven each.

On December 28th Hardisty went to Wainwright where the Stamps lost their second game of the year by a score of 6 to 4.

In the first period Dreyer, assisted by Hendricks opened the scoring with a counter at 3.32 of Hardisty. Lehr, assisted by Levett scored for Wainwright at 11.51. G Miller, assisted by Davies scored again for Hardisty at 18.01, followed by a race effort by Smith assisted by Robinson and Hevde.

In the second period Lehr and A. Shaw combined to score for Wainwright at 3.18, answered by a neat score by Hendricks and Dreyer. D. Bevins and Felly again scored for the northern team, with another in quick time by Levitt.

In the third frame Lehr again put the puck in the net; then the Bevens brothers combined to further Wainwright's lead. Bevens sds Levett & Murray scored at 9.23 and at 15.44 Felly and Bevens again scored to put the game on ice. Hardisty closed out the game at 17.0- with a goal from Davies and Adams. The final score, 6-4 for Wainwright. There was a total of 11 penalties called, five to Hardisty and 6 to Wainwright.

FARM RECORDS!

Every year more farmers are showing interest in keeping better record books. The Prairie Provincial Farm Account Book is available from all Extension Offices and also from most UGG Elevators.

This book was prepared by the Economics Branch of the three Prairie Provinces. It is designed so the farmer can use the records to run a cost study on his farm and fill out income tax forms. The record book can be a big help when the farmer goes to his banker to request a loan. Pick up one now.

Getting started keeping more detailed records can be too big a hurdle for some to get over. We are prepared to help any farmer fill out the inventory section and become generally familiar with the essentials of good farm records. Write or phone Art Edwards, your District Agriculturist.

WESTERN UNION INSURANCE BUILDING

It might serve as a Centennial symbol showing the growth of our all-Canadian-owned company to fifty times its original size in a quarter-century. Now Alberta's largest chartered insurance company, Western Union Insurance has assets exceeding $9,000,000. Its 55,000 policyholders — business firms, householders and farmers, served by independent qualified agents in Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia — hold policies covering every class of general insurance.

By moving into our new headquarters, we can provide even better service and facilities. For example, we are now one of only eight insurance companies in Canada to have an IBM 360/30 — North America's most modern insurance data processing equipment.

Thank you, Western Canada. And may we suggest that, in Centennial Year, you choose a Canadian-owned insurance company. There are only a few among the hundreds operating in Canada. Your agent will know them.

A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO 67

By Tracy S. Ludington

With EXPO '67 now well on the way to becoming the greatest show the world has ever seen, directors of the mammoth exhibition can look back to the recent past when there was some scepticism abroad—and they can do it and know that historically speaking, they are in good company.

You have only to delve into the pages of "Albert, Prince Consort," a biography by Hector Bolitho, to realize that the jealous, the extremists, and others have always hatched at the parental of every great undertaking.

Albert, as the book relates, spent much of his time on The Great Exhibition, and on answering its enemies; for he was perhaps the great out proponent of the Great Exhibition in Hyde Park in 1851.

Writing his brother, he revealed that extremists in the Church thot the plan arrogant, and likely to bring wrath from heaven, manufacturers feared that the British lion would be flooded with cheap goods; doctors threatened plague & the arrival of hordes of foreigners with scores of different diseases; the London Times abused the Prince for suggesting Hyde Park as the site of the exhibition, and reported that aliens were renting houses to run as brothels and a secret society had been formed to assassinate the Queen.

But, as Albert later wrote, "the gloomy prophets were rebuked, the site of Hyde Park was allowed and all the world has come to join in the celebration."

And indeed, so it must have seemed — for the Rajah of Travancore had sent an ivory throne, and there were objects of zebra wood, terracotta, majolica and lacquer; jewelled peacocks from Madrid, cab insets from Switzerland, chairs hewn from great slabs of coal and from American Samuel Colt's plated with the revolving chamber.

And there was a machine for making ice, with the use of sulphuric acid; & a model of a floating church that drifted among the ships on the Delaware river; and a colossal organ, crowned by an eagle that played anthem tunes; and a great chestnut grew within the Crystal Palace, constructed especially for the exhibition.

Prince Albert's Great Exhibition of 1851 was a great business success as well. It made an official profit of 186,000 pounds Sterling.

Decision was taken to use the money to encourage the arts and sciences, and nourish the British mind.

To that end were built: The Victoria and Albert Museum; the Science, Natural History and Geological Museum; The Imperial College of Science and Technology; the Royal Colleges of Art, Music and Organists; the Royal Meteorological Society, the Entomological Society and others. In 1891, after all this, the trustees were able to announce scholarships.

By 1951, 110 years after the Great Exhibition, 930 students from Britain and the Empire, had benefitted by these scholarships. 19 became Fellows of the Royal Society; two were past presidents and eight become Nobel laureates.

With this example — no wonder EXPO '67 officials are looking for big things during the April 28 to October 27 period of 1967. Canada's centennial year, but long after, for it is sincerely believed that a great deal of permanent improvement for 'Man and his World' will be the long-term legacy of the great exhibition now being reached on the largely-man-made islands just off Montreal, in the mighty St. Lawrence River.

MRS. JESSIE LUCIUK
AS GAMBLE-KOOMO QUEEN

Recently, Mrs. Jessie Luciuk, wife of Mr. Joseph Luciuk, of the Macleod's Store in Killam, returned from a triumphant trip as one of the Queens of Gamble-Koomo, her husband's parent company, Mrs. Luciuk won the right to this trip by aiding her husband in a successful sales promotion campaign last September.

Mrs Luciuk tells us that this trip was truly wonderful, as she and 19 other Queens were royally entertained in Minneapolis. A grand reception was held at the home of the founder of the company, Mr. Bertin C. Gamble. His wife, who co-sponsored the reception, was the most gracious of hostesses," reports Mrs. Luciuk. She was assisted in the festivities, that Mr. Gamble had said in his remarks, "If you want to get something done, just ask a woman to do it!"

Among other events which were held in honor of the visiting Queens was a gala dinner party at Minnetchen Country Club, a luncheon and tour of the Minneapolis Art Institute, several dinner parties, and a Christmas shopping spree. "Why they even treated us to a morning in Minneapolis's best beauty salon. It certainly was a thrill, and the entire trip was one I will always remember, reports Mrs. Luciuk.

Last but not least Mrs. Luciuk thanks the Killam staff for their determination and co-operation in assisting to win such a wonderful trip.

This Queens Contest to honor the wives of Gamble-Skogmo men, has become a yearly event, and all the wives look forward eagerly to winning a trip "fit for a queen".

SOAPS AND DETERGENTS!

Soap is made by the simple process of combining fats or oils with lye. Synthetic detergents are made by a rather complex chemical process from fats and oils or from a by-product of petroleum plus other products. In addition to the basic ingredients, some heavy-duty soaps and some heavy duty products contain builders and other chemicals which may (1) increase cleaning ability, (2) increase sudsing ability (3) make clothes appear whiter & brighter (4) prevent soil loosened by washing from settling on the fabric (5) act as a water softener.

The amount of soap or syndet to be used depends on many factors; so follow the directions for us on the package. It may be necessary to experiment with different amounts until you get the right result. Then, measure this amount each time.

Compare prices of the various brands as the cost of detergents vary greatly.

When wash water has been properly conditioned, add one half the amount of detergent normally used. Two questions may arise at this point. But don't detergents contain a percentage of water softener in them? Doesn't this then make use of water conditioner unnecessary? The answers are yes and no.

Yes, the packaged detergents do contain a certain amount of water softener mixed in with all the other ingredients.

No, this does not make use of a packaged water conditioner unnecessary. Here's why:

Tests in the laundry laboratories indicate that water softeners are present in packaged detergents only in sufficient volume to handle water hardness of 4 to 6 grains per gallon in the dosage amounts per washer load as recommended by the detergent manufacturers. For harder waters, the manufacturers recommend the addition of an extra one half to one and one-half cups of the detergent. The purpose is to add more water softener to take care of the additional hardness. It must be pointed out, however, that unneeded amounts of all the other ingredients in the detergent are being added along with the water softener. The conclusion is obvious:

Each product must be used to do the specific job for which it is intended.

A detergent is a cleaning agent. Its purpose is to remove soil from clothing and other washables.

A water conditioner has its specific place in laundering. Its job is to tie up hardness minerals to prevent them from combining with soil and detergent to form a sudsy film. In wash water, water softener makes it possible to reduce the amount of detergent normally used. In the first or deep rinse, it suspends soil, removes detergent, and prevents washing film from depositing on clothes.

Winter Returns With Low Temp.

After softening up local residents with relatively warm weather for most of the past month, the weather man suddenly turned vicious, and appears to be trying to make up for lost time.

Temperatures started edging lower last week, and on Monday night and Tuesday morning the thermometer dropped past 30 below in the local area. Official temperatures for the Vermilion-Coronation area ranged as low as 47 below on Tuesday. Locally the lowest anyone reported to the press was 35 below.

This winter started early in November with a fairly large snowfall and low temperatures, and it was the middle of December before any relief was felt. Over the Christmas and New Year holidays the weather was very good with temperatures at times rising above freezing.

The weather remained good for the first week of January and then the temperatures started to slip and several light falls of snow visited.

Really It's Refreshing

There are other things than the weather which are refreshing in the winter time. We could name several, but for our purpose here will sight only one. It is the fact that Mr. Mitchell Sharp, along with his mini-budget prior to Christmas, gave us the assurance that what we get from governments, we have to pay for. Even though this fact is well known to all of us, there is a tendency to lose track of it in the mad scramble to try and get something for nothing. That is why it is refreshing to have a top man in government bring us once again back to reality and the facts of life. It makes little or no difference whether our increasing welfare programs are inspired by governments or demanded by request of the populace,the simple fact remains that if you get it you pay for it.

It may seem cruel, it may even in this day be termed as treasonable, but it is still our contention that governments should not do, and people should not demand or expect, anything to be done for them that they are capable and able of doing for themselves.

It is all very well to blame governments for forcing these programs on us, but so long as we passively accept them, we ourselves share in the guilt, and help to hasten the day when the complete welfare state will be upon us, with an accompanying loss of entitative and desire. It is the final step before a nation sinks into economic turmoil and moral turpitude.

Centennial year is a good year for all Canadians to resolve to stand on their own feet, to pursue life with determination and a vigor which makes welfare a must only for the incapable.

False Criticism

The government bill which guarantees old age pensioners $105 a month, rather than the former $75, is intended as a transition measure to benefit those who will not qualify for full benefits under the contributory pension plan.

The guaranteed income amendment came in for a lot of undeserved criticism. The government proposed that the guaranteed income supplement should go only to those who had a need for it. For the Opposition to argue for a flat increase regardless of need and declare the amendment involved a means test, is ridiculous, tempest in a teapot, and indicates irresponsibility in the true facts of life.

To qualify for the supplement a pensioner will make out a declaration identical to that which everyone who pays income tax is required to file. What is there about this that is wrong? But because of this, opposition members raised the false criticism that a means test is involved. In our opinion such a charge is ridiculous. No pensioner is required to state what money he has saved, whether he owns his home, or if his relatives support him; he simply states whether or not he has an income in addition to the $900 a year Old Age Pension and what that income amounts to. What's wrong in that?

For the first time in years, it seems, we are beginning to acknowledge that welfare spending has to be related to what the taxpayers can afford. And just what is wrong with that?

Know Your Canada

The last approach to Know Your Canada, left off with the year 1950 with the invasion of the Republic of Korea.

In March of 1951 Canada and the U. S. signed an agreement of joint defence, and that fail Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh toured Canada. The death of King George V was in September of 1952; and the first television station was established in Montreal. Queen Elizabeth was crowned on June 2nd, 1953, and on July 26th the Korean armistice was signed; 27,000 Candians served in Korea and of 1653 casualties, 312 were fatal.

On August 10th, 1954 ground was broken for the St. Lawrence Seaway development. Construction was started on Canada's first atomic power plant in 1955, and CP Airlines started the first polar air service from Vancouver to Amsterdam.

April 1957 saw the merger of the Trades and Labor Congress and Canadian Congress of Labor, to form a new million member group. C. P. Popey, Russian Embassy secretary was asked by the Canadian goverment to leave the country for spying attempts on the CP-105 plane. Mr. John Diefenbaker was elected as Conservative Leader.

On March 6, 1957 the Supreme Court of Canada nullified Quebec Padlock Law, and on June 17th Diefenbaker was sworn in as Prime Minister. ABOUT MOST ANYTHING

by A.C.E.

The other night I went to the first BHHL game that I have had a chance to see this winter, and it was nice to get out and see the boys in action once again. They aren't in top condition as yet but there was lots of good action.

The league is using officials of the city of Edmonton, and it is for the past few seasons, and they generally do a good job of keeping order. But if this one game to any indication, there is one thing for sure, those two officials have never read, or else choose to ignore Rule No. 59 of the CAHA official rules book, which concerns benching, and reads more or less as follows:

"A minor or major penalty shall be assessed any player who body-checks, cross checks, elbows, charges or trips an opponent in such manner that causes the opponent to be thrown violently into the boards".

I watched the game from one corner of the rink from where I had the best pictures of the action, and at least three times a player was driven into the side boards within three or four feet of me with such violence that I wasn't at all sure if he would get up or not. In each case they did, although sometimes a little but not much. This time I also noticed an official calmly observing the proceedings and doing nothing. Similar occurences were happening all through the game to other parts of the rink. Not once was a penalty handed out for this offence. Why not?

It is not the perogative of the referee to change the rules, but this is what he does when he ignores them. Apparently there is more danger of injury to the players from boarding than from other infractions.

This has been my pet beef about our hockey for several years, and now I've had my say, I'm happy. I'll still be out to as many games as possible.

Democratic Process Defended

The Wainwright delegation to the Union of Alberta Municipalities convention at Red Deer managed to help thwart a retrograde step when they stood up against a resolution that would have made it possible for towns and villages to do away with the annual meeting, unless specifically required by a petition from the ratepayers to hold it. Speaking against the motion they urged that we break no more of the threads of democracy and claimed that it was a good thing for the councillors themselves to make an annual review of their affairs, and prepare reports of their activities. Surprisingly the vote was so close that it was necessary to have the votes counted up and be counted. Wainwright's worthy delegation opposed the resolution. Those defending the resolution claimed that attendance at annual meetings was so bad that it appeared people were not interested, and claimed that it was largely a waste of time to have annual reports prepared & presented. In fact one delegate said that at their last annual meeting there was not one ratepayer present.

While the truth of these statements cannot be denied, the fact still remains that the democratic process is essential to our way of living. We have fought quite a few wars, and lost a large number of our best men in defending it. However, its greatest foe remains undoubtedly public indifference. — Wainwright Star-chronicle.

TIGHTENING THE LAW

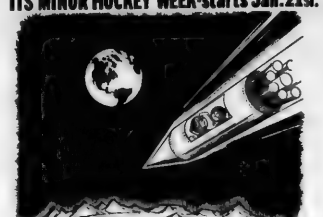
ies under Federal jurisdiction & those under the Provincial jurisdiction. It may also ask legislation prohibiting finance companies from repossessing goods after a reasonable stage of payment. At least some of the recommendations will be implemented this year.

Another Throne Speech promise which can be classed as public protection through its main purpose is bait to tempt Provincially incorporated near banks under Federal supervision, is deposit insurance. The legislation has been introduced this session but will not be passed until the Centennial session.



Don't send, take your boy to the arena!

Tightening The Law

OTTAWA — The Federal Government has accepted as one of its Centennial projects for Parliament a legislative programme designed to restore public confidence in Canadian investment. It is appropriate and not too early, Canadian investors are quite noticeably diverting their funds from Canadian to foreign bonds and equities. In October the value of Canadian purchases of foreign securities was twice that purchased in Canada.

The collapse of Atlantic Acceptance posed a threat to the inflow of capital for investment on which Canada depends. The failure of Prudential Finance followed immediately by the theft-protected failure of the North American Central Insurance Co. must renew the threat.

In my event the last failure of a Federally incorporated company controlled by Prudential was shaken the government. It is meeting insurance companies in Ottawa on Wednesday, January 18th to discuss protective legislation. North American did not write life insurance and losses through unpaid claims may be relatively small but they point up the necessity for tightening of the law.

When the Centennial session of Canada's 27th Parliament (probably) sometime in March, a mass theme of the Speech from the Throne will be protection of the investor and the small Canadian borrower. This is a field in which Provincial and Federal jurisdiction overlap and most of the legislation is the result of frequent discussions between Federal and Provincial officials during the past year.

How much of these Throne Speech promises will become law before the end of the year will depend on how long the Government is ready and able to keep Parliament working while the nation celebrates. A long summer recess is taken for (a month) but as Lester Pearson has been on talk of coming back in the Fall, a necessity if even the most urgent legislation is to be passed

Most important among the Throne Speech promises will be major amendments to the Canada Corporation Act. Discussion with the Provinces of new laws to protect investors have made two things clear. There will be no Federal Securities and Exchange Commission in spite of the campaigns carried on by the energetic Hon. Alvin Hamilton and others. Whatever the Federal Government thought of the idea, and most of the enthusiasm was on the lower official level, Ottawa will not get the blessing of the three provinces most deeply concerned, Ontario, Quebec and B. C. As a result security trading on the Canadian stock exchanges & on the street will be left strictly to the Provinces.

There will be a drastic tightening of laws dealing with financial disclosure by companies, including the Federal Canada Corporations Act. So far Ontario has gone farthest in this field and the Ottawa amendments as well as those in other provinces will probably follow the Ontario pattern. In any event this is one Throne Speech promise which will be fulfilled.

Revision of the Bankruptcy Act, new under study for more than two years, will be promised in the Throne Speech but nothing is expected until 1968. The three man commission composed of Mr. Roger Tassé, Dept. of Justice, as chairman, Mr. John D. Honsberger of Toronto and M. Pierre Carignan of Montreal is now meeting twice a week, but in regard to Canada's new world dog on business, the Registrar General, will not be ready until the end of the year. Canada's Bankruptcy Act was inherited from the British Law which in turn was a throw-back to the days of the old debtor's prison.

The committee believes a totally new approach to bankruptcy is needed.

The law as it stands does not differentiate in bankruptcies. It lumps the individual small debtor unable to pay his creditors with the corporation though there is no similarity in the problems involved. The committee has in mind the appointment of public trustees for the individual bankrupt whose problem as often as not is a social one and who frequently needs more protection than his creditors.

Closely linked with this problem of the individual debtor is that of the hire purchase credit, one on which the Government will be getting a report from a joint Senate-Commons Committee probably by the end of the month. The report will recommend legislation to protect this type of borrower from the loan shark. It will probably call for disclosure of total costs of a loan both as a lump sum and in terms of simple interest. The Government has already promised this provision in the new Bank Act. It will extend it to other compan-

CATTLE OUTLOOK FOR 1967!

Canadian cattle are expected to remain steady and could even increase in 1967. According to W. C. Gordon, Livestock Commissioner with the Alberta Animal Industry Division, American economists expect an upward trend in U.S. cattle prices this year. The present phase of slaughtering fairly heavy steers will conclude shortly, and a further strengthening of the U.S. market, accompanied by a favorable influence on Canadian prices, is expected by the fall.

The Canadian price of cattle has been relatively strong recently compared to the U.S. price in fact, the price differential between Chicago and Toronto has been close enough to be a pound to entice a few slaugh ter cattle on the Canadian market. Mr. Gordon reports that Alberta cattle numbers were down about 69,000 head last year. His points out that the cattle industry in this province has gone through a period of very heavy cow slaughtering during the last two years, and that the build-back of replacement heifers has been limited. However, last fall's stronger prices for good feeder steer calves could encourage the cattlemen to build their herds this year. Choice steer calves sold for as high as $30 cwt., with the average price ranging between $27 & $29 per hundredweight, a considerable increase over 1965 prices, for the same period.

The Herelord Assn. reports that South American buyers have indicated that they will be looking for more commercial heifers this year. Although these animals are likely to be purchased in B. C. if sufficient numbers are not found on that province, the balance could be sought in Alberta. The export of these animals could represent an important measure the prospect of herd building in these provinces.

Another factor influencing the cattle situation concerns custom feed lots. Up to about a year and a half ago there were only two or three fairly large custom feedlots in Alberta, but several more have been built recently. These additional feedlots could further limit the number of yearling steers available in the spring and summer months for grass and grain finishing

Already some feeders in the province have had to resort to buying calves in the fall to ensure a supply of yearling steers the following spring. Mr Gordon says if enough calf producers decide to retain ownership of their animals and custom feed them, the potential supply of yearling feeder steers could be further reduced this year.

In Memoriam

JOHNSGAARD — In loving memory of Louie Johnsgaard, who passed away January 19th, 1966.

Four long and lonely years have passed,
Since our great sorrow fell;
The shock that we received that day
No one can ever tell.
God gave us strength to meet it,
And courage to bear the blow,
But what it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know.
It's a lonely life without you,
And sad has been the way;
For life at home is not the same,
Since you were called away.
It was a sudden ending,
Too sudden to forget;
For the ones who loved you dearly,
Are the ones who won't forget.
Always remembered and sadly missed by loving wife, Clara. 35 1c

120 Attend Fish & Game Banquet

FISH AND GAME AWARDS — The above group were the winners in the Iron Creek Fish and Game Association competitions in 1966. They were presented with their trophies at the Association banquet held in Lougheed last week. For further details see accompanying story.

LOUGHEED — Some 120 people showed up for the first Membership Banquet put on by the Iron Creek Fish and Game Assn., in the Lougheed Community Hall last Wednesday evening.

There are 138 members in the association which was formed about one year ago, and is fast becoming one of the most active Fish & Game groups in the province

One of the main reasons for holding the banquet was to present trophies to members for hunting and fishing during 1966. There were five of these given out, with Carl Lind quiet receiving his for catching the largest fish Keith Shanks was for the largest goose, Orville Fussee for the largest duck; Ab Martin for the largest pheasant, and Ernie Lusk for the largest white-tail deer. The association has maintained a weighing station to which members could take their catch for weighing and entry into the competitions.

Miss Karen Lein was presented with a trophy in appreciation of her having represented the association in the Hackley Stampede Queen contest Mr Henry Lein was Master of Ceremonies at the banquet and the program which followed.

Mr Bill Bowthorp, owner of a local sanctuary at Iron Creek was opening speaker, and explained the principles of Fish & Game Association. Mr Bowthorp gave a lot of assistance to the local group when they were getting organized, and he was presented with a plaque in appreciation of his help.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Carl Sarrendi, a Biologist with the Department of Lands and Forests, who talked about wild life, showed slides and explained how his department sets the hunting season and bag limits.

The Iron Creek Fish and Game Assn. provided turkeys and hams, and the wives of members put on the banquet which was organized by Frankie Bowcowcamp, Marie, Phyllis Shanks, Ida and Rose Parsons. Mrs. K. Shanks, Mrs. O. Fossen, Mrs. A. Martin and Mrs. T. Parsons organized the ladies. Mrs. Skoberg and her CGIT girls helped with the dish washing and cleaning up.

Early Local History Now In Book Form

A small handful of enthusiastic women's institute members have given thousands of hours of time in soliciting, compiling and editing information from old-timers in the area between the Buffalo Park and the Kessel Hills, and including the villages of Amisk, Hughenden and Czar. The resulting book "The Lantern Years, Buffalo Park to Kessel Hills" is now ready for publication, but as it will be a big volume, about 300 large pages, plus illustrations, the cost of publishing runs high. In order to meet publishing costs, the Hughenden W. I. is selling advance orders on the book at $6.00 a copy for the set cover or $7.00 for a hard cover; plus postage of 10c for all the books the W. I. mails out.

Read all about early days of events and conditions common to all old-timers, plus personalized stories depicting the lives, joys, your hopes or your friends played in the development of this district. Over 150 articles, plus hundreds of interesting items. It's all interesting reading. You could be surprised at just how interesting it really is.

Send in your order for yourself, and your family, now and be sure of getting the number of books you will want. Money orders made out to the Hughenden Women's Institute, may be mailed to Mrs. H. S. Wight at FIRE Mrs L. S Parke or Mrs Clarence Burpee of Hughenden, or Mrs Esther Mellsmatrand of Amisk Receipts will be mailed at once for all money received, and the books will be forwarded as soon as published. Or pick them up yourself either at a Publisher's Ten in Hughenden, or at the home of one of the above

Thank you for your co-operation and support Don't wait. Order now.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

STRONE — On January 12th the Strome Hospital Auxiliary met at home of Mrs. Margaret Fyten with 11 members answering roll call.

The usual reports were given and approved. Correspondence was read and dealt with. The president thanked Mrs. Thelma Rawe for her donation of the candy for Christmas.

It was decided to hold a card party at home of Mr and Mrs. John Nishaus on February 8th. Arrangements for lunch were made. Members are invited to bring a Ukrainian to the next meeting, which will be given to the Children's Ward at the Killam Hospital. Also to bring ideas for a Centennial project, and a new member if possible.

Burns Night Program A Real Crowd Pleaser

SEDGEWICK — The entertainment at the annual Robt. B. Burns Night held last Friday in the Sedgewick Community Hall, was the most crowd-pleasing in many years, as the mixture of local and Edmonton talent put on a well-balanced show.

Attendance this year was not as large as usual and this was probably partly due to the rather chilly weather which has prevailed for the past week or so

Those who did brave the weather to attend were well pleased with the entertainment, which was M. C'd. by Mr. James Hall-as with the assistance of Mr. Tom Bruce and Mr. John Baker.

Local entertainers taking part were Mrs. Peacock of Alliance who sang several songs; Mr. Ron Routledge of Lougheed who sang a solo and also sang with the Central High School Chorus which presented an excellent selection of numbers. Mr. Les Anderson of Hardisty did an imitation act of a Swede and a Scotchman, and sang appropriate songs. He was also able to get the crowd to stand and join him in one number.

Mr. Walter Moir of Edmonton was the Piper and also gave the address to the Immortal Bard, which was well received. Mr Moir played the pipes, both alone and accompanied by the piano. He also played for the Scottish numbers who were three students from the Mrs. Heather Wallace School of Dancing.

Mr. Jack Wallis drummed in the traditional kilts, pleased the crowd with his jokes, guitar playing, and singing. George Tait of Edmonton played several numbers on his accordian at which he is extremely versatile.

At the end of the two-hour program all the entertainers came on stage together and sang a closing number, accompanied by George Tait on the accordian.

Aux. To Give Scholarships

DAYLAND — Thirteen members and two visitors, along with Sister Superior, were present at the regular monthly meeting, Thursday.

After the monthly and annual reports, the president read some thank-you cards that were sent the Auxiliary for Christmas gifts. Letter was read from the Town Council regarding a public Centennial meeting on January 30th. Mrs. Goudet and Mrs. Schroeder volunteered to attend the meeting.

Two baby brush-and-comb sets were given by the Auxiliary to the two new babies this year.

It was again decided to give two $75 Scholarships to the two highest grade 12 students, who are going in for their R. N's. in Nursing.

It was moved that the Auxiliary buy slippers for the Children Ward.

1967 Is In Our Hands

Nearly half a month has expired in the year 1967, the 100th birthday year of Canada. The bells have pealed the arrival of the great year, the flame has been lighted on Parliament Hill, bonfires have blazed in provincial capitals and rural towns, a Confederation Train is whirling across the country. In short we have launched our Centennial year with celebrations.

To have brought the improbable union into being in the first place was no mean achievement. To have preserved it, strengthened it and extended it over the past century is no less an achievement.

We can take pride in the high respect this country enjoys in the councils of the world, for the ultimate test of our fitness to endure is the quality of our contribution as a nation, to the family of mankind.

Ours is not yet a land of perfect laws, perfect justice, even perfect bliss, but it is an inheritence richer by far than those who went before us ever knew. It is in our hands, now on the thresh-hold of the second second century of Confederation, to do with it what we will.

Beautiful Dreamer !

Mr. Paul Babey, president of the P. U. A., is a dreamer if he believes that a vote among the farmers to boycott the buying of new farm equipment, cars, and trucks and other durable goods, will have any appreciable affect on the economy. We say this because even if the vote is held, and a majority of the ballots are in favor of such action, the final application of the boycott will never be put to any effective use.

Excuse our language, but the average western farmer has become, for the most part, accustomed as far as darn plows, fences, and nobody, not even the F. U. A is going to tell him when to buy a new car when not to. His wife has more power of persuasion than Paul Babey.

We recall the farm strike of some years ago, when the rabid went overboard, the moderate rebuked and the liberal (with a small "l") just wouldn't go along in any sense of the word. Some dumped cream on the road while others took the bypaths to sell in the regular channels. In other words the farmer does as he pleases in the conducting of his own business, except where the powers that be in society dictate otherwise.

Farmers still need machinery and a good portion of it new. By simply buying used equipment, and repairs, while a blessing to local dealers who are overloaded with the stuff, will hardly do anything to help even the farmer. Then supposing the manufacture put a freeze on parts in retaliation and creates a mess somebody can solve as harvesting operations get underway? The whole situation needs attacking from other angles, for strikes, pickets and boycotts have never really solved anything.

The Problem Of People

India's food shortages, even as extreme as they are reported to be, are only symtomatic of a problem that seems to be affecting the entire world. The population increase, including longer life expectancy, which is slowly but surely outstripping available food supplies..

On the surface it would appear that the only solution is a practical method of birth control to hold the population at a level with food supply. But looking deeper into the situation, another helpful solution presents itself. Education! Informed people are better fitted to deal with situations as they arise, by being able to attack them with knowledge. India is a good 20th century example of where a nation can arrive amidst lack of education with its ever increasing poverty, filth and indolence. It is conditions such as exist in India, mostly through indolence and not even caring, that makes it difficult for the more affluent nations to see the wisdom of giving assistance. In the western world people have learned that a little assistance from them assists a divine providence to supply a plentiful harvest beyond their own needs.

There's Lots Of Room !

Even though this should be the year — and a good one too, for changes in the top echelon of the two top major political parties in Canada, there are those who wouldn't bet a plugged nickel that it will happen. In fact, MacDuff, that astute and predictable theologian on public affairs, indicates that there is no room at the top. This is the place where Mr. MacDuff and I part company in our ways of thinking.

There is plenty of room up at the top.

Already some top men have indicated their intention to go after the party leadership of the strife-prone Conservatives, and any one of them could do less harm to Canada than the present leader. There are good men too, in the Liberal party, who as the leader could put forth much better effort to keep Canada's reputation at home and abroad unsmirched by indecision and poorly timed moves.

Diefenbaker has stolen the initiative from his opponents in the P. C. camp by calling for a leadership convention himself. Our prediction is that he will let his name stand for the position, and that if he should win, will be the latest backward step for the nation. We also believe that Prime Minister Pearson will step down before another election, and we believe this move will be the latest forward step for the nation. This country is too big and too great to much longer tolerate two leaders who put personal enmity ahead of the naiton's business. It is time for them both to go and so let new and more vigorous statesmen get the country back on the sound parliamentary basis she once enjoyed. Both men have lost the respect of a substantial percentage of the public.

On Thursday this week, the Editor of the Community Press leaves to fly to Montreal for two days at Expo, where he will get an advance look at what is going to take place during the International Exhibition this summer. A number of Alberta Weekly Newspaper Editors are making the trip to tour the site of Expo and receive a briefing on the many and varied aspects of the Fair, and presumably will return some well informed on this part of the Centennial activities taking ing place during Canada's 100th year.

Last Friday morning on the first try, I captured the Killam Midget Hockey Team on film. Last winter at about this same time they were the most elusive bunch of fellows in Canada, and I made five trips before getting a team picture. The Killam Midgets have about wrapped up first place in the SH league, as the schedule draws to a close. The playoffs should be starting very soon.

The annual F.U.A. Ban-te-Ville held last week had what was probably the best program they have ever put on. There wasn't a poor performance by any of the artists. The local performers proved themselves to be just as capable as those from Edmonton. Among the local artists were, Mrs. Peacock of Alliance and Ron Routledge from Lougheed both very good singers. The Central High Clarinet did an excellent job. Len Anderson of Hardisty, whom I already knew to be a top flight performer, is also a comedian and imitator. Every time I hear Len he comes up with a surprise. I can't help wondering how many other talents he has and is keeping under cover.

Ottawa opinions on success or failure of the Ministry of Transport at Geneva vary from optimism to extreme pessimism as the time is running out and as yet there is no agricultural offer from Ottawa Canada has said that unless United States, The U. S. Trade Expansion Act expires on June 30 with virtually no chance of renewal. Whatever is salvaged in Geneva negotiations must be signed and sealed before that time. Meanwhile Canada's own offer of equivalent advantage to the across the board tariff cuts has been sweetened by throwing into the package proposals for a 20 percent reduction in duty on industrial machinery and under certain circumstances free entry.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Housing Shortage

OTTAWA — A severe housing shortage faces Canadians in the Centennial Year. The Federal Government aware of the crisis has asked the provincial governments to join with it in arriving a sense of conferences across the country. The conference will seek to find a solution to the housing problem.

Labor Minister John Nicholson who reports to Parliament for the Crown Corporation, Central Mortgage and Housing, announced recently that the first in this series of meetings will be held in Regina on January 23rd.

Later he told MacDuff that other conferences have been arranged and negotiations are underway in Manitoba to fix a firm date for a conference in Winnipeg. Firm dates have been made for the B. C. meeting to take place in Vancouver on February 3rd. The Quebec conference will be held in Quebec City on February 6th and the Ontario conference in Toronto on February 10th. The Alberta meeting is set for Edmonton on March 3rd.

There will be tsuc conferen ss altogether.

The Minister told the Commons that he expected an announcement about Government action on housing will be likely made in about a month. He said he hopes to make an announcement before the end of the series of regional conferences. He did not elaborate. He was answering Howard Gralley (P. C., Brome-Missisquoi, Quebec) who had asked what action Ottawa planned to combat the "critical" housing shortage.

Object of the conferences is to find ways and means of encouraging a greatly increased volume of new housing starts in 1967 and in subsequent years.

Attending the conferences will be representatives of the three levels of government concerned, Federal, Provincial and Municipal, together with representatives of real estate boards, banks, life insurance, trust and loan companies and any other organizations interested in the problem. The government hopes the conferences will be completed by the end of March.

Mr. Nicholson acknowledges that there is a housing shortage. He concurs with the Economic Council of Canada that something must be done to correct the imbalance between the need and the housing being produced.

Much has already been done by the Government, the Minister pointed out. The National Housing Act interest rate has been placed at a more realistic level. NAHA loans are now available for existing housing and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has been given more flexibility in various direct lending programs.

In addition legislation is now before Parliament that will enable the banks to resume mortgage lending operations.

Meantime housing experts in Canada are becoming very concerned about the situation.

The CMHC experts are well aware that construction is falling behind the population growth. There were fewer than 135,000 dwellings started in 1966 when there should have been 150,000 starts according to the reckoning of the CMHC officials. They estimate that there will have to be 170,000 starts this year to meet the demands from new household, new Canadians and to replace worn out housing.

However present indications are that the housing starts in the Centennial Year will fall short of the needed 170,000 starts. New housing is not being put up fast enough to materially reduce the backlog of slumps and overcrowded dwellings.

For only a relatively small percentage of the low income families is there public housing available. Canada has about 20,000 publicly owned, low rental units, or less than one percent of all dwellings.

As long ago as 1961, in the census at that time, it was estimated that 925,000 Canadian households were lodged in brokendown crowded or unsanitary houses, or were straining their budgets to the utmost to pay the rent. Since then the situation has become worse rather than better. Today it is estimated that the number of families physically or financially in trouble because of housing is over 1,500,000.

For an increasing number of middle income families in Canada good housing has become too costly. The gap is widening between those who are poor enough to qualify for subsidized public housing and those who have a large enough income to buy a home or rent one at the present rates. The new commercial housing in Canada and a considerable proportion of the old housing as well, is so expensive that between one third and one half of the Canadians cannot afford to buy or rent it.

Public money provided under the NHA in the form of loans total hundreds of millions of dollars. They have been made to middle-income families helping them buy new homes. However, few lower-middle income families and no poor families can get these loans. This has brought the criticism from some housing authorities that Canada's housing program is "socialism for the rich" and "private enterprise for the poor".

The North American approach to public housing appears to single out the low income tenants as conspicuous recipients of public bounty. The European approach on the other hand treats housing as a public utility. It contains a large public sector in which nonprofit housing is provided to persons in a broad range, not merely the poor. It also has a large area in which private enterprise operates profitably and freely.

The Canadian Government is aware of the criticism of its housing program Having completed its social welfare program plans for the present with the adoption of Medicare and the guaranteed income for the aged the administration can turn its attention to these other problems. Look for new developments in the housing field that should help speed up new construction.

M.D. Council Meets Twice

A regular meeting of the Council of the M. D. Flagstaff was held on January 11th. This was an adjourned meeting, with all councillors and the secretary in attendance

The financial statement for December was submitted and accepted.

The Fire Equipment Committee reported that since the last meeting of council they had met with the councils of the Towns of Killam and Hardisty Letters from each of the towns advised that had approved in principle the suggestions of the committee regarding their proposal with respect to rural fire protection. The letters were ordered filed pending a visit from a delegation expected later that day.

The minutes of the Phisicite Committee meeting held on January 6th were read and accepted.

A map of the M. D. on which the office staff had plotted suggested locations of the Polls for the Phisicite was examined, and locations as suggested were accepted.

Notices of the voting on the Phisicite together with the directions and general rules governing the voting were reviewed by the council, and accepted

The secretary informed the meeting that two Farm Purchase Board applications had been received and that one of the applicants was on hand for the hearing Henry Lien was appointed as Chairman of the Council acting as the Flagstaff Farm Purchase Advisory Committee.

Robert Hilton of Street, Robbins Morrow machine Co. met briefly with council and inquired if any discussion had taken place with respect to machine requirements for the year 1967. He was informed that machine requirements for the year had not yet been discussed.

Messrs Eric Attwood, Tom Wilcox Mel Parker and Ron Doucette of A. G. Telephones met with council regarding problems arising between the M. D. and the Corporation, with respect to charges being received from AGT for the moving of underground cable and repairs being done to the lines. Many aspects of the program were discussed, and the opinion of the council with respect to the manner in which the cable was buried during the 1966 program was expressed. A number of invoices were reviewed and these are to be re-checked by the Corporation. It was indicated that some changes were possible in the charges for a portion of the 1966 program.

William Larson, Bernie Shibinski, Frank Cronn and Clarence Oberg, representing Killam, Daysland, Hardisty and Forestburg met with the council regarding the proposal on rural fire protection. Mr. Oberg, speaking for the representatives advised council that the Municipalities represented by them had held a meeting and that in their opinion the grant of $800 per annum offered to each for providing fire protection in rural areas was too small. Statement from the Town of Killam indicated the cost of the Killam Fire Dept. for the years 1958-66. was presented, showing it was costing towns at least 1 mills per annum.

The reps were of the opinion that an annual grant of $1800 per year, plus $100 for the first two hours & $25 for each additional hour or part thereof would be what the Towns would require to provide this protection Other aspects of the suggested scheme were suggested. It was suggested that Alberta Government Telephones would be as efficient as any other means of communication.

Orville Likeness, road gravel foreman met with council and reported on the Winter Works program to date. He advised that if the weather held it was anticipated the stockpiling program would be completed by January 31st, 1967.

The plans were approved, subject to the consent of the owner be obtained, and provided the line be located 5 feet from the west of the centre line of the road allowance, in either one of the plans. An engineer from Canadian Utilities was advised that the Co. had not yet come to a final decision in the placing of the line in question.

Preliminary plans from the Farm Electric Services showing proposed extension to serve members of the Sedgewick REAL were approved as to those lines in red only, and providing the line was set back to with in ft feet of the centre line of the road allowance.

Letter from the Bridge Branch advising that the inspection carried out on the bridge requests for 1966, and the bridge inspected in company with councillors. Secretary is to write the Bridge Branch that the bridge on WNW 16-45-9 should be raised 4 feet higher than the present bridge. that the bridge on SSW 29-45-10, should be left until 1968, & that repairs to the bridge on SSW 4-46-10 be left until 1968 if the bridge is in condition to allow this. All the other recommendations were accepted as offered.

Letter from the Dept. of Highways indicated that the Dept. would again have a Contingency Appropriation for 1967 and requested council to make known its wishes in this respect, including re-gravelling of completed projects if necessary. It was decided to do any re-gravelling necessary under this plan.

Letter from the Hon. Gordon Taylor with respect to the road east of Section 3-45-16 leading to the Blackbridge and to Bug Knife Park, was read. It was revealed that Provincial Highways had prepared to reconstruct and straighten out the road through the spoil piles east of section 3-45-16 in 1967. A request is to be forwarded to the Minister for a special grant to construct the road east of Section 36-46-16.

It was also passed that a request to the Dept. be made to reconstruct that portion of Highway 36 from the access road into the Village of Galahad, north to highway 13.

Some discussion ensued with respect to council's policy of paying for moving fences back where ourtailment was necessary and purchasing road allowance was not used and council by back-sloping had been done. Secretary was instructed to review the minutes with regard to policy set in the past in this connection, and the matter was tabled until a future meeting

Meeting adjourned at 5:00 p.m. to meet again on Wednesday Feb. 8th.

(By Tracy S. Ludington)

There is one question that will be asked thousands of times a day and in many languages at Expo '67 from April 28th to October 27th, and it is "Where will we eat?"

Never, anywhere, have there been so many opportunities for appetizing variety.

You could spend a whole week at the International Pavilion in the La Ronde amusement area, eating at a different national restaurant each night. For example, Czechoslovakia will operate The Kolibe, a roadside inn where roast goose, sizzling pig and venison chili will figure on the spits over open-hearth fire. Many of the 70 nations at Expo are bringing their own chefs for the pavilion restaurants and a number will feature foreign entertainment. Then, of course there will be the restaurants operated by Expo for the enjoyment of everyone, ranging from show-place dining rooms featuring the most savory of fine food to the intimate snack bars for those who haven't the time to linger over a steak smothered in mush rooms & glass of favorite beverage.

French Canadian cuisine is known everywhere on this continent, just French cuisine is renowned the world over, and the heart of some of the very best of French Canadian cuisine to be both found in Montreal; with delicacies galore for the gourmet & the adventurous connoisseur alike.

Whether you fancy meats, fish or fancy desert dishes, you never need look far at Expo for your favorites according to the latest report.

Thus, it isn't necessary to visit Expo to obtain the very finest in foods and beverages, but when one can visit Expo, see the many wonders of the world on display there, and step into the finest of restaurants right on the site, then proper eating adds to your enjoyment.

And the knowledge that good pure food is available, sets your mind at rest, particularly if you are bringing children with you to Expo; and it is comforting to know there will be a very big part of the whole show; for as at Christmas, unless you see it all with the eyes of a child, some of your enjoyment will be lacking.

Restaurants are planned to suit every budget, from the ice cream cone and the sandwich trade, on to those who know good food & know how to enjoy it.

A great deal of time and thought is being given to food at Expo, and connoisseurians won't lack a thing. From the outset, the slogan in this regard has been: Expo will present concessionaires from disappointment and the public from sheep.

The prices and menus, Expo officials have stated, will be strictly controlled.

Who could ask for more?

FERTILIZING HOUSE PLANTS!

Caution should be used when fertilizing house plants, says Mr. P. D. McCalla, Supervisor of Horticulture with the Dept. of Ag. Too much fertilizer is much more harmful than too little.

A plant may need fertilizing after it has been growing in the same soil for a few months. Some of the soil nutrients will have been used by the plant and some will have been lost through leaching if the plant was watered from the top.

Continuous heavy applications of fertilizers tend to build up an accumulation of fertilizer salts in the soil. A slight excess of these salts stunts the growth of the plant because the roots can not take in absorb highly concentrated fertilizer. An extreme excess injures the roots and kills the plant.

The most convenient way to fertilize house plants is to use chemicals in powder, liquid, or tablet form. They all contain the three main elements: nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium. When buying fertilizers, beware of exaggerated claims, advises Mr. McCalla. There is no such thing as a magic formula nor is there likely to be a "secret" element that will make the plants bloom better. Any fertilizer in the ratio of 5 per cent nitrogen, 10 per cent phosphorous, and 5 per cent potassium (5-10-5) will be satisfactory

When no directions are given for fertilizing house plants, Mr. McCalla says one-quarter of a teaspoonful of fertilizer to a 5-inch pot is a good guide. A larger pot will need slightly more. Plants should not be fertilized more than once every two or three weeks. The liquid or soluble crystal types of fertilizers are recommended for quick response. It should be remembered, however, that an excess of liquid or soluble fertilizer is more harmful than the common powder form, which dissolves more slowly.

BAPTIST CHURCH

The annual Fellowship Supper was held in the lower auditorium of the Killam Baptist Church on Friday night, January 20th. Everyone enjoyed the turkey with all trimmings served by the young people, after which a short program was held. This was followed by the annual reports which had been printed in booklet form and distributed. The Pastor's report, S. S. Supt. report, and the Bible Society report were given orally.

It was good to have Rev. Nettenet back in the pulpit on December after his recent illness in hospital.

Following the Sunday evening service a gathering was held in the lower auditorium in honor of Mrs. Hugo York. The program consisted of a violin duet, piano solo, ladies' solo, and words of farewell by the Pastor and parents Mrs. York was then presented with a farewell gift, after which she extended best wishes to and all to visit her in her new home in Edmonton. Lunch was served by the ladies.

WEEKLY DEVOTION

By Gren Erricker and Taken from Parish Service Prospect

ARDOR

It is a noble thing to light the Christmas flame in the eyes of little children. By our kindness, enthusiasm, eagerness, and radiance, we shall be a source of warmth and joy, new hope andencouragement to all whom we meet, young and old alike.

Here in the northern hemisphere Christmas comes at the darkest time of the year. That is good, for this is the time it is most needed. The cheery lights, the fantastically beautiful decorations in some of the stores. the chiming of the bells, the glad faces. all of these should lift our souls in ardent devotion.

The source of it all is Jesus Christ. As there cannot be fruit without the tree which bears it, so there can be no true joy without the Source, the birth of the Baby of Bethlehem. Though others forget, we shall remember, and we shall remind them, not by our "preaching" to them, but by the example of radiant, ardent Christian lives.

Mr. & Mrs. Ken Aldridge of Camrose were Sunday guests of the Ed Swainson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Lusty and family motored to Edmonton Friday and took in the Ice Capades. They visited relatives over the weekend.

Mr. Lusty Sr. returned home with them after spending some time in an Edmonton Hospital.

Confirmation Service was held in the Merna United Church on Sunday with Dale and Melvin Lusty being Confirmed

ADORATION

The word "adore." one of the most beautiful and moving in the English language, comes from two Latin words, ad and orare, meaning carry to.

When adoration becomes lifted up to prayer, then we are facing God with worship, honor, and fervent devotion.

One of the most beloved Christmas carols is Veinte Adoremus, "O Come Let Us Adore Him — Christ the Lord!"

May no idol ever take the place reserved for Christ. Not material things, not personal ambition or power or prestige, nor self. should ever usurp the rightful place of the Lord. If He is on the throne, then we shall find that all these other things, in their proper measures will be given back to us; enough material goods, personal dignity, the respect we have earned, and inner peace. But Christ must come first.

As angels, shepherds. and Wise Men came to adore the Baby Jesus, so let us yield Him homage. Also don't forget the shepherd who had to stay behind to guard the sheep. He, too, is saying at his task, was doing God's will.

Mrs. Jean Ginter was appointed to take the census of the Town, pursuant to Section 344 of the Town & Villages Act.

The annual ratepayers meeting is to be held in the Community Hall on Monday, February 27th.

Centennial Committee Formed At Daysland

DAYLAND — The council of the Town of Dayslend called a public meeting on January 30th for the purpose of naming a Centennial Committee to head the planning of activities for 1967 to help celebrate Canada's 100th Birthday.

Over sixty people were present & representing twenty-two different organizations or groups within the Dayslend district. The evening got under way by showing films and slides which the Dept. had prepared for participation in the Island, showing pictures of the Caravans that will be coming to this district. Also shown were colored Centennial invitivities started in various districts.

After the films. Mayor Stevens opened the meeting and asked Leslie Dolans to act as chairman. Mr. Dolans gave a brief outline of the Centennial projects in mind as to be in Dayland, and called on Mr. G. "Bud" Sellcum ,Centennial Officer of the Government to speak.

Mr. Sellcum outlined many activities undertaken by other districts, and strived to create an enthusiasm in the gathering to make this a year twil worth remembering. He stated that the Centenial Caravan would be in Viking on October 12th, and in Camrose from October 13th to 17th. He thought a filming that Dayland should have a special opening ceremony for their main Centenial project, which is the Dayland and District Centenial Park. The crowd was split into groups to see what they could suggest for events for the Dayland district The chairman of each group reported back with some interesting suggestions for the Committee to consider.

Mr. Leslie Dolans was elected as chairman of the local Committee, with Mr. Oscar Malmo, Herb Robinson, Dolores Dolans and L. Gillespie, Mrs. Orissa Mickla & Dorothy Spiller as committee members. Their first Sec -Treas. will be chosen from the committee members. Their first meeting is on February 14th.

Indians Ambush Commandoes

Last Wednesday night the Wainwright Commandoes invaded the Killam Indians' Wigwam and were ambushed by the redmen for their first defeat of the current league schedule.

The Commandoes had won all their league games up until January 25th when the Indians handed them the short end of a 5-4 score in a hard-fought hockey game.

In other recent league action the Indians travelled to Irma on January 23rd and lost to the Acres by the score of 5 to 3.

On Saturday January 28th Killam were hosts to the re-built Viking Gas Kings, and won 9 to 3. Only two weeks ago the Viking club had decided to fold for the season, but the league held a special meeting and allowed the club to sign up additional players after the deadline. The Indians' manager, Jack Gair, says the score in Saturday night's game does not do justice to the new Viking team, and after a few games for the players to become familiar with each other's style of play, the club will be a real tough cookie.

A regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Killam School Division was held in the office on Monday, January 16th with all members of the board and the Superintendent in attendance.

It was moved and passed that Ministerial approval be requested to borrow the sum of one million dollars as required to meet operational expenditures during the current year, and repayable by December 31st, 1967.

Approval was given for holding an Institute for Junior High School Teachers of the Division sometime late in February or early March on the topic of testing and Evaluation.

The Supt. was granted permission to interview prospective teachers at the Teacher Placement Bureau of the Canada Manpower Centre during March at Edmonton and also at Calgary.

The Centennial instruction Project was approved for the Division in all grades by competition in all schools and open to all students, with prizes awarded to winning entries from each school and for each division in the school. The winners will be judged over the whole inspectorate and a better prize awarded to the winner in the Division. Estimated cost would be about $2000 for the whole project, shared pro-rata by Forestburg School District and the Killam R.C.S.S.

The bid of Kjelland Electric from Camrose in the amount of $157.50 to install block heater plug-ins on the grounds at the Dayaland School was accepted.

Approval was given for the purchase of an electric Magan-type typewriter for the sum of $440.

Editor Enjoys Trip To Expo

A good part of the jet plane leaving the International Airport bound for Montreal last Saturday was taken up by Weekly Editors from Alberta, headed for an advance look at Expo '67. The weather was cold, and we figured it would be nice to get to Montreal and enjoy conditions. What a hope! It warmed just about all the time we were there, with no apologies from Premier Mr. Johnson.

The plane was 1 1/2 hours late in arriving, and we must have been given up for lost as the pandemonium broke loose when we stormed the welcome shelter of the Royal Reasney Hotel Motel about 1 o'clock.

The trip by bus through the site of the World's Biggest Show was just as exciting as it was spectacular. It is almost unbelievable to behold the construction work that has been and is still going on, with some seventy countries going their merry Pavilions finished and ready for the multitude of displays. More about this later too.

Montreal is a cosmopolitan city with the new effect by the old and the quaint: a rushing, turmoil of people, cars, trucks, buses and the emergency scurrying for the Metro Subway Trains, of which there are fourteen at this time, but more will be forthcoming in future issues.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

THOSE WONDERFUL YEARS

By the time this appears in print, I expect that I shall have severed an association of 17 years with the weekly newspaper business. And it is not without some sadness that I do so.

Sometimes it seems that our life is governed by accident, that we have very little control over it.

Had the war lasted a few months longer, had I taken a different course at university, or gone to a different college, I would not have met my wife. And had I not met that particular girl at that particular time, I would never have been in the newspaper business, nor would I be writing this column.

Accident again took a hand. We were in the city I had enrolled in a post-graduate course in English, University teaching was the objective.

Came the tragic news that my brother-in-law (on my wife's side) had been drowned in a boating accident. He owned a weekly newspaper.

We hastened to the scene, to be of what comfort we could. And I pitched in, so ignorant as Mrs. Murphy's cow, to help keep the paper going for a week or two, until other arrangements were made for the beginning. I was fascinated. This was better than the world of Chaucer and Spenser and the Romantic poets, the whole fleece-lined world of the scholar. This was life.

There was an exciting tempo to it that suited me. Monday was a day of desperation. No news, no editorials written, nobody wanted to buy an advertisement that early in the week. The linotype operator was getting surly because you couldn't keep him busy and he knew what was coming.

Tuesday, the pace accelerated rapidly. The news began to pour in. You madly dashed off two sparkling editorials. You tried to make a sensible story of the donnybrook at last night's council meeting. You hit the street and sold ads, whether it was raising or mowing or blisteringly hot.

Wednesday was even more so. Complaints, callers, classified ads piling in, and the inevitable merchant waiting in, after the deadline, with a big ad you simply hadn't room to print. Proof-reading away behind. People in looking for free publicity. People in just to chat about town affairs, or their grandchildren And the linotype operator, dangerous to the point of being lethal, within a radius of 12 feet of the machine. Worst after 12 midnight putting the sheet to bed.

Thursday was decision day. Too many ads. Can we leave this one out? Which reporter will be the least infuriated if we leave her stuff till next week? Short a column of front page news. Where can we dig it up? The photos haven't arrived. Rush to the bus station; see if they're in.

But by about 10:30 a.m., she was on the press, and the comforting thump and rumble of the old machine was reward enough for all the scrambling. There was solid satisfaction in folding, stamping and labels written, nobody wanted to bite us good as though you'd just wrestled an alligator to a split decision.

At any rate I was hooked. Formed a partership with one of the printers, and we bought the thing. We didn't have 40 cents apiece. But we went out like a couple of pirates, and every friend and relative we knew, scratched up the down payment, subbed every competitor before we left, and nothing to lose, and took on what was probably the biggest gamble on any weekly newspaper on the continent.

They were gross fun, those first few years. There wasn't much cavier or champagne (Every sport car had used into the debts, that we made it, and made a host of good friends among weekly editors on the way.

But I can tell you that running a weekly newspaper is one of the toughest jobs on earth. Holidays are almost unknown. Long hours are the rule. Somebody is always sore at you. And you'll never be rich.

I'll miss it. Some of it. And I'll always have warm memories of it. But I hope to keep in touch through this column, which will continue as usual.

THE Homemaker

By Miss Irene Eby, Home District Home Economist

People with an eye for the finer things in life have long recognized the elegance and versatility of leather This year suedes and leathers seem to be particularly popular in men's and Women's sportswear. With proper care, the Leathercare Limited suggests that your leather apparel will give you many years of [illegible] service.

HOW TO CARE FOR THE CARE OF SUEDE AND LEATHER!

Hang your garment on a correctly shaped hanger when it is not being worn.

Wipe dust off suede with a soft brush or sponge Use a damp cloth on smooth leathers Never use saddle soaps or polishes on leathers.

Do not store leather goods in air-starved closets or plastic bags. The leather will fade and the suede garments may mildew.

If you wish to press a garment, do not use a steam iron. Use the lowest setting and press very quickly to avoid over-heating. Use a heavy layer of brown paper between the garment and the warm iron.

Do not attempt spot cleaning with solvents or abrasives as these products often cause permanent damage to the article.

Do not launder leather either by hand or machine. Have it cleaned by a professional leather cleaner, and not a regular dry cleaner

Do not rub spills — shake off the excess liquid, blot gently, dry at the room temperature. Leather will harden and shrink if dried by an artificial heater. After the spot has dried, it can often be cleaned off with a brush or sponge.

Always and both pieces of a two-piece leather or leather and knit outfit to be cleaned at the same time. This will ensure even coloring in the match-ups.

Always make sure if the garment is real leather or an imitation. If it is synthetic be sure you supply the cleaner with the manufacturer's care instructions.

Garments with a small amount of leather trim can be handled well by a professional dry cleaner. Garments with a considerable amount of leather on them should be cleaned only by a professional leather cleaner who can guarantee work.

Check to find out if the dry cleaner you patronize is properly equipped to handle suedes and leathers. The natural colored leathers are the easiest to care for as there is no danger of the dye "running" when these garments are cleaned.

Daysland News

The Homemakers Club met at the home of Mrs Paul Paulgard January 25th with seven members present. The Meditation was an article read by Mrs Ole Larson on "Is God Dead". A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO 67

by Tracy S. Lullington
Kipling was wrong!
East is east and west is west — and the twain DO meet, from April 28 to October 27 at Expo '67 in Montreal!
Peoples from the four corners of the earth, and from more than 76 different nations are being gathered for this extravaganza and they're gringing their customs, their culture and their products.
A trip to these countries would be more costly, more bothersome and take a great deal more time, but probably couldn't provide anything more in the way of a glowing picture of life as it is today around the globe, than the national exhibits that will be on display at Expo '67.
No other world exhibition has ever included so many participating lands.
Just imagine some of the things you will see at Expo '67 — paintings by Lapedites from Belgium, for example or some of the wonderful specimens of firearms, veritable col lectors items, for which this country is so famous; crystal works of Val St. Lambert; the Bolshoi Opera, LaScala Opera, the $2,500,000 fantasy Gyrotron ride; the 38 massive sculptures commissioned especially for Expo and a thousand and one other items to be seen nowhere else in the world.
There will be items aplenty from Britain, France, Morocco, the Netherlands, Austria, Venezuela, Israel, Iran, Finland, Sweden, Denmark, China, Japan, Italy, Ireland, Russia and Canada.
And not only the larger countries are participating.
Check off Malaysia, Ceylon, Jamaica, Monaco, Switzerland, Colombia, Thailand, Ethiopia, Argentina for a few more.
And this isn't half.
We might also list the German Federalist Republic, Trinidad and Tobago, the Ivory Coast, the Upper Volta, the Republic of Chad, the Congo and Barbadoos, and still not be finished.
And we haven't mentioned the United States of America yet, with a pavilion right next to the Russian.
And in all their exhibits, the 70-odd nations of the world exhibiting at Expo 67 are revealing as much as possible of their customs and products and culture, their history and their geography.
This is one reason why children will find a visit to Expo so very valuable.
Kipling, we said at the outset, was wrong when he prophesied that east and west wouldn't meet; but he was right when he wrote about "the female of the species."
Women who travel — and there who wish they could — will enjoy wandering through the pavilions of the many nations at Expo '67.
The non-commercial exhibits will exhude the atmosphere of the countries they represent.
And there will be food, remember, just like mother thinks she used to make — and mother won't have to wash the dishes.
And if milady has a desire to shop — that will be made easy as well, and in the many shopping plazas she will find items she can't pick up anywhere else in America, and thats saying something.

HOG BUILDING TOUR!
Forty-four farmers attended the meeting on Ventilation of Farm Buildings on Monday the 30th, at Killam Rod Constable covered the principles of Ventilation in 3 hours, that took him six months to learn. Good ventilation is more involved than one would suspect at first.
From this meeting it was suggested that we plan a tour of 'Pig Barns' at an early date. This we have fully agreed to do. Any farmer interested in going on a Hog Building tour are asked to leave their names with me as soon as possible.

TREE ORDERS!
Farmers interested in ordering trees for 67 planting should get their orders in soon. Shortages of some of the trees will be appearing soon.
Farmers ordering trees for replacements are now being asked to fill out a "Tree Planting Questionaire" form. Through this form we are trying to find out why replacements are needed, or what caused the death of the original trees. With this information we hope to reduce the hazards and increase the survival percentage of trees being planted in Alberta.

CULTIVATION NECESSARY!
Test results have proven that clean cultivation, pruning and care of trees is most beneficial. Weeds in the tree row are a problem, and require considerable hoe work to control. Gramoxone (Canadian equaquat) and Simazine have proven to be two very useful chemicals.
Gramoxone is applied to the growing weeds and burns down the top growth, but does not kill the roots. Simazine should be applied to the soil surface before the weed emerges in early spring.
Further detailed information can be obtained from the District Agriculturist or from the Agricultural Fieldman.

WEEKLY DEVOTIONAL

TO WHOM SHOULD I LISTEN AND ADHERE TO

The atmosphere is saturated and the newspapers are flooded with speeches these days. T.V. and radio are cancelling programs to make room for more speeches; Speeches from one party line, from our government, from the opposition, and among ourselves.

Some leave us frustrated, some change our minds, and some make us wonder what its all about, and what the answer is.

The Bible mentions a speech from the Throne: "And He that sat upon the Throne said; Behold I make all things new" Rev.21:5. There is a Righteous Throne and a Righteous Speaker, and a Righteous Message from the speaker on the throne. Jesus Christ is Lord and Saviour, and no one has been better to the message. The Throne is a Great White Throne; indicating holy, righteous, and everlasting. The speech is the Word of God which is Truth. The message is, "Behold I make all things new". The speaker has the answer for this troubled space and atomic age. The first principle in making "All things new" starts with man. Jesus speaks of a "New Birth". Paul says "New creatures in Christ Jesus". The Bible further tells of the "New Man". When man is changed "Old things pass away and all things become new".

The Bible then is the message from the throne; in the Bible we find The Golden Rule; "Therefore all things what so ever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets" Matt. 7:12. Next we find the Royal Law; "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength; this is the first commandment, and second is like, namely this, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thy self; there is none other commandment greater than these" Mk. 12:30-31. The Golden Rule and the Royal Law is heeded to and practiced then we are ready for the Great Commission: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth; go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo! I am with you ALWAYS even unto the end of the world". Matt 28:19-20.

This is the answer from the Great White Throne speech for this nuclear atomic age. — Rev. W. A. Peterson, Retired minister of the Nazarene Church.

After many years of having meetings on Saturday afternoons, it was decided to hold them on the afternoons of the second Tuesday of each month. The next meeting will be at home of Mrs. Harold Probst on the 14th of February at 1:30 p.m.

Describes Expo Trip

When we arrived at the Royal Embassy Hotel in Montreal (Almost two hours late), we found that some our rooms had been given to other people. The two clerks were at a complete loss However we finally got settled down even though some of us had to double up due to the room shortage. Editor Lou Dwain of St. Paul, who is fluently bilingual, eased us out of many a sticky situation.

Travelling by bus and plane, I discovered that discrimination runs pretty rampant in Canada. Having "kicked" the cigarette habit, and taken on the pipe, I learned to my dismay that cigars and the pipe are forbidden pleasures on both modes of travel. Somebody has a lobby in the travel bureaus. This, I must remember to take up with my Congressman.

Each of us was presented with a Centennial Pin, which you know resembles a series of V's in a circle, in combinations of two's. The significance is: one V (man with his arms toward the sky), two V's together (Man together) and the complete circle of V's (Man and the World).

A party was held upon our arrival when we met and talked to Publishers from Coast to Coast. Some got a little over-enthusiastic and by breakfast time were a bit upset. Fellow Editor informed me that nobody, but nobody East of Ontario could speak or understand English. French, Greek and Italian. Between the 25 hostesses they can accomplish 34 languages. There was a spy on board the bus, one of the Public Relations men, who kept getting into the commentary continually. Never once did Tatiana get impatient or short in her replies. When he left the bus after introducing himself to our hostess, she almost passed out.

Each to the hotel, a grand social, and a 5:00 a.m. call to catch a plane for home.

The object of the trip of course, is for me to come back and tell you all about Expo '67, which I will do during forthcoming editions. For now my allocated space is filled.

Pony Chariot Club Holds Annual Meet

DAYSLAND — On February 3rd at Killam, the Daysland Pony Chariot and Chuckwagon Club held the annual meeting, with Gordon McCarroll as chairman. The minutes and treasurer report were given. Twenty members answered the roll and four visitors were present.

A report was given by John Bergel, Ken Jacobson and Glen Hoining who attended the meeting at Red Deer to draw up new Central Alberta Pony Chariot and Chuckwagon Club. An open discussion was held and it was decided out. The local club will remain as such and are now booking races for the season.

Election of officers was held and John Bergel was elected president. Linda Bergel is secretary, Stan Hutchko, vice pres. Executive members were elected to the board. Viv Hervey and Gordon McCarroll. Also on the board is Glen Hoining and Andy Schank. Re-elected as recording secretary, Booking and membership races is in charge of Loyola Hoining

The rules for the year for Pony Chariots and Chuckwagons were drawn up, also some of the races that were booked for 1967 were discussed. Thirty-one chariots or 4 chuckwagons and 16 chariots will be running. At the close a delicious lunch was served by the hostess Mrs. Bergel.

[LEADERSHIP SCHOOL]

A Leadership School will be held in Coronation in the Provincial Building on Feb 21st from 10 . m. to 4.00 p.m. This is the first of a series of five meetings to be held on five consecutive Tuesdays.

Advance registration to take the course are urged from persons living in the M. D's. of Flagstaff and Provost and the Counties of Paintearth and Stettler.

Leaders are needed in all our organizations and at all levels of Government affairs. Good leaders are hard to find, yet everyone who belongs to a club or organization takes part in leadership of some kind. Most of us could use some direction in the techniques and qualities of good leadership. 4-H Clubs have taken on projects of public speaking to help young leaders. This Leadership School is being offered because of requests to help improve the leadership in our districts.

Persons interested should contact their D. A. or Home Economist if they wish to attend this Leadership School. The program for the five days is as follows:

Feb. 21st — Psychology of Leadership by the staff of the Departments of Citizenship and Immigration.

Feb. 28th — Public Speaking by the Alberta Department of Agriculture staff.

JUDY I. STANYER

In recent years, there has been a great deal of criticism of education in this country, from both outside and inside the system. It does not take a Ph. D. to realize that a whole of a lot of it is justified. And I speak as a parent, tax-payer, and teacher.

Only by frantic efforts and vast additions of money have we managed to keep our system a mere couple of decades behind the times.

I know it's easy to indulge in hindsight. But holy old jumpin' Jupiter, surely there could have been a little foresight somewhere along the line. Look what we have: shortage of buildings, shortage of teachers, shortage of just about everything except paids. And a vast surplus of them. The clerk hasn't been overnight. They weren't all born last summer. It was all there 20 years ago, particularly obvious to anyone who could add and multiply. The baby people doing nay multiplying were the parents.

And the crazy part of it is that we keep nagging the kids to stay in school (which haven't enough room for the new crop arriving. "Drop-out" has become almost synonymous with "delinquent". It doesn't matter whether they're doing any work, or learning anything, or are just being kissed silly. They're told to stay in school until, through sheer old age and the tidal wave pushing from behind, they get a magic piece of paper that will open a golden door to success.

Chiefly to blame are parents. They have my sympathy. Many of them received the grad degree-ism. Many others honestly believe material success is success. And for, for too many of them, do-gods themselves. They insist that Johnny and Jane continue going on to get out of school and become useful and happy as a salesman or a policeman. Or maybe a judge or a great surgeon, because he has always got more than 65 marks in school. Or that Jill, a born wife and mother, who wants nothing more than to get married, should struggle through a degree in psychology, because she's always been a first-class baby-sitter.

Almost equally to blame are the big industries and institutions, from oil companies to banks. They are too lazy, or too cheap, or both, to interview young people and hire them on what they are. It's much easier, and a lot cheaper, just to say, "We don't want anybody unless he has at least a Grade 12 certificate", even if all they want him to do is stick square pegs in round holes.

Another thing vastly wrong with education is the way it is financed. Let's take a couple of examples. Here's an elderly couple on a small fixed income. After years of struggling, they own their own house. They pay $400 a year in municipal taxes. About half of that is for schools. Their child happens to be paid taxes for years to educate their own children or, if childless, somebody else's.

This system makes a mockery of the concept that every child has the same educational opportunities. Do not try to tell me that the kid in a poor bush town in the north has the same facilities, options and quality of teaching as the kid in a rich suburb. He simply does not. Money makes the difference.

And speaking of inequalities, isn't there something ridiculous in a country of 20 million having 10 separate and distinct educational systems? Much larger countries have one system, and yet have for issue diversity and opportunity with it that one finds in ours with our 10 rigid and separate ones. It is provincialism, literally and figurative-ly.

Rigidity is another thing that sticks in my craw. We have rigid curriculums, rigid time-tables, rigid divisions of the school year, and anything else rigid that awaits difficulty and keeps the vast, Victorian vehicle chambling along somehow.

You know what? I'm getting a little worked up about this. But you can't keep a good lethal steam, and I've been developing indignation over the whole business for some time.

So rather than galloping off in all directions, let's say this is the first of a series of articles on education by a plain, ordinary layman. I'll bet you can hardly wait for next week's thrilling instalment.

HISTORIC LANDMARK. Under the snowy bedsheets which cover most of Canada in January, the land lies dormant around the William Saunders Building on the Canada Department of Agriculture's Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa. This was the home setting 100 years ago when Sir Charles Saunders, the discoverer of Marquis wheat was born. The building was named after his father, Dr. W. Saunders (1836-1914) who founded the Dominion Experimental Farms Service and lived for many years on the site.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Two New Provinces

OTTAWA —A new will is mentioning itself in Canada's northland which will not be turned back by timid southerners. In the Yukon and the Northwest Territories a serious movement for full provincial status has begun

It's going to take time to achieve, but there's no more doubting the goal. In the older Yukon, the clamor is more immediate but the economic obstacles are probably greater. In the N. W. T. the road is longer, but just as sure.

In Yellowknife, the newly named capital of the N. W. T., many responsible northerners put full provincial status from 10 to 20 years away. But if the rest of Canada is going to keep faith with them, step by step development must begin now.

The first task is the implementation of the Carrothers Report on the development of government in the NWT. It recommended that Ottawa transfer responsibility for economic development, local government, education, welfare, public works and justice to the territorial government immediately.

The executive of the government would remain in the hands of a Commissioner appointed by the Federal Government, but resident in Yellowknife. Appointed councillors would continue to sit in the council for at least another four years but they are already outnumbered by elected councillors.

Northern Development Minister Laing has indicated the Government's general acceptance of the Report's principles without committing himself on the details.

He has promised "an almost immediate turnover of several important functions. "but has warned it will take time to build up the civil service required in the new capital.

That worries political activities in Yellowknife who recall the recent warning to members of the Territorial Council in a supposedly private letter written by retiring Commissioner R. G. Stead.

"I think we shall see the Minister advised to have the Commissioner's office moved up to the Northern Capital in 1967, but without the service chiefs or any commitments that the service chiefs will ever be" moved with him," he wrote.

This maintained Mr. Sivertz, would enable Senior Northern Affairs Department officials from time to control Northern services from Ottawa, it would be in keeping with the Departmental attitude that is generally intimicable to freeing the Government of the NWT to function on its own."

Yellowknife Mayor John Parker, his community's most articulate spokesman, says full implementation of the Carrothers Report, though nothing less, will satisfy northerners for the time being as a stepping stone to their goal.

"The most here is to make the best of what we've been given, which is all we can handle at the moment," he says.

As the only northern member of the Carrothers commission Mr Parker said he and his colleagues had agreed that provincial status should be seriously considered after if certain conditions had been fulfilled. These were a general political awareness of northern residents, development of renewable resources, improvement of the Territories' financial position, and the political and economic advancement of the native population.

Northern Affairs Minister Mr. Laing is expected soon to set up an advisory commission on the development of self-government in the Yukon, similar to the Carrothers Commission on the NWT.

The majority of the Yukon Territorial Council is likely to go along with the idea but two of its members demand action, not further studies. One of them, councillor Don Taylor of Watson Lake, says that if there has to be a commission, it should be a Royal Commission reporting directly to Parliament and not merely responsible to the Northern Development Department which is obviously doesn't trust.

The chief obstacle to the Yukon's political advancement is its lack of enough economic develop ment to be viable. It may therefore have to wait for further advance in the Northwest Territories to the point where a new unit could be formed as a province.

This appears to be the thinking of Mr. Laing. He emphasized in an interview that any eventual Northern Province should be self-sustaining. After 10 years, (please turn to page 9)

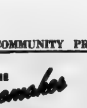
THE Homemaker



By Miss Irene Eby, Your District Home Economist

WHAT'S NEW IN HOME DESIGN!

From the Chicago Home Show held recently, the trend in living accomodation is to remodel. Apparently many families who are presently living in suburbs in America are tired of communicating and the trend now is to live closer to the city and remodel a home in this area. When remodelling there are two types of contracts you can obtain. One is the Cost Plus Basis, and this is where a maximum sum is set. The other type of contract is a Firm Bid, and this lists exactly the details to be done and the cost. When having any work done on your home it is important for you to find out who is responsible for Workmen's Compensation should an accident occur on your property. As well, fire insurance should be on the building from the time of construction. It has been found that when an exact completion date is set you will not get as good a job because the contractors may have to rush to complete the job or they often substitute materials.

This year in Home Design the emphasis is placed on the kitchen. They are emphasizing clean, smooth lines and simple elegance of wood and glass in the kitchen. The very latest trend puts emphasis on carpeting in the kitchen. I have to question as to whether or not I am ialy enough to dare top ut wall-to-wall carpeting in my kitchen.

The latest color in appliances in the kitchen is black. The major appliance will soon be seen with a lot of bold design on the doors o frefrigerators and ranges. However, I question the new trend as I am sure that these appliances are major expenditures and it would be quite easy to become tired of a bold design on them. It seems like colored appliances are here to stay. If you are buying colored appliances, please keep in mind that the shades and tones of colors change each year and you must buy all your appliances from the same manufacturer in order to keep the colors identical.

A new type of counter topping that was shown at Chicago is made from sea shells. It actually consists of sea shells in a polyester binder. This counter topping was called Marva Glass and resembles marble to a certain extent. It comes in a complete range of colors and should be interesting to watch for its availability in Canada. However, I feel it will be rather expensive.

Panels of various materials and textures are becoming increasingly popular in homes. There are new fibre board panels on the market in many colors and it is now possible to purchase dry wall with vinyl wall paper already applied to it. There are some interesting acrylic panels on the market that look like stained glass available in a variety of colors. If you are building a new home you might like to try these new panels. However, keep in mind to question the suppliers on how to cover cracks or folds in the panels. as many of the cracks cannot be covered sufficiently.

Wall paper seems to be becoming more popular each year and the designs in it are certainly improving. A new type of wall paper is now available made from crushed cork, and provides an interesting texture.

With the great availability of the building materials, it is possible to achieve almost any effect desired, when building a home. Be sure to shop carefully for finishing materials and to consider their advantages and their disadvantages before buying.

'67 Provincial Election Now Appears Likely

(By John Worren)

The fifth session of the Alberta Legislature got under way Thursday.

The government's proposed legislative program was received immediately criticism from the opposition for being "just more of the same old stuff".

Gerik Turcott of the NDP observed that the Throne Speech made no mention of three pressing problems — public housing, rising consumer costs and disclosure of interest on loans and three payments.

The Throne Speech leaves little doubt that Centennial Year will also be provincial election year here in Alberta.

First there are the young people who will figure in another Gallup & Human Resources Research Council which will work concurrently with the Department of Youth.

The farmers will get special consideration of water resources, a committee to study all government programs and new research facilities.

In their dispatches with oil companies using their land the farmers will also get the right to appeal to the courts for the first time, instead of government boards.

Alberta students are promised a fourth University and new studies of educational television. School boards will have more money.

The physically sick will receive new coverage under the Alberta Health Plan and the mentally ill will get new hospitals in several of Alberta's areas.

Alcoholism is promised in-patient treatment and rehabilitation facilities.

Indians, welfare recipients, ranchers, commercial fishermen and lumbermen haven't been forgotten. Senior citizen residents will get new roads and dial telephones.

Improvements to remote airstrips and provincial parks are also promised and trust companies and securities corporations will be more rigidly controlled.

People who get injured by automobile or vehicle driving may get some compensation. Even the criminals haven't been forgotten. They will have bread new jail facilities in Peace River and near Edmonton.

The people who work with sewers and pollution will no longer be sanitary engineers, they will be environmental health services workers.

If it's possible for anyone to feel left out after all that, well there's the new embarrassment to deal with all private complaints about government members' conduct.

On the face of it everybody should be pretty happy by what the government plans to do this session.

The new Power Commission Act and new municipal legislation will undoubtedly cause some fuss.

But the most striking thing about the entire speech is something that has been left out. It's a legislative program that calls for vastly increased spending. But it doesn't give a hint where the money is to come from. The opposition is bound to point to this year's whopping deficit and ask who's going to pay for all the new goodies.

However, the throne speech is election year is hardly the place to mention a sales tax, or an increase in taxes of any kind.

Flagstaff Lodge Buys Wool For A Rug

SEDGEWICK — The Flagstaff Lodge Auxiliary held the February meeting in the Lodge dining room, with ten ladies present. It was reported that in January $25 worth of coffee mugs had been purchased with the Christmas donations given by various organizations. These mugs are for the use of the resident members of the Lodge for coffee time between meals.

Wool for a large rug had also been purchased. The wool has already been made into a lovely rug. Mrs. Strenki stated that a wool rug at the front door would be beneficial. It was suggested that one could be hooked from left-over pieces of wool. If anyone has odds and ends of heavy rug wool or Northland sweater wool which they would like to donate for this purpose it would be much appreciated.

The possibility of organizing a Secret Easter Concert was discussed. The president, Mrs. Gollan was asked to look into possibilities.

Interested organizations are reminded to send a representative to the monthly meeting which are held on the first Monday of each month at 8:00 p.m. in the Lodge.

First Playoff Game Ends In A 3 - 3 Tie

Killam Indians played the first game of the Provincial Playoffs last Sunday against Fort Saskatchewan, in one of the best hockey games seen locally this winter. It is a two-game total goal series, with the 2nd game at Fort Saskatchewan.

In Sunday's game both teams got three goals in an evenly balanced contest which needs them into the second game on an even footing.

It is not often that the Press points its finger at any particular player, preferring to stress the effort of the team, but in Sunday's contest two players were outstanding for the Indians, Goaltender Ev Mayne who robbed the team from the Fort blind all afternoon and made some truly fantastic saves to keep his team in the game On the offensive side for the Indians, all 3 goals were scored by Bill Cair who played a real solid game with good support from his linemates.

Neither team was able to score in the first period, but the second ended 1-1 In the third period the visitors moved ahead twice and each time the Indians came back to tie it up. The final Indian goal came with only a minute left to play

No date has been announced for the return game at the Fort.

Large Turnout For Annual School Meet

KILLAM — A much larger crowd than usual turned out for the annual meeting of the School Division held last Friday night. The meeting was strictly routine and produced little except a clean review of the financial report, and the remarks of the Superintendent.

Mr. George Cranston acted as the chairman and got through his light agenda with dispatch.

Board Chairman, L. Nielsen explained the activities of the Board during 1966, and stated that their main objective is to give the best possible education to all students. He outlined the decision to bus the students of the south line to Sedgewick and Dayland, this is the new increasing beginning of securing adequate teaching personel and providing matriculation and diploma programs in smaller schools. In his opinion he said, this scheme is now working quite satisfactorily. Specifications for the additions at Dayland have been accepted and tenders are to be called shortly. In answer to a question Mr. Nielsen replied that no further plans have been discussed for further centralization.

The Superintendent Mr. Rosjen brought out the facts that the total school enrolments for 1966 were a little down from '65, and now stands at 2263. There are 113 teachers in the division, caring for the needs of 13 operating schools. Mr. Rosjen said that while the rural areas provide two-thirds of the recruits for education at university, the same rural areas get back only one-third. Even though the bursary plan helps to some extend, it is becoming increasingly difficult to recruit capable, qualified teachers. This, he said, is a province-wide problem.

The financial report showed that education is big business. The board budgeted for one million, two hundred and seventy-two thousand dollars, and actually spent enough to create a deficit of over $61 thousand on the year's operations. Most categories budgeted for were overspent, due to rising costs.

During the new business period some discussion took place regarding the pros and cons of the County System of Government and the upcoming plebiscite on the matter. Speaking on this matter were Trustee Cranston, Secretary Barth, Mr. Colvin Beairsto and Reeve Blatz.

Letters To The Editor

Strome, Alta., Feb. 11th
Editor Community Press

Dear Sir

May I have space in your letter column to comment upon all the "County" and "joint office" talk that has resulted in the coming plebiscite in Flagstaff Municipality.

A key issue in this controversy (but one that everyone seems reluctant to discuss openly) is the ridiculous small town politics. I am but one of a growing number of Flagstaff ratepayers living outside the Sedgewick Killam area who is getting sick and tired of helping finance a petty war between these two towns. As everyone knows the municipal headquarters is in Sedgewick & the school division in Killam. Between them these two have all but succeeded in disrupting the normal function of both the council and the school board. By pressures of one kind or another (whether direct or indirect does not matter) they have put the councillors and trustees in an almost impossible position. Under such a strain is it any wonder we appear to have indecision & uncertainty in our public affairs? The queer part of this sad story is that I very much doubt if either Killam or Sedgewick is actually causing serious eyes on the public facilities of the other, so much so they are trying to protect what they now have.

Should these "unseen pressures" not desist, and should these towns not leave our council and board to carry out their work, then I would suggest that the M. D. of Flagstaff and the School Board divide Killam and the whole bit and kibbutz in Strome. (That is closer to the population centre anyway). — Wilfred Hochbaum.

Killam, Alta., Feb. 11

Dear Sir:

The forthcoming February 20th plebiscite in Flagstaff is being held to allow electors to express an opinion with respect to the County form of local government. Whenever a county is formed the existing municipal council and the school board cease to exist and all their former rights and powers are then vested in a newly elected county council. The County Act states however, that only rural electors may sit on the council and only rural electors may vote in county elections in an effort to compensate to the towns and villages for this loss of direct voice in their school affairs, the county Act makes provision for some system whereby one-third of the villages & towns may name a representative to the county school committee. This somewhat dubious urban representation in school matters could be even less meaningful when it is remembered that the County Act also reserves unto the county council alone the final right and power to borrow money, pass by-laws & approve all estimates and budgets for all county purposes, including those of the school committee. The County Act was initially hailed as a form of local government that would be more efficient & economical for the taxpayers. Had these claims proved true we should possibly have considered the county long ago despite the undemocratic aspects with respect to urban school voice. Some 16 years experience in Alberta, has failed to substantiate either claim. As a representative of the Strome Seed Cleaning Plant at the January 9-10 convention in Edmonton I had occasion to hear an open discussion among men from the Counties of Warner, Vulcan, Stettler, Camrose & Grand Prairie. Without exception these men were much dissatisfied with the county system and said in may away from it. From experience they said they had found that taxes went up and the general level of services went down.

The volume of work and the responsibility associated with the office of both municipal council and school trustee is becoming ever more time consuming and involved, especially in the past two or three years. Of importance too, is the fact that while both municipal and school matters are both local issues in say given area, they nevertheless do differ greatly in many important essentials. Should a county be formed, rural residents must be elected who could not only afford to give up a good portion of time from their farm operations, but men who also possessed the interest, ability and knowledge to govern what is essentially two different systems involving millions of dollars, but which differ greatly in the basic rules they play in our society.

The trend to the county system in Alberta during its first 16 to 12 years, if it was ever a trend, would seem to have stopped, if not reversed, in the past couple of years. It is perhaps significant that no applications for the county status have been made to the provincial government, nor have any new counties been formed in last over two years. On the other hand rumblings of discontent have been heard from some existing counties and one has recently reverted back. It remains the democratic right & duty of electors to express their opinions in any form at election after due consideration of the issues. It is to be hoped that the electors of Flagstaff will indeed give serious thought to this particular issue before supporting any move to give up what we already have. — Bernard Engel.

MORE ON EDUCATION

This was supposed to be part two of a series on education in this country. Last week, I complained about obsolescence; the lack of everything but pupils; the unfairness of the fund-raising for education; the lack of any national standards; and the rigidity of practically everything in the system. Not bad for a start.

In all the years I wrote this column before I began peddling pedagogy, nobody tried to suppress my opinions. Many disagreed violently. Others threatened to cancel their subscriptions. Some said I was vulgar. And one reverend gentleman even offered to thrash me within an inch of my life. I reminded him that my big brother was a six-foot-two, 210-pound engineer, & I never heard another word.

The first hint that I should tone it down came from a representative of the "quality" teachers' lobby. Said they'd had several letters from members urging that I be drummed out of the service because I was destroying the teacher's image by mentioning here such human failures as sex and drink, and by using the odd epithet.

He asked me heavily what I would do in his position. I replied lightly that I'd do what I always do with letters from cranks and bigots — chuck 'em in the wastebasket. He was annoyed. Pissed down, he admitted there were two such letters. And I was conveyed.

Several subtle suggestions was from an inspector. A lady. She peered the word that the Deputy Minister on him, was concerned about my columns and its contents.

I turned indigo and snorted, "You mean the Department is trying to tell me what I can say and can't say in my column?

"Nonsense!", she blurted, visions of headlines dancing in her head. It's merely hoped that you'll use your own good judgment."

Next time, it was another inspector. At that time, a now-defunct newspaper for teachers was running my column. The paper was happy; the fan mail was heavy. But, wizened this inspector, he thought he should tell me, for my own sake, that I was getting in wrong with the federation.

"Waddaya takkin about!", I enquired in my best blend of English Department manner. And got no answer that I could pin down.

I seem to be down on inspectors this week. And so I am. We got the word the English inspectors were coming. I alerted my 15-odd birds in the English department.

Next morning, the English staff would have globulated your eye. Gals all in their best dresses, hair frush-done. Men with their shoes shined. And every single one glowing with virtue after working till one a.m. preparing the sort of un, realistic but model lessons that inspectors expect.

EXPO - "Greatest Show The World Has Seen"

(By A. W. E.)

What the weekly editors saw in one day, will take the average visitor to Expo a solid week. Of course the Pavilions were closed to see us work is still progressing. We saw most of them only from the outside Once they are equipped and open it will take a full seven days to take in and enjoy all the displays. The New York World Fair had 27 nations taking part and it took four full days to see it all. Canada has 70 nations participating, and this is why it is being said that Canada's Expo '67 will be the Greatest Show the world has ever seen.

Ten million visitors are expected during the five-plus months that the fair will be open, with over half of this number coming from the U. S.

Expo is designed to be a fascinating, educational, entertaining extravaganza, plus a rip-roarin' show of shows that will put all previous world's shows in the shade.

Expo site is placed along a 1 mile pier-front, a few small islands on the St. Lawrence River. The 300 acre area was doubled in size with 20 million tons of dirt fill taken from excavations for the new Metro Subway, from quarries and from the river bottom. At the peak period of island-building, dump trucks were hauling fill through Montreal to the site on a day and night basis at the rate of a truck-a-minute.

Official visitors to other fairs arrived back with fat dossiers on how NOT to run a fair, and Expo officials believe they have thought of everything. Any mistakes that are made will be entirely Canadian mistakes. The Japanese, who are holding a big world fair in 1970, have opened offices in Montreal and are watching everything closely.

One of the first things Expo planners learned at New York was the curse of lost. Nothing disenchants fair-goers more than sore feet, for have enough of them and the Fair will fail flat on its face. Montreal's most modern subway will whisk the visitor to the site which is only fifteen minutes from downtown. Once on the site, the visitor must never walk more than a few hundred feet in any direction. The Expo Express, air-conditioned electric train will zip around the grounds in 10 minutes elapsed time and move 20,000 passengers an hour in each direction. A network of mainroll and sky rides ties in with the Express to carry visitors deeper into the site grounds.

Canada which lays the grounds are treated with a chemical to turn the water Mediterranean blue, and will churn with motorboats of all kinds, gondolas, Chinese junks and other craft for pleasure-goers.

Modern rest rooms will dot the area, with shoe hospitals for broken heels, etc., and where all can eat foot massage machines.

To avoid long waiting lines at the numerous pavilions and amusements an Expo hint set up quite an elaborate system of computers, television screens, planning boards of maps, along with a "where-wheel-what control board. So if one gets tired of standing in line, he can just check the electronic board and find something else that interests him. If he chooses to stay in line, before an entertainment group comes along to entertain him.

FRUIT JUICE? FRUIT DRINK?
WHAT IS YOUR CHOICE?
Dr's The Vitamin "C" That Counts
Some of this information appeared some time ago, but I believe it can bear repeating.
To-day's food market offers the Canadian consumer a variety of fruit juices, fruit drinks, nectars, ades and beverages, etc., it is not surprising that the shopper becomes bewildered when faced with selection from this vast array of fruit products. To add more confusion to the process of choosing, the housewife must select the "form" of product she will buy: liquid, frozen, concentrated, crystallized or powder Statistics indicate that 17 1/2 per cent of the total amount of orange juice and orange drink products sold in food markets in Canada is captured by powders. It seems appropriate at this time to clarify for the consumer certain facts with regard to fruit juices and fruit drinks.
Food and Drug Regulations contain standards for approximately 275 foods. Among these are standards for orange juice, grapefruit juice, lemon juice, lime juice and orange juice. All these juices must meet the Food and Drug standards of composition.
Fruit drinks, on the other hand, come within the category of unstandardized foods and there is wide variety in the composition and quality. It should be pointed out, however, that all fruit drinks must carry a label which lists the kinds of ingredients, in descending order of proportion. In the list "water, sugar, fruit juice . . . you know that the largest percentages of the contents of particular product is water; next comes sugar, and so on. If more than one fruit appears in the name of the product, for example, "grapefruit orange", the fruit mentioned first must be present in the product in a greater amount than the second-name fruit. Consumers should make a practice of reading the labels of all foods they intend to purchase. Be sure you know what you are getting for your money.
Consumers want to know, too, that the products they buy are nutritious and wholesome. Because orange juice and tomato juice contain a sufficient natural content of Vitamin "C", addition of Vitamin C to these products is permitted. Apple juice, grape juice, or a juice containing apple juice together with another fruit juice may contain added Vitamin "C", since these juices are naturally low in Vitamin C.
All fruit drinks may have Vitamin "C" added to them. However, in order for the statement "contains Vitamin C" to appear on the product label, Food and Drug Regulations require that at least 30 milligrams of Vitamin "C" be present in a reasonable daily intake of the product.

Hardisty News

The Women's World Day of Prayer Service was held in St. Paul's United Church on Friday evening with members of all three churches, United, Anglican and Roman Catholic, as well as members of the CGIT participating. The message on the theme 'Of His Kingdom There Shall Be No End.' Following the service the ladies enjoyed a social and tea in the basement Attendance was only fair due to other affairs being held. It seems a pity that this first Friday in Lent, scheduled for years for this worthwhile service, could not be respected as such. In our smaller centres we usually try and avoid conflicting events. Evidently we Christian citizens of a most favored land do not consider the Day of Prayer too important. When we read of women in the underprivileged countries walking five miles to attend the service, when a great Queen (Salote of Tonga) takes the time to prepare our beautiful service, we must feel a touch of shame for our unconcern. It should be considered a privilege to add our voices to those of women the world over in this great cause of prayer.

Clarence Whitelock has been a patient in St. Anne's Hospital.

The community was shocked by the sudden death of Clarence Hughes on Tuesday. While he had been in poor health for several years, his collapse and death were unexpected. The sympathy of all is extended to his widow Lena, and to the members of his family. Funeral services were held from St. Paul's United.

The Legion Auxiliary met in the Hut on Monday evening. It was decided to hold the annual Valentine Show on April 7th this year due to the early Easter. The annual bedding plant sale will be held as usual. Lunch was served by Mrs J. McClements and Mrs. Matthews.

Sympathy is extended to Mr and Mrs W. Pedlar on the death of Mr. Pedlar's father Frank Pedlar, following a heart attack on Monday.

The regular meeting of the ACW was held in the parish hall Tuesday evening with Mrs Thomson as the hostess. Mrs Mills and Mrs Pedlar were appointed Centennial reps. The members were invited to attend the UCW meeting on Thursday when a discussion of some of the phases of church union was to be held. Arrangements were completed for the group's share in the World Day Of Prayer service.

Busy Bees bridge club met with Louise Thorp on Wednesday. Bridge winners were Maryon Dragar and Charlotte Gelka. During lunch, the president Marie Mitchell presented Lavrenti gift to Evelyn Dubrowsky, who is leaving this week to make her home in Edmonton.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs Bessie Miles has suffered a heart attack and is a patient in Vancouver General Hospital.

Among out of town relatives here for the Hopfe funeral were, Mr and Mrs Bill Hopfe and Mr and Mrs Alvin Hopfe of Drayton Valley; Mr & Mrs Melvin Land, Walker Land, Mr Clare Land, Mr and Mrs Archie Hopfe, Mr and Mrs Alan Hopfe all of Camrose; Mr and Mrs S Johnson of Edmonton; Mr and Mrs Gordon Strongquist, the Broughton family of Hughenden; Mr and Mrs Garnet Hopfe of Viking; Mr and Mrs Jack Thomas of Buck Lake.

Mrs Pete Stolz and boys spent the weekend at the F. Dragar home. Fred is home from a short stay in hospital.

Nine a.m. Word comes that they wouldn't be there. Sneezing and blowing. Any of us would have struck off for anywhere. But there city-survived drivers are made of sterner stuff by a bit of wind and snow.

So we shot off all those terrific scenes on the hills. Miles laughed heartily when they saw my dash cleaned off. It was the first time they'd seen me below the hummock-bone in months.

And tomorrow we have to do it all over again, because the inspectors are still coming, if they can make it. May they go into a big cave-bank and sit there for four hours. If they do struggle through, it will be an anti-climax. The girls' dresses are crushed and their hair needs combing. And I sure as hell am not going to shine my shoes two days in a row.

Just another of the evils of our system. A teacher is given a record of merit by an inspector, who soon him maybe once a year, for one or two lessons. The self-confident showman, who may be a lazy person normally, whips up a flashy lesson for inspection, and scores high. The self-conscious teacher, who normally does a terrific job, becomes nervous and makes a botch of things, and fails.

I don't really hate inspectors. They've changed. They are no longer the old terrors, but a pretty decent, helpful lot. But the system is past.

More next week, maybe.

Mrs. Reid also received greetings on the telephone from many friends and relatives, including some from Toronto and New Liskeard, Ontario, Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary and Camrose.

The Norma Wolfare Club, of which Mrs. Reid is an honorary member, presented her with a bouquet of Mums, Carnations and Roses, also a birthday cake artfully made and decorated by Betty Lewis.

Stampeders Defeat Commandoes 9 - 8

Monday night's game in Hardisty saw the Stampeders win by a score of 9 to 8 over Wainwright. The score at the end of the third period was 7-7. Wainwright scored the first goal in overtime, with Hardisty taking the game on two counters during the last five minutes.

Due to injuries to the Wainwright goalie in the second period, Roger Lehr tended goal. He proved to be a good man in the nets and Hardisty was unable to score on him until late in overtime.

Daysland outscored Hardisty 9-4 in Daysland on Saturday night, in a fast one-sided game. Due to illness many Stampe were unable to play, leaving the club short-handed.

The third period proved surprisingly humorous when a former Stampeder "Stee" donned his equipment to help out. Although very much out of condition, Bill Drager gave it a try and received applause for bravery.At least he gave someone a bit more rest. Thanks Bill. You tried.

A. T. A. Presents Engraved Tray

Mr. F. W. Hoskyn, president of the Provincial Executive Council, A. T. A., attended a general meeting of the Killam Local A.T.A. held last Tuesday in Killam.

Items on the agenda included arrangements to sponsor Tuition 300, Institutes to be held in the near future, and discussion of a banquet to be held in Stettler as a kick-off to Education Week.

Mrs. Beaver of Strome, who has retired after twenty years of teaching was presented by Mr. M. Stover local president, with a suitably engraved silver tray in token of her years of service.

The last half of the meeting was given over to Mr Hoskyn, who very ably answered questions which had been submitted to him by each staff, concerning A.T.A. matters.

Local Teams Do Well In Prov. Hockey Playoffs

Last weekend saw plenty of action in the Provincial Hockey Playoffs with all three Sedgewick teams winning their games.

In the Juvenile series against the Vegreville squad, Sedgewick All-Stars won the first game 9-2, and will go to Vegreville this weekend for the second game with a 6-point lead.

On Saturday evening the Sedgewick Midgets played at Wainwright and came home the winners 8 to 6. The second game was played Monday at Sedgewick with the home team winning 5 to 0, to take the series 13 to 0. There is nothing definite on who the Midgets play next, but it is believed to be the winners of Fl Sask -Bonnyville.

Last Friday night the Sedgewick Bantams were hosts to the Pumkin entry in the playoffs and defeated them 14 to 0. Pumkin played the second game, and this Friday the Bantams go to Eckville for the 1st game of a new series, with the 2nd game scheduled for Sedgewick the next night, Sat. Feb 25th at 7:00.

Indians Pick Up 6 Points During Weeks League Action

Killam Indians played three fast league games last week and collected six points for their efforts.

The Indians were at Viking Mon. Feb. 13 and defeated the Can Imps 6 to 5. On Wed. night the Daysland North Stars travelled to Killam with the home team winning 9 to 3. Then Provost invaded the Indian Reservation on Saturday night and defeated the tribesmen 3 to 2. It turned out that Provost had imported a few ineligible players, and the 2 points for the game were awarded to the Indians by the league executive.

Indians are also on the Provincial Playoff trail and will be travelling to Fort Saskatchewan on March 3. for the second game of that series, which is tied at 3-3 after an exciting first game. It would probably give the local boys a real boost if a number of supporters were to show up in the Fort (arena that is) to cheer them on.

Anderson Rink Top Senior Team

George Anderson and his Sedgewick rink won the local Zone Playoffs in the Senior Brier competition held at Holden last Sunday.

Architecture At Expo Will Interest Visitors

(By A. W. S.)

It doesn't profit anybody at all to put on a glorious fair if the visitors may be obliged to camp on the park benches at night, or be forced to pay the gouger's prices for a skeezy room. To avoid this, Canada's first Canadian Corp. operated by the fair set up a housing bureau called Logexpo, to list accommodation available housing within a 100 mile radius of Montreal. Every available room is inspected by a man from Logexpo and a price worked out with the owner, to which he must stick or go to prison or pay fine of $2000. Most big hotels in Montreal are already booked solid for Expo, but there are numerous motels, apartments and rooming houses, dormitories, private homes and camp sites, many with trailer parks. All you have to do is write Logexpo and tell them what you want to pay, how close to the site you want to be. This data is fed into a computer and presto, you will have a room.

The Australians have erected a beautiful Pavilion, but were somewhat disturbed when they learned a band shell would stand next door. Soon the Australians will import the Kangaroos in their display, and the animals dislike Beatle rhythms.

In an international spirit, eight Protestant and Catholic churches are sharing the Christian Pavilion. There was some disagreement over the color of the cross for the Pavilion, but this was resolved with a 12-foot high black-and-white cross in the shape of a T, said to be the kind of cross that Christ died upon.

It has been said that "architecture is frozen music", but yet it is to the architect that Expo offers the most. Expo will have entire frozen symphonies, for while we enjoy there the weather was cold, and even with the protective plastic sheets whipping about the roofs, workmen were hardened from the cold.

Great Britain has erected a stark white, windowless pavilion which is meant to convey a sense of solidarity, and its 309-ft high conical truncated tower, topped by a three-dimensional Union Jack, is really an eye-catcher.

So also is Canada's pavilion which consists of a huge inverted pyramid suggestive of an embryo, which in fact, was the chance inspiration of its design.

I for one thought the U. S. Pavilion was by far the most interesting. It consists of a plastic-and-glass bubble dome, 187 feet high and 250 feet across, which its designer called a "skybreak, geodesic dome". At a distance, with the sun bouncing off its tens of thousands of facets, the dome puts one in mind of an enormous orange-shaped diamond.

The U. S. Pavilion will house a Project Apollo lunar exploration exhibit. On opening day, from the U. S. Pavilion, a space-man will meet a Russian space-man on a bridge halfway between the two pavilions, amid strident hoopla.

When the various nations signed up for Expo, the Canadians said in effect, "Now look, we don't want a barrage of propaganda, and results of industry. We want the people to be entertained, to have fun." This was apparently taken to heart, even by the Soviets, who have installed a device in their Pavilion where visitors can experience a sensation of weightlessness.

This brings something else to my mind, as next week we will explore the food situation.

Sales Tax!

There has been much speculation during recent years that the Alberta Government will institute a sales tax for the province . Although this has been denied by Premier Manning, he nevertheless persists in lamenting the ever increasing costs of administering public affairs and has hinted, ubeit vaguely, that new sources of revenue must be found soon. We have a personal dislike for taxes in any form, although we view them as a necessary evil under our system. Of all taxes though, we believe the sales tax to be one of the most equitable devised by the cunning mind of man, provided that the basic necessities of life are exempt. We are inclined far more favorably toward this tax than to the Inheritance Tax, which we view as one of the most vicious in existence today.

Taxes of any kind hit at the grassroots level, and the latest example of this fact is the recent instructions the Community Press received last week to levy a 12 percent sales tax on commercial printing as of January 1st.; an increase of 1 percent. This hits our customers, and of course we don't like that, for the simple reason that we like our customers.

Centennial Projects!

Perhaps it sounds a little bit dull, with all the Centennial Projects that are being advocated as ways of celebrating Canada's 100th birthday. But we have a suggestion for an outdoor project that we think goes nicely with the "plant a tree" idea. To be sure we all think we shall never see a sight more beautiful than a tree. Canada is a beautiful country. Its urban and rural communities are blessed by a bountiful nature. Its vacation spots are ideal. To say these things is not to indulge in clichés. It is acknowledging a truth.

Yet how many of us through ignorance or indifference, mar the beauty of these riches by the careless way we dispose of our litter.

So we suggest as a Centennial Project, a campaign to end the litter-bugging in Canada. It is a year-round project and one in which every man, woman and child may have a part. It could be a way to impress upon children that concern for cleanliness is one of the basic responsibilities of good citizenship. Canada is a beautiful land. In 1967 let us each help to make it even more so. Let us eliminate the litterbugs on a voluntary basis.

It Cannot Be!

Receipt of fuss is what members of parliament are for. The invention of radio and television must have added to the volume of incoming mail. The government side of the House of Commons is always inclined to assert that they cannot do anything about the programming atrocities inflicted on the Canadian public by the CBC. They say the crown corporation is, and imply that it should be free of control.

Such a situation can't continue. The people of Canada thro' taxes and minds contribute absolutely everything that the CBC has in cash and liberty. No department or division of CBC can forever be left alone to do its worst or its best. It must be made aware that there are people who can put it out of business. No one, just because he has a job in the CBC, can be allowed to assert an independence that outrages common sense, decency and propriety. It the CBC is not caught up this week or this year it will be next week or next year. — The Printed Word.

Alberta Budget Tops $800 Million For Coming Year

(By John Warren)

The first full week of the Legislative session started with a bang, and the tempo picked up from there.

The New Democratic member for Pincher Creek-Crowsnest Gerth Tor cott, jumped to his feet during the question period on opening day to "clear my name" after being accused of malicious gossip during the last session.

What he wanted to do was table a huge pile of documents and photostats which he claimed support certain allegations of impropriety on the part of two government members.

He was ruled out of order that time, but two days later was able to mount the whole shebang during his turn in the throne speech debate. Mr. Turcott says the information he has proves regular Mackenzie Addies Minister A. J. Hooke, and the former Provincial Treasurer E. W. Hinman is sufficient to warrant a judicial inquiry or investigation by a legislative committee.

The members now plan to give Mr. Turcott's photostats careful study and will decide just what action is warranted, if any.

An encyclopoedic bill rewriting the Vehicles and Highways Traffic Act got first reading.

Some of the major provisions are compulsory vehicle inspections, restrictions on scooter size and power, compulsory crash helmets for motorcycle riders, changes in red lights, and speed limit revisions.

The highways minister says the entire switch to uniform legislation across the province is based "on the premise that municipalities will voluntarily relenquish their right to pass traffic by-laws."

The massive Resources Bill and 36 others were introduced on the opening few days.

The apparent basis of the government to get up a campaign issue the budget gave added weight to election predictions.

Other proposed legislation would allow appointment of 1 more judge in Alberta to handle the increasing case load in the courts, would right on the town overlying suburban wen the province would change certain municipal tax structures.

In answer to a question Premier Manning said the province would introduce "right" legislation to control sales of the drug LSD.

Debate on the throne speech was generally pretty light-weight as the government prepared to be holding their major speeches for the budget debate which follows.

Only members who spoke was the Calgary-Bowness members, Charles Johnston, who called for an increase in the minimum wage from a dollar to $1.35 and for a boost in the homeowner rebate from $80 to $75.

One final piece of legislation would allow people to will their bodies, or parts of them, to science. At present no person can make a binding commitment for the disposal of his body.

The budget was brought down at 8:30 p.m. on Friday. Here are the highlights of the budget brought in by Mr. Aaberg, at the end of the shortest throne speech debate in recent record:

The total spending of the province is $103,000,000 higher than that budgeted for last year.

At $834,000,000 it is twice the budget of Saskatchewan.

It also predicts a deficit of $27,- 000,000, as against a surplus of 39 thousand dollars in Saskatchewan.

It's about $11 million greater than last year, and here's where the money will be spent Education $288 million; Health $108; Welfare $27; Highway 040. More on budget next week.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Best Box Office

OTTAWA —The House of Commons standing committee on finance, trade and economic affairs will be hearing from almost all of those who are looking for certain changes in Prime Minister Hill. And when they learn that the Committee is engaged in a study of some 110 pages of Bank Act they are not likely to have changes at heart. Yet this year the Committee has provided the best box office attraction Parliament has had in offer.

On two occasions spectator seats have been at a premium, with standing room only. To an extent, both controversial issues that sparked the attention on a Committee that once found it hard to whip up a quorum of members for its sittings, had a common denominator — small business participation in the Canadian banking system.

The first occasion saw James S. Rockefeller, chairman of the Northern City Bank of New York seat of its subsidiary, the Mercantile Bank of Canada and President Robert MacFadden of Mercantile protesting their treatment in the proposed new Bank Act. So long as Mercantile is wholly owned by the New York B. ak its assets and liabilities are limited to $25 million. The Royal Bank has assets of almost $4 billion. Commerce of nearly $4.4 billion. In this case Mercantile obviously has little chance of getting into the dividend paying category. Yet if it is to be allowed to grow its parent would have to sell $7.5 million in shares to Canadians (three quarters of its holdings) probably at a fire sale prices.

This put Mercantile in a difficult position but neither the New York millionaire or the bank president could convince Committee members that they hadn't gone into the purchase of Mercantile from Dutch interests with their eyes open. And if any more here were ready to believe Mr. Rockefeller when he said that they hadn't, they were soon disillusioned by the evidence of Governor Rasminsky of the Bank of Canada.

And it is a good bet that the Committee will be coming to Prince Minister Sharp soon with a compromise proposal which he is ready to consider so long as it doesn't change the spirit of the new provision. As one of them remarked after Rasminsky's testimony: "The ball game's over".

But the Mercantile show was almost dull compared to the near showdown in which the controversial figure of James Coyne ex-governor of the Bank of Canada took centre stage. In 1961 Mr. Coyne had walked off the Ottawa stage and out of office with a sense of showmanship that is still remembered on Parliament Hill. He had quarrelled with the Diefenbaker Government on a matter of principle.

In fact Mr. Coyne appears ready to quarrel on matters of principle at the drop of a hat which was the reason for his appearance last week before the Committee. Mr. Coyne, now the president of the Bank of Montreal Canada which has still to open its doors, had stripped himself a few days before of all directorships in the huge British international Finance complex which owns 51 percent of the Westbank shares. This, in itself might have aroused little interest but Mr. Coyn's showmanship again came to the fore. He issued a statement to the press attacking BIF management, claiming among other things that it had been trying to peddle Westbank shares to American banks and had given an option to buy 20 percent of its holdings to the Mendelwirk National Bank, a New York state institution which is owned by large U. S. finance company that in turn owns a Canadian finance company.

Mr. Coyne's statement said B. ar shares plummeting and if a would start a run on one of the Canadian affiliates of the BIF CORPORATION. An Old Safety Device

Ever since automobiles were first invented, nearly a century ago, there's been a novel safety device built into each vehicle, regardless of who manufactured it. It is called the SPACE CUSHION. It consists of the space between the cars following one another. It should be at least one car length for every ten miles per hour that the cars are travelling. It is the greatest safety device on the highway today.

Sheila Rawluk - Lloyd Tanton Wed At Viking

A lovely Christmas wedding took place in St. Mathew's Anglican Church in Viking on December 28, 1966 when Sheila Lynn, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rawluk, and Lloyd Thomas Davis Tanton, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Laird Tanton of Sedgewick, were united in marriage by the Rev. McDermott. The organist was Mrs. Krste Simmons of Kinsella.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was in a floor length gown of pearl de elegance, styla with an empire line and a short train. The bouffant three-tiers veil of nylon tulle was held in place by a flower headpiece. She carried her Grandmother Carter's prayer book which was trimmed with sweetheart roses and ribbons. Her only jewellery was a double strand of pearls, gift of the groom.

Miss Pat Rawluk, Mrs. Xano Parsons, sisters of the bride, and Miss Marilyn Tanton, sister of the groom, were her attendants. They wore identical floor length dresses of ice orange peace de elegance featuring an empire line accented with lace. Their coronet headpieces were of matching lace. They carried bouquets of white baby mums.

Attending the groom were his brothers, Ronald and David, also Brian Rawluk, brother of the bride. Guests were ushered by Jim Hopkins, friend of the groom, and Dennis Rawluk, cousin of the bride.

For her daughters wedding, Mrs. Rawluk wore a green astron jersey suit with a winter white hat and black accessories. Mrs. Tanton, mother of the groom wore a two piece jade crepe dress with white accessories. They both wore rose corsages.

Special guests at this happy occasion were Mrs. Longrud, grandmother of the groom, Mrs. H. Rawluk and Mr. & Mrs. A. Carter, grandparents of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in Kinsella Memorial Hall. The bride's table was centered by a lovely three tiered cake decorated by Mrs. G. Rawluk and Mrs. T. Oakes, aunts of the bride.

Mr. T. Oakes was master of ceremonies. Mr. Lloyd Cameron presented the toast to the bride to which the groom responded.

In the evening a wedding dance was held in Lougheed Community Hall, music supplied by Erickson's orchestra For going away the bride changed to a two piece jade green ensemble with white accessories.

The happy couple are now residing in Daysland.

B.R.H.L. Playoffs Now Underway

Semi-final playoffs in the Battle River Hockey League started last night with Wainwright at Killam.

In the same series Irma played at Killam on Wednesday and the second game will be at Irma on Saturday night.

Dates for the rest of the series have not been settled as yet since both Killam and Wainwright are involved in Provincial Playoffs.

On Monday evening the Wainwright Commandoes were presented with the cup for finishing in first place in the regular league play. Mel Garbe of the Wainwright club, received the Most Valuable Player award. Goal Tending and Scoring winners have not been determined.

67 Car Plates Reflectorized

Alberta's vehicle license plates for 1967 will provide an added safety factor for provincial motorists by being "reflectorized" to give motor vehicles approaching at night and stationary vehicle on the highways some warning that there is an obstruction in their path. Over-all production costs per plate for this process of reflectorization are minimal and the potential for saving human life and preventing property damage is considered well worth the extra expenditure.

Marking Centennial year, the green on white plate also carries a representation of the Centennial symbol and dates 1867-1967.

Prefix letters for passenger cars this year will be M, C, E, A and W used in conjunction with fourteen secondary letters. Distribution will give southern Alberta the B series, northern areas the H series.

Lions Sell Easter Seals

The 1967 Easter Seal Campaign starts on February 24th and again, on behalf of the sponsoring Lions Club of Camrose I would like to thank your newspaper for its co-operation and interest manifested over the years in the way of publicity for this annual fund raising project for the benefit of needy recipients in your community. The funds collected are administered locally by the Easter Seal Committee of the Club and are directed to the medical and surgical expenses of those crippled or otherwise maimed children and adults whose afflictions are not financially supported by any government or other agency.

The area solicited from and administered by our Easter Seal Campaign committee is a large one extending from Bittern Lake on the west to Hardisty on the east; from Hay Lakes on the north to Bashaw on the south. Over the years many have benefited from the assistance given to the limit of our budget.

Your area has always responded generously, in fact, last year it was number two in the province in percentage-wise donation.

With this fine record behind us I am certain that with the all-out response anticipated our 1967 area objective of $4000 will be over-subscribed in the five weeks campaign. Easter Seal envelopes are being mailed out to every citizen in your area and again we solicit their usual generous response. — Jack Pollock, Chairman Easter Seal Cont., Camrose Lions Club.

Many Attractions At Expo

If your idea of a real thrill in eating is a hamburger and milkshake then Expo isnot really for you (although these will be available). For there will be a Restaurant operated by an Italian-Swiss, which will limit its menu to sirloin steak served in a sauce of sweet butter, herbs, cognac and a number of secret ingredients, said to be out of this world. This cafe has been so popular in other world fairs that people have to be put down to get in. Some of the many other and varied places will serve only some part of a robert's kind. There will be Hawaiian cafes, German restaurants, Brazilian cafes. The Soviets are bringing over 40 chefs and bakers, some 9 tons of caviar, 30 tons of sturgeon, and 25,000 liters of vodka for their three restaurants.

The Scandinavians are putting up a 57-course Smorgasborg, interlaced with shots of aquavite

Of course there will also be the ordinary foods of every kind, with meal prices to suit every range of desire and ability.

In The Arts

There will be a "World Festival of Entertainment" at Expo. Do you like opera? How about these. La Scala of Milan, the Vienna State Opera, the Bolshoi Opera, the Hamburg Stage Opera and the Royal Opera of Stockholm.

If you like Ballet, there will be Belgium's Ballet du Vingtieme Siecle, the Paris Opera Ballet and the New York City Ballet, Australian Ballet, dancers from Ceylon, and the Troupe Folklorique Tunisienne.

The National Theatre of Great Britain will be there, with Sir Laurence Olivier; the Comedie de St. Etienne from France and the Kabuki Theatre of Japan. For Orchestras, you will have your choice of Concertgebouw of Amsterdam, the New York Philharmonic with Leonard Bernstein, the Montreal and Toronto Symphony Orchestras, the Melbourne Symphony, and many others besides.

For The Spectacular

In the Automotive Stadium built especially for Expo, the world famous Gendarmerie Francaise will put on a show involving 760 military policemen, 110 horses, 40 motorcycles and 18 jeeps. In a nighttime performance in a darkened stadium, the jeeps will rocket into each other in a gigantic game of what the modern call "chicken". They will miss one another by inches.

The Canadians will perform in a 1760-man military searchlight tattoo, the largest such ever staged, depicting Canada's military history.

There will be a "World Horse Spectacular, and the Ringling Bros. the Barnum and Bailey Circus, "The Greatest Show On Earth", and all kinds of other attractions.

SUGAR AND SPICE
by Bill Smiley

MY FINAL SAY

O.K I know I know enough. This is positively the last in a series of columns on education. Let me repeat that I'm no expert, just a parent, tax payer and teacher, and equally concerned in each role.

I've been critical in some quarters no doubt, my remarks have been considered rash heresy But there is a positive side. Let's look at it

Most cheering is the tremendous interest in educational improvement both from within and without the system Departments of education are spending large amounts of time, thought and money in an attempt to scramble into the second part of the twentieth century

New universities are springing up like mushrooms, with fresh and invigorating ideas, vital young teachers.

Men and women in all walks of life are taking a hard look at what they are getting for their money, and what they want for their children As a result of these things, much of the old rigidity and inflexibility are crumbling under heavy fire.

Changes are coming. It's not been any easier to get them started then to make a team of oxen breath into a gallop. But they're coming, even though they may gallop right through the fence.

Thomas Acquinas hasn't much to say to swingers of today, with the New Morality on one side of them and nuclear annihilation on the other In fact, a punning colleague suggested: "Should Old Acquinas be forgot?"

Egerton Ryerson is not exactly haunting the halls of Ryerson Institute. It's more likely he's holding his heavenly head in his hands with horror as he sees the students of that establishment putting away more ale per capita than their prototypes of Oxford and Cambridge in the days of Elizabeth I.

However, we drift. Here are some of the improvements. Some may flop. But at least the ponderous parkyderm is pulling its feet out of the mud at last. With a resultant, resounding squelch.

Teaching machines, televisors, computers will take over 99 per cent of the dissemination of knowledge. They're a fact now. The kids of today's students will have to listen to boring tales from their parents about the "good old days when there was a teacher in every class-room."

This revolution, in turn, will eliminate the lock-step progress of the pressed, where the swift are held back, and the slow are scrambling, because courses are aimed at the average. The kids will move at their own speed Learning will be satisfying and exciting

There'll be strong opposition to this. There'll be dark whispers that it is undemocratic, that it will produce an elite. They'll say it's bad for the bright child because he won't be emotionally mature if, he's say, he's ready for university at 13.

Baloney. Education isn't democratic now. Not when one kid has to slog groceries after school to buy decent clothes, and a class-mate is out skiing. Not when the first kid hasn't a chance to go on because he must help support his family, while the second kid goes off to university to find a husband. Better an elite of the mind than an elite of middle-class money and morality.

As for the emotionally mature bit, that too, is poppycock Some people are emotionally mature at 10, others never.

Another big change will be curricula. Kids will be taught less facts more about life. That is, instead of square roots and dangling participles and the Peloponnesian Wars, they'll learn about themselves and other people, about beauty and economics. about leisure and love.

Annual examinations, which have about as much to do with education as I have to do with Captain Lancelot will vanish.

Schools will have shorter terms, more frequent holidays, but will likely operate year-round.

Teaching will improve, because it will become a dynamic, creative profession, attracting the dynamic, creative people.

I hate to spoil this vision of educational Utopia, but I have one more prediction. The whole thing is going to cost more and more and more. That's the only prophecy I will unconditionally guarantee

The Winds Of Change

(By G. Zwicker)

The "winds of change" whirled and eddied around and within the Camrose United Church and stirred the hearts of delegates, Feb. 21 & 22 at the sessions of the Coronation Presbytery. Conference President, Rev. Peter Hemm felt this wind as he travelled the province. Because people fail to measure up to expectations they feel dejected. In the lives of church people, too often gregariousness has taken the place of commitment.

Statistical Sec. J. deVries calculated the value of church property at over 1 1/2 million dollars, and a gain in membership of 230 in the Presbytery. Some $35,766 had been sent to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund.

After some discussion, a resolution was passed, recommending that the people in the congregations make a study of the background causes of the conflict in Vietnam, & pray for cessation of hostilities and for a negotiated peace; also to give material contribution to alleviate some of the suffering and want of the people of Vietnam. Whole hearted support was expressed for Dr. Chester Ronning, both of his leadership and statements.

The Pilot Project of the Coronation Presbytery Women proved its own success The group set its own goal for "over and above" gifts and of the Conference Allocation of $4,- 700 contributed $1185. The Volunteer method is to be tried all across Canada.

A study and free discussion of the Rex Dolan book The Big Chance, breathed the wind of change in evangelistic methods during the evening gathering. Old methods no longer attract and win people. Rev. Felzy Peterson, guiding the forum, opined "The words and deeds of all believing people in every sphere of life can be more effective than the sensationalism on vocal testimony of old time".

The winds of change swept toward Dayaland Pastoral Charge as Rev. McNeil has accepted a Call to the Pleasantview Church in Edmonton.

As changes are likely to be made in the Marriage Registration form, the court recommended "The decision to question of racial origin".

Officers elected: Chairman, Rev. McPhee of Camrose; Sec., Rev. W. G. Zwicker of Hardisty; Treas., Rev Wood of Donalda; PastoralRelation, Rev. Lewis, Sedgewick; Nominating Com., Rev. Barkwell, Provost.

Persons in attendance from this area: Mrs. W. Ferrier, Mrs. Barkwell, Mrs E. Lindsay, Mrs Courtney, Dr. Brundage, Ken Drever, J. Robinson. G. Rombold and Fred Forster.

GREEN ACRES
SOW NUTRITION!
Reduced daily consumption levels is one of the latest trends in modern sow management, says A. Reddon, Livestock Supervisor with the Animal Industry Division.
It used to be thought that the relationship of protein to energy or total digestible nutrients could be changed if the daily feed intake of an animal was reduced. However, work carried out by Dr. Bowland at the University of Alberta has now shown that this is not the case. He has proven that dry and gestating sows under a confined housing system can perform satisfactorily on about four pounds of a 14 to 16 per cent protein ration per day. The daily feed allowance for animals kept under semi-confinement or in small fenced enclosures should be less than six pounds per sow daily.
Her recommended daily feed allowance for gilts is still six to seven pounds of a 15 percent protein ration per day These animals require a higher level of protein than mature sows because they have not yet attained full growth.
Mr. Reddon says the optimum weight for a mature sow is about 400 pounds. Her weight should increase slightly during the last half of the gestation period. Overly fat sows, besides being uneconomical from the point of view of feed costs, tend to be harder to breed and are inclined to have small litters.
Mr. Reddon suggests that the following feed formulas be followed for the sow herd and for the herd sire. Ninety pounds of grain (equal parts by weight of barley and oats, wheat and oats or straight barley) plus 10 pounds of a protein-mineral vitamin supplement make one ration. The same formula can be used for gilts, providing the protein supplement is increased two or three percent. The grain-supplement allowance can be halved when sows and gilts are on good pasture.
A nursing sow supplement can be fed at the same level as the dry sow supplement. Because of the cost, it should only be fed during the lactation period. This basic daily feed allowance for a nursing sow is five to six pounds plus three-quarters of a pound for each suckling.
Regarding minerals, on the basis of present knowledge, it is reason to believe that the present recommendation of one-half of one percent salt, one-half percent of phosphorous (10 pounds of each in every 100 pounds of feed) can be reduced by a third to one-half and still be sufficient to meet the nutritional requirements of the sow herd. An imbalance or over supplementation of minerals can cause difficulties.
Present vitamin recommendation (3.5 million international units of vitamin A and 300,000 international units of vitamin D per ton of feed) are thought to be two to three times higher than the amount actually required. However, no problems are likely to arise from over supplementation of vitamins. Although dehydrated alfalfa is a source of vitamin A and is often used for this purpose, it is an expensive way of providing this nutrient. Alfalfa is low in both energy and protein and is not needed in a properly balanced ration.
Feed additives such as antibiotics says Mr. Reddon, have no place in sow rations.
The National Research Council Bulletin on the nutritional requirements of swine is currently under review. The new edition, incorporating major revisions in feeding recommendations for all classes of pigs, is expected to be released in July.

The Letter Box

Dear Sir:

Let's face it. Everyone in his right mind wants to see the fighting in Vietnam stop. But, as writer Ernest Hemingway said when urged by a Soviet contemporary to sign a petition condemning U. S. policies in Vietnam: "You ask us to condemn half a war, OUR HALF? I beg of you to ask YOUR people to join us in condemning ALL war and to stop sending munitions of death through North Vietnam and against the South".

To that I can only say 'Amen'. Certainly no credence can be given a one-sided view of the Vietnam War which consistently sees our American neighbors as the Wichai Witch of the West and Communist North Vietnam as the sweet, innocent Dorothy. It is time Canadians began marching with placards calling for "Fair Play for the U. S. A." — Yours Sincerely, Jane Hunt.

F. U. A. President Criticizes Grant

The Homeowner grants instituted by the Provincial Government, and the two mill increase in Municipal contributions to the school foundation program, together, present an example of "the Government giveth and the Government taketh away" according to Paul Babey, President of the Farmers' Union of Alberta.

In a prepared statemtn he said the home owner grants make the Government look like "good fellows" to the voters, and in most cases had little value, since they were tax based at most "Giving all homeowners a grant of $50 certainly doesn't make economic sense when viewed in the light of a deficit budget" he said.

The FUA President said these dollar words have been lacking if applied to the school foundation program. "The increasing costs of education must be met, but the tax load must be based on ability to pay."

"For many years the FUA has recommended a Royal Commission be set up to inquire into the matter of provincial taxation, and in view of the present deficit budget and the tax and grant juggling going on, the study is long overdue," said Mr. Babey.

Large Crowd At Hardisty Ice Carnival

HARDISTY — A large crowd filled the Hardisty Memorial Arena on Friday evening when the Figure Skating Club presented its "Canada's Centennial Carnival".

An imaginative and well organized program combined with good skating, to make one of the best carnivals yet. Three guest skaters from the Glenora Skating Club of Edmonton gave several crowd pleasing numbers, while some of the senior members of the local club, Patsy Moody, Maureen Madden, Bonnie Rembough, Phyllis Young, Darcy Broughton and Danny Sims, did solo and duet specials. The smaller skaters won the hearts of the crowd, especially with their "French Minuet." A comedy skit, "The Fur Traders" was well done by some of the boys.

The Carnival King and Queen were chosen by ballot from and by the senior club members, these honors going to Darcy Broughton and Pat Moody The crowning took place during the intermission. Last year's Queen, Miss Beth Burpee, placed the crown and robe on the new Queen, and His Honor Mayor Rempel did the same for the King. Gifts were presented by Mrs. Vera Hendricks. president of the Skating Club

Much credit is due to Mrs Lorna Hendricks who took over the instruction and organization at a difficult time, and to the mothers who helped so whole-heartedly.

Numbers on the program were: Confederation Circus; Society Social; Canadian Cuties; Precision Patrol; Indian Feathers; Silver Spurs; Buttons and Bows; Western Hoe Down; Dance Dolls; Ice Cream Parade; French Minuet; Prairie Crocus; Balancing Ballerinas; Fur Trad ers; Latin Influence; Toast to the Future.

Strome Rinks Dominate Killam Sportsman Spiel

KILLAM — Forty rinks representing Killam and twelve surrounding towns treated a good attendance of local curling fans to a fine brand of curling during the 2nd annual Sportsman Spiel. George Borgel of Strome a perpetual prize winner at Killam, and his rink of Ronny Robbins, Pete Curtis and John Hauck, laid claim to the main prize of four 32 cubic foot automatic rifles. The Borgel rink defeated Munro Lehne of Amisk in the First Event final. Lehne, a 1967 ACA Zone Winner, was aided by W. Johnson and the Adams brothers of Czar (the latter now being a well known and capable battery in Highway 13 baseball circles)

The Second Event prize of Binoculars, was won by Gordie Hilker and his rink of A. Saunders, B. Hart, and J. Gardiner while Don Hayes (M Nichaus. D. Pfeffer and A. Allen) and Bill Wesley (R McNabb, D Laing and B. Arnold) cleaned up the third and fourth events respectively It is interesting to note that out of the five Killam entries, four took home prizes, with the Provider rink being squeezed out in the 5's of the Final event.

The ladies, as usual, did a fine job upstairs at the lunch counter, as well as putting on the annual Smorgasbord. The curlers took time off on Thursday evening for a "Smoker" at the nearby Legion Hall.

First Event: Borgel, Lehne, Cameron and Gibb

Second Event: Hilker, Oberg, Tanton and Bonnett.

Third Event: Hayes, Jacobs, Peterson and Bradley

Fourth Event: Wesley, Rabbits, Bouchard and Rawe

A Look At Work!

A University professor who's name we don't recall, says that we are prisoners of archaic thinking about human motivation and work. In the welfare State, he says, the word work is archaic because everyone is entitled to basic needs as a right and work has ceased to be the way in which people supply their needs. At this rate, archaic must be the word for Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland. He wants the people to work harder, work for longer hours, more days a week and more weeks a year. He has some old-fashioned ideas to give. Eat less, wear less, be more adventurous, live lower on the hog, and produce more. This, Joey indicates, is the way to improve your economy.

Vote Compulsion!

Besides the rejection of the County system of government, the recent plebiscite in Flagstaff Municipality brought out a flaw in our system of balloting. It is the complete apathy of people as a whole, even on matters which may have a real impact on their way of life. In the recent voting, only 48% of the eligible voters expressed an opinion. While this is considered good by modern standards, it still means that over half were apathetic to the whole issue. This is not good.

It has been suggested, at the provincial level, that voting should be made compulsory and that failure to vote be made punishable by a fine. With this we take strenuous issue as a way of solving the problem. We consider it a poor approach to absenteeism from the polls. Compulsion may accomplish the end but the means cannot be justified in a free society. Voting is a right. Non-voting is equally a right & one which compulsion would violate. Deliberate spoiling of ballot is a hollow form of protest but compulsory voting would leave many who do not approve of any candidate, or suggestion with the option of paying a fine or voting against their consciences.

The Homeowner Grant

Even a further rise in the business tax is preferable to increased taxes on homes. We say this in spite of the fact that we consider the business tax a necessary evil. A business does have the capacity to earn, while the home has not and here is where the difference lies. It is taken for granted that homeowners welcome the $50 rebate on taxes as personal relief from an ever-increasing problem, but notwithstanding this, the grant has a tinge of foul play involved. In all such endeavors, and certainly in this instance, the burden of administration falls on the cities, towns and villages. Local secretaries are charged with the bulk of the work involved, additional responsibility to their duties, which by the way, are becoming more onerous with each succeeding year. Much of this is being caused by more and more government activities at the local level along with the accompanying red tape. We have a suggestion to make.

Why not increase the grant to $55, with the additional $5 to go to the municipality which administers the act? This would reimburse the local authorities and in all probability would be passed on, partially at least, to the secretaries and staff who do the work.

The Use Of Concrete!

One thing we noticed on our recent trip to Montreal, is that concrete is everywhere. It is rapidly changing the face of not only Montreal, but of every city across Canada. Concrete is now being used in a multiple of various forms: highrise buildings, complexes, bridges, dwellings, exterior decoration as well as interior. It has become a major factor in speeding up the work on dozens of buildings at Expo. Not only this, concrete is revolutionizing the construction industry beyond imagination, by permitting year-round work, as well as permitting complete and modern changes in the concept of design.

Of course concrete has been used in one form or another ever since recorded time. Egyptians used it in building pyramids and the Greeks improved on it; then the Romans perfected a cement that would harden into concrete under water. Many of these old structures have survived until now simply because of the quality of the cement used. Although cement has a long history here in Canada, it was not until recent years that new techniques have enabled its use in a broad variety of ways we find today. It has been found that cement generates its own heat when it is poured, thus permitting its use at low temperatures which a few years ago would have been considered fatal. Now, by insulating the forms, cement can be poured in almost any kind of weather. By working through the winter many projects are completed months ahead of the established schedule. Concrete is strong in compression but weak in tension, and all this is solved by the use of steel rods stretched taut, and as they tend to draw back to normal length they pull the concrete together.

More and more use will be made of concrete in the future, even in the housing realm, and more especially in urban renewal. Concrete has come into its own in Canada today.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH — Profit is necessary to keep our stock of assets up to date and to enable them to be modernized, and to give a return on savings. Companies must earn a proper return on their capital and profit is not, and should not be, a dirty word where it is properly earned. — James Callaghan, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, September 1966.

Cradle To Grave Responsibility Asked In Report

(By John Warren)

Last week was by far the most interesting one of the 1967 session to date.

It saw a long procedural debate which resolved little. Except that it gave every indication that the rules that apply to the government side of the house are not strenuous, live lower on the hog, and produce more. This, Joey indicates, is the way to improve your economy.

It's the old story of everybody in the house being equal — it's just that some are more equal than others.

All fist wrangling aside, the information and legislation put before the house last week was as interesting as any in the last 5 years.

First there was the huge report on health services in Alberta. It has been two years in the making and it makes 347 recommendations. The recommendations include drastic changes in organization in the health department itself. The whole proposed program is aimed at making health services standard throughout the province.

It would also appear to give a cradle-to-the-grave responsibility to the department for guiding & protecting Albertans.

For instance: Tobacco would carry labels saying they are harmful to health. Courses would be conducted on sex, family planning and venereal disease. Contraceptives would be made available to people who can't afford them. Assistance would be given to communities in providing fluoridation. All foods and beverages would be closely watched.

There are 300-and-some-odd more but, that gives you the general idea.

Then there was the report of the hockey committee tabled by Youth Minister Bob Clark. It did not leave many aspects of the game untouched, and while it may make some hockey people pretty angry, it will undoubtedly please parents and players.

It noted that amateur refereeing is often a thankless job. And it noted that every boy in Alberta wants to play on an indoor rink. It said coaches often quit because of abuse from parents. And it talked of safety scholarships and stick-handling.

But it reserved its most important comments for the subject of exploitation of young players. Nearly everybody in hockey was blamed to some extent, the AAHA, the CAHA and the NHL.

Legislation to protect young players is being considered, but in the meantime the youth department is taking steps of its own. It will establish a committee of experts to answer the questions of players and parents on everything from contracts to the equipment.

Young Mr. Clark's department is showing every sign of doing some far more important work for youngsters than most observers thought it could do in such a short period.

And finally there were some interesting changes in liquor laws put before the house.

They would make it legal to make beer wine at home, to drink in commercial aircraft, to let men enter mixed city beer parlors alone, to order a drink in a hotel room through room service and to allow city police forces to operate "wet" cadences. No Sunday drinking, though.

Generally the changes go a long way towards legalizing a lot of things Albertans were doing anyway.

The Package Deal

OTTAWA — The most that can be said with certainty about the Carter report on taxation for many weeks to come is that it is a very long-term proposition.

Don't let those initial beatings the stock market took bother you too much. And don't try to read significance into the first reactions of politicians. In the long-term, they'll probably prove meaningless.

No one will be surprised that New Democrat Leader Tommy Douglas declared himself in favor of the recommendation to levy a capital gains tax. No more surprising is the negative reaction of Tory leadership candidate Mr. Geo. Hees, who was until recently the president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges.

The best advice is that handed out by Finance Minister Michael Sharp; read the six volumes and talk much later.

That is what most intelligent MP's are now doing. Long before they make up their minds, the scores of pressure groups affected by the Report will descend on them.

The Government itself will wait until at least the end of the year before indicating its general intentions The Bill, if and when it comes, will go to a parliamentary committee for public hearings, before being debated in the house. Final legislation, if decided upon, is probably two years and an election away.

The Report's first test has little to do with whether its implementation is desirable or not. The question now exercising the Government and civil service is, "Is it practical?"

The Carter Commission, don't forget, was composed of accountants, economists and other technical experts, not politicians, legislators and administrators. The commissioners came up with the challenging, progressive philosophy of treating one dollar as just as taxable as any other dollar.

That's a good theory which probably justifies the support of most Canadians. But the commission worked entirely outside the political context. And it's only politicians and civil servants who can implement tax theory.

I suspect the most immediate obstacle to implementation is going to be provincial anger. The Report fails to deal with what has hitherto been considered the country's most pressing fiscal problem, the allocation of tax resources to match the respective responsibilities of Federal and Provincial Governments.

It has been argued that because the Commission was appointed solely by Ottawa, it had no business getting involved with provincial matters. But the commission itself chose to pass a judgement which simply ignored the provinces' contention backed up by the Economic Council of Canada — that their constitutional spending needs are increasing at a far greater rate than those of the Federal Government.

In the name of the central authority, the Commission declares that the provinces shall have no additional personal income tax points, and shall hand over control of corporation taxes to Ottawa. If the Federal Government thinks the provinces maybe need more money, then it might consider giving them a slightly larger share of the sales tax.

The Commission acknowledges that the implementation of many of its proposals would require Ottawa to win the co-operation of the provinces. Yet the Commission's comments themselves are likely to make this laudable aim that much more difficult to achieve.

For the rest, initial reactions to the Report seem to set millions of lower and middle income families against virtually every pressure group in the country. On the wealthy, the investors & big business,especially the insurance, mining and oil companies. They and many other groups would be forced to make up the Government's revenue.

But this is a grossly over-simplified picture. A careful study of the Report, when completed, will probably show that what one person loses with one hand, he will practically recoup with the other.

The problem is that the Report is, as its authors intended, a package deal. If the Government decides to accept its laudable aims, it will have to sell most, if not all of the package. That will require the sort of courage that is seldom expected from political parties. That is why a long period of digesting the practicalities is ahead.

The Letter Box

Sedgewick, March 4th. 1967

Dear Sir:

I heard that the Central High School Chorus was putting on a show at the Community Hall, so, as I know a lot of the youngsters concerned, I attended. I expected to enjoy myself but I certainly didn't expect nearly 2 1/2 hours of excellent entertainment. From the bouncy, energetic Can-Can to the ingeniously-made Centennial Symbol and the best singing of "Climb Every Moustals" that I have yet heard. the show really sparkled. It was hard to remember that, as the M. C. said, this was "just a bunch of high school kids." The show was a Happy Hundred Years Of Song, and the cast took the audience right along with them in a journey they obviously enjoyed.

If this same "bunch of high school kids" puts the same kind of work, talent and enthusiasm into their future vocations as they did into this show, all I can say is "Look out World, here comes Canada." Thanks kids, for an evening we'll long remember. God bless you all—Betty Walsh.

35 YEARS AGO
(From Press Of March 3, 1932)

Mrs. B. R. Matthews of Daysland had the misfortune to fall on the ice on Monday and dislocate the elbow of her right arm. She was taken to the hospital for an X-Ray and was attended by Dr. Shirtliffe.

A sudden change in the weather has made good ice at the skating and curling rinks and the rearin' game is again the order of the evenings.

Two rinks of curlers from Hardisty will be playing a double header at Sedgewick tonight for the Wayte & Orr and the Allan Johnson cups.

Wenzel Strachota of Killam figures that he made five dollars when the hockey game between the married men and the single men was called off, because he had a five dollar bet on the married men. Gus Bergmeen is also about interested as he would call his bet on the Calgary-Superior game, as Gus's favorite team was white-washed last Saturday.

M.D. Annual Meeting

The matter of building a joint administration office for the use of M D and School Board, was discussed. Reeve Blatz outlined the negotiation on this which had taken place during 1966 between the two groups and that council was of the opinion that negotiations were proceeding satisfactorily until a letter had been received from School Board March 3rd advising that all motions of the Board respecting the joint office had been rescinded on March 2 The letter from the Board was read to the meeting

It was suggested from the floor that perhaps it was desirable to keep the offices separate. It was also suggested the title two groups attempt to iron out their difficulties and endeavor to act in the best interests of the ratepayers.

It was moved that the council continue efforts to proceed with the building of a joint office On a show of hands the motion carried with 49 in favor and 36 opposed

Reeve Blatz asked for an expression of opinion on the discount presently allowed on payment of current taxes. It was moved and carried that discounts allowed on municipal taxes be discontinued.

Reeve Blatz also advised that the council members felt that perhaps the Medical Scheme in the M.D. had outlived its purpose. in view of the Medical Scheme operating by the Province of Alberta It was agreed that if the Municipal scheme was subsidized by the Provincial Government to the same extent as other medical schemes. it would be operating at very little cost to the ratepayers. The opinion was expressed that the Prov. Gov. was discriminating in not subsidizing the Municipal Scheme. It was moved and carried that the Municipal Medical Scheme be continued at least until a Federal Scheme of coverage was instituted.

With respect to providing fire protection to rural areas, the Reeve said council had entered negotiations with fire towns and villages to supply fire protection to rural areas in return of an annual grant of $1000 guaranteed for 10 years plus a service charge of $150 for first 2 hours and $25 per hour after that. It was moved and carried that the plan be approved.

It was moved that if the council could not reach an agreement with the School Board on the erection of a joint office, that the council apply for the County System of Government After some discussion a vote was taken on a show of hands. The motion was defeated

Mr. C. Hayes thanked the council for his re-appointment to the Alberta Finance Corporation.

Re: Child Welfare Protection Services

The Child Welfare Act (Assented to April 7th, 1965), Part 5 ,Section 9. Subsection 1, states:

In view of this provision, the Council of the Town of Killam, at a meeting held on March 2nd, 1967, passed a motion requesting that they be relieved of the responsibility of providing Protection Services for Children as at April 1st, 1967.

The Regional Office of the Department of Public Welfare has agreed to provide these services in lieu with the intent of the Act

Bantams Win N. Alberta Title

SEDGEWICK — Last Sunday at Ft. Saskatchewan the Sedgewick Bantam hockey team won the North Alberta Championship by defeating the Fort team by 10 to 6 in the two-game series.

The Bantams started on the trail to the Title by defeating Peace 16 to 0 in their first series. Next came Eckville in the second round which the team won 9 to 4 on total points. The third round was against Devon, and this team rated as the toughest by the Sedgewick coaches. Devon won the first game 6 to 5, but the local team came back to take the second game 8 to 2 and win the series on total points, 13 to 8.

In the final series against Fort Saskatchewan for the Northern Title, the Sedgewick team won the first game played last Wednesday at Sedgewick by a score of 9 to 2. On Sunday when the two teams met at the Fort the score was 3-1 in favor of the Fort team, with Sedgewick winning on total points 10 to 6.

Last Sunday at the Fort was the first time the team had played on artificial ice, and the players claim it was harder to skate on the ice seemed sticky This arena is also heated to short-sleeve temperature, and this could be the reason.

There is only one stop left for the Bantams and this is to play for the Provincial Championship against the Southern Champions from Lethbridge. This series is supposed to take place this coming weekend with both games tentatively scheduled for 2.00 p.m on Saturday night and 1:30 p.m. on Sunday afternoon at the Sedgewick Rec Centre. Final confirmation of these arrangements have not been received from the AAHA, but the local team understands that it is the south's year to travel, and it is hoped that these dates and times will be approved. Posters will be up as soon as final word is received.

The following is a list of the players on the team: R Cameron, J Large, R Bradley, B Erickson, D Bromley, M Gilbertson, B Beurnberg B Clark, N Oubach, L McBride J Cheran, G Anderson, P Whitehead, G Poyser, G Patten, L Miles, G Miles, M Erickson, G Calbert.

Coach Jim Cheram is coach of the team and Mr Bert Mitchell is the team manager.

For further clarification this will give Forestburg approval to transport the children of the Shmhagen and Streuch families in addition to the 17 pupils listed in motion 369.

The above motion resulted after a discussion with three members of the Forestburg School Board, being Messrs Bunney, Oberg and Forster, wherein this committee requested the School Board approval for the transportation all the children excluded in the Agreement of Jan. 1st 1967.

The Forestburg committee also requested the Board's consideration of a pro-rata payment of the Supplementary Requisition to Forestburg School District As a compromise, the Board agreed to adding six of the children which attend the Forestburg Board the transportation grant claim in 1967.

The teacher salary negotiating committee met with the Board, and were presented with a counter proposal to their requests. The counter proposals of the Board were those suggested by the Board's committee at a meeting held on

60 Year History Of Hardisty Bank

It was on March 20th, 1907 that the Canadian Bank of Commerce opened its branch in Hardisty, four years before its incorporation as a town. L.A.S Dack was manager for the first year of operation. His successor, W. R. Algar, remained in Hardisty for four years

Hardisty, now the centre of a prosperous inland farming district, had very little but a proud name and a promising future when the branch was opened. The community had been named after Richard Hardisty, chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company for Edmonton District and first Canadian Senator for the Province of Alberta

When the Imperial Bank of Canada merged with the Canadian Bank of Commerce in June 1961 it brought together two of the pioneer banks of the west. The first venture of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in what soon was to be known as Alberta had come at a time when Canada found itself welcoming back its troops from the South African War in the decade following some hundreds of thousands of immigrants were streaming to Canada from Europe and United States. It was a time when railroads could not be built fast enough

As a result it had been necessary for branch banks to be opened in the west long before quarters could be erected. Temporary quarters were set up in tents and shacks or anything that offered shelter. In the absence of a vault or other safe-keeping facilities, the manager was often obliged to sleep with the bank's money under his pillow. In winter, his first job each morning was to thaw out the ink for the day's use of his customers.

Early in the century the whole area of what is now Alberta had a population of only 73,000.

During World War I, A.F. Garland and F. E. Hawley were managers of the Hardisty Branch of the Commerce. In the adjustment to peacetime, chartered banks found themselves over-expanded. Several communities lost their banking facilities in this period, but fortunately Hardisty was not one of these. The branch continued, under the direction of Robert Hawley who remained in Hardisty from 1916 until 1934, when he was relieved by R. J. Ward who remained with the branch until 1936.

The stock market crash of October 1929 heralded the beginning of The Great Depression. To W. Lewis fell the task of guiding the affairs of the branch through the difficult period from 1929 to 1931. A Ball became manager in 1932 and held the post through to 1940. Mr. Ball whose 17-year tenure has been the longest in the history of the branch saw it through the Depression, the War Years and the period of adjustment that followed. In 1950 he was succeeded by R. E. Daw, who in turn was followed by E. A. Stagg who was manager at the time of amalgamation with the Imperial Bank of Canada in 1961. T. R. English was manager from 1962 to 1964 when the present manager S. Gasior was appointed.

With total assets of $6,594,887,627 and with 1429 branches and agencies across Canada and throughout the world, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce is recognized as one of the 10 foremost banks in the world. Its many branches have grown and prospered with Canada just as its Hardisty branch has grown and prospered with this community.

New Municipal Act Presented

(By John Warren)

People often make the observation to me that the title work of a reporter must be "terribly interesting." The newsmen generally agree that it is and wonders quietly to him self what is so darned interesting about listening to a dreary speaker drone on for an hour or so at a cold plate banquet or watching council or the legislature plod mechanically through their work.

But there are enough surprises to keep a lot of us in the business just when we are starting to think a nice clean nine-to-five public relations job is what we really want. Last week was one of those.

Bob Thompson ups and quits as National Leader of the Social Credit it Party and we wonder how this is going to complicate things in Alberta where the party is trying to get a session and an election out of the way.

Then the long-awaited Municipal Act is introduced. It's one of the largest and most complex bills anybody in Alberta has ever seen. And it raised a long-expected flurry of protest from certain municipal councillors, particularly in the cities.

The legislation will combine four acts which now apply to municipal districts, villages, towns, counties and cities, and draws heavily on other legislation now in effect. It will streamline municipal law in Alberta. Also, according to the committee which drafted it the act will expand the authority of city councils and will give smaller centres similar powers.

Its other provisions include lowering of the voting age to 18, elimination of property ownership as a qualification for municipal office & standardization of the municipal office at three years.

Nobody disagrees too strenously with any of these ideas.

The real rub comes with the proposal for a municipal appeal board that would have the power to indemnify an almost any municipal decision. Many councillors say a review tribunal would throw out any municipal bylaw that someone complained about and then would eliminate virtually all real council authority.

The Minister of Municipal Affairs says the intent of the tribunal which should serve as a sort of municipal ombudsman. But nobody denies that the authority to overrule municipal decisions is there.

The whole thing will be the subject of public hearings in the legislature later in the session. They will give all interested parties the chance to make their complaints known. Some revisions will be made to the bill and it will be re-introduced as amended in 1968.

Last week also saw the Royal Commission report on Juvenile Delinquency tabled in the house.

It calls on the Alberta Government to enlist the aid of the other provinces in demanding replacement of the present federal Juvenile Delinquents Act. But it also calls on the province to make immediate changes on its own.

These would include setting of the ages for all juveniles at 17. It is now 16 for boys and 18 for girls. It says investigation of juvenile cr i m e should be left to members of the police juvenile squads. It says all future appointments to juvenile court should be lawyers with active experience.

It calls for full-time, university trained probation officers and rules to pay for such people. And it says the employment of retired policemen as probation officers should be drastically curtailed.

Municipal Council Holds Special February Meeting

A special meeting of the Council of the Municipal District of Flagstaff was held in the board room at Sedgewick on February 17th with all councillors present.

The meeting being held on other than a regular meeting date and all councillors being present, notice of meeting was waived.

Notice was received from the Alberta Municipal Financing Corporation that meeting of the Corporation would be held April 3rd of Edmonton. Mr. Chas. Hayes will be the representative of the M. D. at the annual meeting of the Corporation, entitled to vote the twelve shares of the Municipality.

Letter from the North-South Highway 36 Assn thanking the council for the resolution forwarded to them supporting their attempt to have construction completed on Highway 36, was read and filed.

Notification was received from the Canadian Dept. of Agriculture advising that the following lands had been declared eligible for PFA payments in the 5 to 8 bushel category: Rge. 11, Twp. 46, Secs. 6, 7 and 31; Rge. 12, Twp. 45, Secs. 1 to 11, 14 to 27, 30 and 36; Twp. 46, Secs. 8, 10-13, 15, 17 to 23, 28, 32, 33, 36, 35, 36.

Sympathy cards have been sent to bereaved families. The president reported that the quilt made by the members has been delivered to the Oakhill Boys Ranch.

Mr. Steele gave a talk about the Lenten Season he will transfer later in the year.

The Hostes although administered by the Sedgewick Auxiliary, will be restricted to Anglicans. Children from homes of other faiths, including Roman Catholic, may receive communion.

Route sheets were received from interprovincial Pipe Line Co. proposing location of a third line of 34 inch pipe to be constructed within the next eight-of-way adjacent to lines in the M. D.. It was moved the Company be informed that council has no objection providing the top of the proposed line was buried to a depth so that the top of the line was 4 ft. below existing field lines.

Advice was received from Stewart Weir, Stewart and Weir, Edmonton, Rural Road Study Report for Area No. 13 was in final printing. Their account was for $1,000.00.

Letter from Chamber of Commerce at Calgary asking council to consider in the policy of asking Province to appoint a Royal Commission to investigate assessments regulations in the province, was tabled for further information.

Mr. Chas. Hayes of Strome, council representative on the Alberta Municipal Financing Corp., and the chairman of the Corporation, met with the council and outlined the activities of the Corporation for 1966; the policies of lending money to bond. He said that the schools and hospitals were large borrowers during 1966, along with the cities.

Councillor Matthews informed the meeting that he had attended the Industrial Safety Seminar held in Sedgewick on Feb. 8th, and that it had been very helpful and beneficial to all who were there.

The question of approaching the Government of Alberta to have the M. D. declared as a carrier under the Alberta Medical Plan, was discussed. A committee of the council was formed to meet with the Minister of Health in this connection. The committee is: Chas. Bussey, Secretary Robertson, Blais, Lien and Gilart.

SCHOOL BOARD MEET

February 7th, and approved by the Board.

The teacher committee indicated that the Board's counter proposals would be taken to a meeting and discussed further. They agreed to meet the Board on March 2nd.

Minutes of the annual meeting of the Alberta Educational Board were read to the meeting. Mr. Marcotte had declined to accept nomination for a further term & Mr. Sperneal Hann of St. Peters, and Leonard Schulte was elected by acclamation.

The Superintendent in his report covered: Mr. Hillman's invitation: Secretary pay summary; Institutes & Workshops; List of 15 bursary students who will be teaching for us in September; Girls' Leadership Workshop; Industrial Arts Supervisor visit; Temporary Teacher.

Correspondence was dealt with from: ASTA Seminars; Dayaland School for intercommunication system in the new school; Powers Electric co.; Buttercia Colony, and a lease for use by Dayaland.

Three members of the Flagstaff M.D. council, Messrs Lien, Bussey and Severson attended the meeting. The Board appreciated their attendance and felt that such interchanges might be very beneficial, and suggested the practice be kept up by both governing bodies.

KILLAM — The attendance at the March meeting of the UCW was small owing to stormy weather. The roll was answered by presenting the Easter Lenten offering and an Easter verse. The president Mrs. Child led the worship period which was known "As Tell." For the study, Mrs F Kaiser gave very capably outlined the first chapter of the book "The Church Grows In Canada." It told of the explorations of Cartier and Champlain and the founding of English and French colonies along the St. Lawrence River and south into the New England States.

BANTAMS NEW PROV. CHAMPS

The Sedgewick Bantam Hockey Team became the Alberta Champions on Saturday with a decisive win over the Gleichen Bantams, the Southern Alberta Champions.

Playing at the Recreation Centre in Sedgewick, the local team outscored the Southerners by 14 to 1, in what was supposed to be the first of a two-game-total-score set. Because of the one-sided score the A. A.H.A declared the series over and the local team became the Provincial Champs.

Players on the Gleichen team are deserving of much credit for their sportsmanship, as they never gave up even when the score became so lopsided, and were still giving it all they had at the final whistle. The goal-keeper for Gleichen played a good game and made a great number of fine stops, even though the score dictates otherwise.

All together the local team played against five other teams on the way in the Provincial Title, defeating Ponoka, Eckville, Devon, Fort Saskatchewan and Gleichen.

Manager of the team Mr. Bert Whitehead, says the team has received excellent support from local fans, with good crowds turning out for the home games. At Saturday night's game the crowd was in the process of being crowded, with about twenty being from Gleichen.

Because the second game was cancelled and Gleichen was deprived of a home game to help with expenses, the local team will share gate receipts with the Southerners to help them along the expense route.

No official of the AAHA was in attendance at the game to present the cup, as the ceremony has been moved in the near future.

Iron Creek Fish & Game Completes First Year

The Iron Creek Fish and Game Association recently completed its first year of operation during which time it was very active and success fully completed a number of projects. The Assn. was able to have Fish Lake stocked with Perch and this coming year plans to review the local pheasant population and will possibly carry out a re-stocking project. the Pheasant hunting season may have to be changed.

A gun club was organized and a rifle-range built to give members a better chance to test and practice with their rifles.

First annual banquet was held earlier this year which was well attended. Trophies for various contests were presented at the banquet.

Instumental in the formation of the Iron Creek Fish and Game Assn. was Mr. Albert Whiteck of Langhead who made a survey and discovered that there were some 80 potential members who were interested in forming a Fish and Game Assn. Albert contacted Mr. Bill Beerbower who operates a dairy machinery at Round Hill, Alberta and is a long-time member of the Fish and Game. A meeting was called & the Iron Creek Assn. was formed, the name being taken from the natural creek which flows through the area covered by the Assn.

First officers were: President, Mr. A. Whiteck. Sec., Mr. K. McNally. After about two months Mr. McNally changed jobs and had to resign and Mr. John Wagemaker was elected as secretary.

From a starting membership of about sixty the Assn. increased to 160 members by the middle of the first summer.

Miss Karen Lien represented the Assn. in the Hardisty Stampede Queen Contest. A set of dishes donated by Mr. Bill Beerbhorpe was raffled to raise money for Fish & Game projects in the local area.

It was regretable that the only one of the previous managers able to attend was Mr. Tom English.

Greeting the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stan Gaetz and members of the bank staff. Lunch was served throughout the afternoon by ladies of the U. C. W.

Ernie Moore Named P. C. Candidate

They also elected Glen Clair of Strome as constituency president, who in turn outlined plans to build a strong organization in support of the party candidate.

Mr Stan Coyne and Mr. Len Larson will attend a meeting in Red Deer March 13th where the final decision on the matter will be made

Sharon Crone Married At Hardisty

St. Paul's United Church, Hardisty was the scene of a pretty winter wedding on December 10th, 1966, when Sharon Rosalie, eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs. Fred Crone became the bride of Royce Ryan, son of Mr and Mrs. Louis Schmutz of Sedgewick.

Rev W. G. Zwicker officiated at the double ring ceremony before a chancel decorated with cedar boughs and baskets of red and white roses.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March played by Mrs. J Edworthy She was charmingly attired in a floor length gown of white embossed brocade, simply styled with a slim skirt, empire waistline, and lily point sleeves. A matching train fell from her shoulders. Her shoulder length veil was held by a crown of pearls and aurora borealis. A pearl necklace and earrings, gift of the groom, and a cascade bouquet of red roses entwined with satin streamers and rosebuds completed her ensemble.

Miss Beth Milne, friend of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Donna Crone attended her sister as bridesmaid. Each wore identical floor length gowns of red velvet. Theirs of pearl and aurora borealis and matching jewellery completed their outfits. They carred bouquets of white stefanotis entwined with red ribbon.

Mr. Lawrence Schmutz was his brother's best man, and Mr. Dennis Schmidt was his other attendent. Mr. Lawrence Crone and Mr. Marvin Schmutz acted as ushers.

Prior to the ceremony, Mr. Les Anderson sang. "Oh Perfect Love", and during the signing of the register rendered "The Wedding Prayer".

The bride's mother wore a three piece suit of deep brown Italian knit with light brown accessories & a corsage of yellow rose buds. For the wedding the groom's mother chose a west crepe dress of raspberry red with matching hat, black accessories, and a corsage of pink and white rose buds.

The reception was held in the Hearth Community Hall which was decorated in red, white, and silver, with cedar boughs framing the windows. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake decorated in red, silver, and white, flanked by slender white tapers in silver holders. The cake was made by the bride's mother and decorated by Mrs. D Wilder, aunt of the bride.

Mr Ralph Manning acted as M.C Mr. Lawrence Schmutz proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom ably responded. Mr. Les Anderson proposed a toast to the bridesmaids to which Mr. Dennis Schmidt responded. Rev. Zwicker gave an enjoyable coverage of some of cupids work over the past forty years. Mr. Les Anderson and Mrs. J. Edworthy fasioned the guests with a bountiful rendition of "At Dawning". Among the telegrams received was one from the bride's grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wilder, who are spending the winter in California.

Miss Wanda Wilder, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. Miss Barbara Schmutz and Misses Marie and Marilyn Manning assisted with the gifts.

Out of town guests were from Edmonton, Calgary, Amisk, Irma, Jasper, Kinsella, Sedgewick, Provost, Vermilion, and Wainwright.

Open house and a dance were held in the hall following the reception.

Alta. Gov. "White Paper"

(By John Warren)

Even the rebates to the 17th of Ireland were overlooked in the legislature on Friday.

The event was tabling of a huge policy document outlining the role of the government in developing human resources. The "White Paper" with supporting documents runs to 14 volumes and more than 3000 pages. It was issued any just as many people or how many dollars were involved in its preparation but Premier Manning obviously thought it was well worthwhile.

He described it as "the most significant and most important document we've produced in over thirty years of government." Anyone who expected it to be a simple policy statement got a rude shock.

The statement maintains the basic Social Credit principle that the individual is the most important factor in society. It also plunges strongly for free enterprise and reaffirms the validity of other basic party principles.

But it shows an awareness of social legislation which hasn't been stated previously with anything like the same emphasis. It was there, it just wasn't being emphasized as much as some other things.

Mr Manning says he gives his full personal undertaken to the entire document. And here's what it says on that score: "to destroy evil and for all, the fallacious notion that those who believe in freedom of economic activity, private ownership, individual enterprise and responsibility are incapable of social conscience and devoid of humanitarian sentiments."

The white paper makes a somewhat startling claim to non-partisanship.

War-Time Casualty On Alta. Highways

In what could almost be called a war-time casualty list, the Alberta Safety Council has released a three-year-end traffic accident summary. It shows 39,988 accidents, which resulted in 307 deaths and 8,940 injuries, took place on Alberta streets & roads last year, the worst on record.

Highest number of fatalities recorded previously was in 1964 when 301 died. Last year, the death toll declined slightly to 307.

Motorcycles and scooters played a part in the new fatality record. According to the Motor Vehicle Assn. nine riders died in accidents with their machines. Seven were drivers and two were passengers. Four of the dead were under 16 years.

More On Editors Trip To Expo '67

(By A. W. H.)

At this time, six weeks ahead of the official opening of Expo '67, it is difficult to estimate which of the varied attractions will gather the biggest crowd, but we are sure of one thing. Just about everyone who visits the site will be impressed by what has been named "Habitat 67". This is a bold attempt at experiment in medium-density apartment housing which entails advanced pre-fabrication and mass production techniques. In Habitat 67, huge 85-ton boxes of pre-cast concrete are literally piled atop one another like giant cranes, to form apartments in such a manner that your roof, for example, becomes your upstairs neighbor's garden. It is an attempt to bring country living, to the apartment dwellers something of the privacy and comfort that suburbanites enjoy.

Habitat 67 is, generally pyramidal in shape, although from the ground level is resembles a checker board. It is difficult to describe in words, for the so-called boxes or units are angled in many directions like a giant Chinese puzzle as some sort one of its beauties is that cars are relegated to ground level, and the upper-level pedestrian malls and plazas are free of noxious fumes. Habitat 67 will remain on the site after the fair closes and will be occupied by tenants, who will share a lovely view of Montreal to one side, and the St. Lawrence River on the other.

Most people, we know, will enjoy the La Ronde amusement park, which will also remain as a permanent attraction after the close of the fair. For the children, a huge area has been spared to make it a Canadian cross between Disneyland and Disney's Tivoli Gardens. The centre-piece of La Ronde is a huge structure called the "Gyrotron", known as the "thinking man's thrill ride". It will prove a fun way to spend an hour or two.

In the Gyrotron you are strapped into a space craft and taken on a rocket ride, complete with countdown and blast-off. Weightless in space craft will flash by your window, asteroids appear and disappear, then your cabin floats outside, high above the crowds and into the second Gyrotron where the cabin suddenly plunges into a smashing, blasting volcano filled with simulated molten lava. Through the very hearts of the earth you plunge, when, all of a sudden, you are ejected by a great mushroom shaped vapor that, to the delight of the children

Elephant Brand granules are harder — they don't cake or break-up to dust — but they do dissolve readily in your soil. Mr and Mrs R. C. Kisser were weekend guests at Chateau Lacombe in Edmonton to celebrate the 38th anniversary of the 1042 class of nurses.

Mr Harold Hall and Mr and Mrs Martin Kelly and Linda Kelly from Edmonton are enjoying a holiday in Ontario and Quebec.

The Old Timer Hockey Boys were hosts to the 15 and under boys of Killam last Thursday evening. It sounds like it was an entertaining evening. Mr Leo Slavik (old timer) had the misfortune to break his arm in two places while trying to put one of the younger generation into the boards. Oh yes, the 15 and unders won 10 to 5.

On Friday night the 15 and under boys hosted the Lougheed team with the latter winning 6-2.

Miss May York of Edmonton is at her home over the weekend.

Mr and Mrs Vern Nielsen and family were Friday visitors at Carnwough.

Mr Adolph Schaffer and Danny, Mr R. Kinser and Danny attended the annual Knights of Columbus District Bonspiel held at Provost last Sunday.

A shower in honor of Miss Carol Borgal will be held in the new R. C. parish hall on Thursday evening, March 30th at 8:30. Everyone welcome.

Mr and Mrs Grant Murray have returned to Vernon after picking up some of their furniture and purchasing a week visiting friends and relatives in the district.

Mr and Mrs Bill Kascier have a new baby girl added to their family. Treva Ann. Treva will be one year old on April 2nd. Congrats.

The fire department was called to the Carl Schuurman residence on Saturday afternoon. A small utility tractor caught fire. There was minor damage to the garage walls.

Water, water, everywhere but not a drop to drink. A check at the east end of town thought that for a couple of days last week as a water line had broken and water was shooting up from the ground.

Mr Lon Hall has returned home after a month holidaying in B. C. and Oregon.

Baptist Church

Killam Baptist Church CYF met on Friday evening March 17th, and enjoyed an evening of bowling and curling in the Sedgewick Recreation Centre. A delicious lunch was served at the John Knox Hall following the recreation.

There was a large Sunday morning attendance both for the Sunday School and Worship. During worship service a lovely solo was rendered by Mrs. Gaynor Bartusek. Pastor Nothercott's message was based on "Paces Around This Creek".

The evening service saw about 35 present. Pastor Nothercott sang a solo entitled "They Led Him Away". The message was on Fellowship.

Several members of Killam Baptist attended the local presentation on the subject of James Literature, in the Catholic Church on Sunday evening. We are all convinced that these who are interested in Christian culture need to unite to combat against the peddlers of smut and pornography who are able to destroy the morals of our youth.

The local CYF is sponsoring a teen-age film entitled "Fast Way Not to Be Alone" to be shown in the Killam Baptist Church on March 24th, 8:00 p.m. This film provides a candid look at the short-sighted morality of some young people today. Every one is invited to attend.

WATER! WATER!
Some people have trouble getting water or getting good water on their premises. If this applies in your case I can highly recommend the meeting on Water Well Development that will be held in Ryley on Thursday, March 23rd. A similar meeting held in Coronation early in the winter was very well received, and those attending were very high in their praise.
NEW BULLETINS!
Some new publications are arriving for distribution Alberta Farm Guide, 1967 or Centennial issue. This is a thick publication covering all phases of Agriculture. The last edition was published in 1955. Varieties Of Grain For Alberta, 1967. This edition includes some of the list not recommended varieties of grain. It recommends Galt and Conquest Barley, Target Rape, Harmon Oats, etc. Get your copy soon.
U. S. BEEF COW NUMBERS!
The U. S. January 1st inventory of beef cattle shows a 1 percent increase over the 1966 figure. Beef cow and yearling and 2-year-old heifer numbers are up 1.2%; 43.8 million head compared to 43.3 one year earlier. However, the January 1967 count came as a surprise because it included a revision of cattle numbers based on the last U. S. A. census. A year ago on January 1st, the number of cows and heifers one year and over was estimated at 41 million head. 2.3 million fewer than now felt to have been on hand at that time. The extra couple of million "phantom cows" has upset some earlier predictions and comparisons, and suggests there will be fewer beef cattle marketed in the next few years than was earlier felt possible.
SWINE BUILDING TOUR!
Sixty people in nineteen cars from the Municipal District of Flagstaff and the Castor - Coronation area gathered at DeBerne to take in the Swine Building Tour last Thursday. The weather started out good but as the snow began to fall and the wind began to blow, visibility became Limited. In spite of the weather we visited four farms and inspected the long building facilities. The last farm call was abandoned because of the heavy roads and poor visibility in the Powaka district.
Interest was keen and many questions were asked. Not even the poor weather could dampen the enthusiasm of the tour members. We wish to thank the farmers participating for the co-operation and attendance.
ESTATE PLANNING MEETING!
The second meeting on Estate Planning has been arranged for the district for Tuesday, March 28th in the Alliance Community Hall starting at 1:30 p.m. Jerry Jones of the Economics Division of the Alberta Dept. of Agriculture will again be speaking on Estate Planning. At this meeting he will have more time and will be able to cover the different aspects of estate planning more fully.

A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO

By Tracy S. Ludington

Nowhere else in North America today is there a city as vibrant and alive with the zeal and zest of accomplishment as Montreal — and a great deal of the credit for this dramatic development must be laid right at the doorstep of Expo.

There are those who think the whole revolutionary concept should have been called "the Montreal World Fair' instead of Expo — but if it had been saddled with such a mundane, run-of-the-mill name, perhaps it might have faced the possibility of being just another world's fair.

But the name Expo sparkles — and the theme of Expo is already echoing round the globe.

And Expo, with its theme 'Man and his world' is now in every phase and facet; with architects, designers, engineers and artists caught up in the creative and boundless outburst that is developing on two islands and a peninsula in the mighty St. Lawrence River at Montreal the true 'showplace of the nations, really 'the world in 1,000 acres.'

The key, of course, is Montreal.

Visited by Jacques Cartier, the Breton sea captain, in 1535, the place now called Montreal welcomed its first settlers in 1642; was still a fur-trading centre in the days of James McGill; has developed until today it can lay claim to the title of 'largest inland seaport on the globe' and 'air crossroads of the world,' and make them both stick.

From coast to coast in Canada, all up and down both coasts of the North American Continent, in Europe, the British Isles and elsewhere — a high percentage of the 38,000,000 who will see Expo between Apr. 28 and October 27 next year, will be drawn to it partly because it is being staged at Montreal.

It is probably true to say that Expo '67, as it has been planned & is being presented, could not have been accomplished elsewhere — as vibrant is it, so pulsating with the very joie de vivre! that is Montreal in the present day.

Expo will be the event of '67, the most spectacular presentation of its kind ever conceived and at the very foundation is Montreal's reputation for geniality, and the warmth of its welcome.

The uniqueness of the transportation world will point towards Montreal next year as travellers drive, fly and sail into the city for Expo '67. In and around Montreal, multi-laned freeways are roaring completion, and Expo-bound motorcoaches. Trans-Atlantic airlines are already planning daily and heavy runs. European capitals instead of their now once-weekly flights. A record number of passenger liners will sail up the St. Lawrence including the flagships "France" of the French Line and "Michelangelo" of the Italian Line. The International destination in '67 will be Montreal and a world exhibition second to none.

National pavilions of individual nations; Canadian Federal and Provincial pavilions; International Pavilions and the famous Theme Pavilions; all will be there, as well as the myriad attractions erected by industries, organizations, groups and associations.

There will be a vast amusement section, restaurants galore — and all with ease of access, and popularity of price.

And remember, Expo is in close proximity to the heart of Montreal, Canada's metropolis, with so many attractions of its own.

E.M.O. Unit Holds Second Exercise

A Flagstaff Emergency Measures Exercise was held last week in the Town of Sedgewick for the purpose of instructing and practicing the Unit Emergency Government Headquarters in carrying out it's emergency functions.

The Exercise was conducted under the authority of the Control Commission for the Flagstaff Municipal District No. 45 E.M.O. Unit and in conjunction with personel from Northern Zone Headquarters in Edmonton. The Exercise was held on Monday afternoon, March 20th.

This particular Exercise involved the handling of several hundred persons who were being evacuated from the City of Edmonton, with the local EMO Unit being responsible for providing food, clothing and shelter, etc. for these people. Members of the local unit carried out their duties they were assisted and received instruction from the instructers from the Northern Zone Headquarters.

During the exercise arrangements were made for the high schools at Daysland and Sedgewick to be made available as welfare centres to accomodate those evacuees who had no relatives or friends in the area.

This was the second EMO Exercise held by the Flagstaff Unit this winter for the purpose of providing the local volunteers with experience in their various duties such as police, fire, welfare, health, rescue & transportation services. With the experience the EMO personel are gaining through these exercises they would be able to quickly provide assistance in case of a major accident involving a large number of people The example always used is the Lamont School Bus-Train Crash of several years ago. It would also be the collapse of a hockey arena or some other local or provincial disaster.

AWAY THEY GO — The starting flag comes down on the first rocket powered race at the Kitsun Winter Carnival gala underway. 20th Blood Year !

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the Canadian Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service. It started back in '45 when a cross Canada survey revealed that many large areas of our country were completely void of blood transfusion facilities. Few technicians with up to date information and knowledge of the transfusion therapy and laboratory techniques were available. In addition, the cost of blood transfusions was often beyond the financial means of the average hospital patient. As a result of this survey the Canadian Red Cross inaugurated it's blood transfusion service in February of 1947 in Vancouver. By the end of the year the service was operating in Northern and also Southern Alberta, and the total number of blood donations was 32,072. Today, in order to meet the needs of hospitals across the nation, the Red Cross must collect nearly one million blood donations this year. Through this Transfusion Service and many thousands of volunteer blood donors, any person in any Canadian hospital who needs blood, receives it free of charge. The service is truly national in scope & every hospital is assured of adequate supplies of blood for its at the Easter break (which many wishful thinkers had hoped would see prorogation of the activity of the house showed no signs of slackening.

In a surprise move last week, Premier Manning gave his initial response to the allegations of improprieties made at the first of the session by the New Democratic member, Garth Turcott.

Mr. Manning said there is no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the Municipal Affairs Minister, Mr. Hooke, or the former Provincial Treasurer, Mr. Hinman. But he left the question of impropriety up to the members of the legislature. The premier said the question of propriety becomes one of individual opinion, rather than fact.

Mr. Turcott had cited reports and tabled documents which he said indicated the two government members had used their offices to further their own ends.

Everybody now seems to want to get into the act. It's just possible that the house will call a committee to go into the whole matter. This would allow all kinds of witnesses and interested parties to present evidence on the subjects involved. It could then be drawn up into even more of a political football and could extend the session for days.

The other possibility is that a motion (possibly to the effect that the members are exonerated of any wrongdoing, legally and ethically) would go before the legislature. This would be subject to debate by all members but probably wouldn't take as long as a committee.

In any case, Mr. Turcott has been given a chance to speak on the whole thing right after the Easter recess.

So that's one reason why the session won't end right away.

The other reasons (there are two or so) have to do with the major bills, committee hearings, reports that will be discussed, and the immense fact-finding being put to the cabinet by the opposition.

Here are a few of the other things that happened last week.

The Alberta Investment Fund term turned a disappointment after its first year of operation. It's first annual report showed that it had raised only about $2 million of the $10 million that it had hoped to raise through sale of shares. It's running a $7-thousand dollar deficit and hopes to overcome this next year.

The first report of the new superintendent of correctional institutions in Alberta said there are serious problems in the prisons service. J. D. Lee said staff recruiting for the service continues to depreciate and he called for better salaries and new training programs. Later in the week Liberal Bill Switzer called for a system of district jails to keep minor offenders out of the big institutions.

A motion calling for a legislative committee to investigate Indian housing problems was predictably defeated.

The minister of health, Dr. Horn, said that increases would be made this year in both buildings and professional workers and the mentality ill in Alberta. He outlined the plans of his department during study of the budget, but admitted that there is real difficulty in obtaining professionals for mental health work.

Major changes in the provincial health plan were also announced. Under them the government would pay the insurance agency to handle contracts for low income groups who will be subsidized. Other people could buy the government insurance at a full rate. The plan will probably cover 95 percent of Albertans with some kind of health insurance and thus let the province participate in the federal medicare scheme. It also extends services covered in new areas including chiropractors and osteopaths.

Legislature Cont's. Busy Schedule

(By John Warren)

If ever a session of the Alberta legislature looked as though it might never end, this one is it.

Steady and approval of the $534,000,000 budget has been completed, steady ahead of schedule. But

Mr. Manning said there is no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of the Municipal Affairs Minister, Mr. Hooke, or the former Provincial Treasurer, Mr. Hinman. But he left the question of impropriety up to the members of the legislature. The premier said the question of propriety becomes one of individual opinion, rather than fact.

★ MACDUFF REPORT

Spending Spree

OTTAWA — Canadians appear to be heading into massive record of tax indebtedness. The federal government's budget brobs ever their heads as most of them were in the throes of wrestling with their 1966 income tax.

Revenue Minister E. J. Benson tabled the main estimates in the Commons in mid-March. They disclosed that the Federal Government is heading into a record spending year in 1967-68. It will cost the taxpayers more than $11 billion!

The main estimates list the fiscal year that starts April 1 total at $5 billion 881 million dollars. In addition Ottawa will pay out approximately $1,288,000,000 in old age security payments and payments under the new guaranteed income plan for the aged.

The massive increase in spending is the largest in peacetime history. The new outlays are of such a size that Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp may be forced to resort to new tax increases in the coming Budget.

The Budget is expected to be introduced in April. It will be a "hold the line" budget as the federal officials and the provincial officials study and meet later in the year to examine th. Carter Royal Commission proposals for overhauling the taxation setup in Canada. The new Budget is not expected to include many of the recommendations of the Carter Commission. It is far too early.

Mr. Sharp wants the people of Canada, the provincial officials the municipal officials together with organizations, to weigh the Carter reports at the Conclusion. He expects a lot of debate and study before the Federal Government is prepared to start moving on the recommendations. Possibly the Budget in 1968 might make a start towards implementing some of the Commission's proposals.

Meantime faced with the large increase in governmental expenditures the Financial Ministers will have to take into account how he is to raise the funds to meet the higher bills.

Despite the Finance Minister's declaration that he had to apply the brakes last year to shut down the inflationary pressures, the Government's spending in the year 1967-68 has soared because of rising wages and costs for programs already approved by Parliament.

On the same day that the Revenue Minister tabled the estimates the annual report of the Bank of Canada was issued. In it the Governor of the Central Bank, Louis Rasminski issued a blunt warning to the Canadian people and their governments that "for much of the last two years we have overheated the economy."

He voiced serious concern over a pattern of exhorbitant wage increases unaccompanied by compensating increases in productivity.

Mr. Rasminski was sharply critical of Canada's governments for increasing their spending commitments at a much faster pace than their revenues could accommodate. He noted with concern that the Canadian economy had experienced last year "it's sharpest increase in prices since the mid-1950's."

The Governor said that it was necessary for Canada to achieve "at least as good" a cost-price performance as the cost-price performance of the United States "if we are to avoid serious difficulties." He said that for some time now Canada has been falling short of this standard. The Governor viewed with stern disapproval the wage increase pattern that had been set in 1966.

Said Mr. Rasminski "it has to be borne in mind, that with or without publicly sponsored guidelines, patterns do emerge. It is essential that these patterns be realistic. There is very little to be said in favor of income negotiations, often difficult, prolonged and costly to all concerned, which lead to agreements that are bound to be greatly amended in their final effect by subsequent increases in prices."

"As a matter of simple economic arithmetic the real income of the community is inevitably limited by the amounts we can in fact produce. You cannot get a quart of wine out of a pint jug!" said the Governor.

He warned that the average increase in wage and salary rates "of any year was far in excess of any reasonable estimate of the average annual increase of output per worker. He said it was even further above the "disappointingly small gain" in non-farm productivity which Canada, had in fact, achieved last year. He gave a strong note of caution saying there were definite limits to the economy's ability to absorb such shocks.

The Canadian taxpayer forking over his hard-earned money to pay income taxes is acutely aware of what the wage increases and other outlays can do in imposing a choke on this income through the payment of higher taxes.

For example, in the main estimates the defence budget for 6-67-68 is estimated at $1,660,000,000, an increase of $113,300,000 over the fiscal year ending on March 31, 1967. The defence expenditures are the highest since 1956-57.

But spending on equipment in the fiscal year 1967-68 will be less than was estimated for 1966-67, a more than was actually spent. This anomaly is explained by the fact that some spending that had been planned for equipment last year was postponed. The higher defence bill is due to pay increases and higher operating costs in the armed forces superannuation account. Instead of the estimated $78,400,772 contributions the government has had to pump in an estimated $138,340,500, and in 1967-68 will contribute $141,140,634.

Two armed forces pay increases that occurred in the last two years will increase spending on wages and salaries by $71.5 million. It is apparent that Defence Minister Hellyer's goal under integration to reduce or maintain operating costs while spending more on equipment is not being realized at this time. That was evident from the estimates.

Centennial celebrations will cost the Federal Government more than $99,000,000 in 1967-68. The spending on Expo '67 will take the biggest bite, amounting to $30,750,000. Visits by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth and other

The Homemaker !

The Royal Commission on the Status of Women will have a lot to investigate — disparity in the pay scale between the sexes; the bypassing of competent women when promotions are made; income tax regulations refusing to allow the working wife to deduct for domestic help. These we feel sure will receive due consideration.

But there is another area that also needs study — the role and status of the home-maker. The young mothers are being pressured into the labor force by the implication, spoken and unspoken, that only a dolt or a laggard makes children and house keeping a first concern. The irony of it is that many of them spend all day teaching other people's children (apparently more interesting than their own); they are nurses, waitresses, cooks, they staff laundries and dry-cleaning plants, all variants of the very occupation they privately abrogate. This wholesale exodus from personal to public employment should receive thought ful scrutiny. Youngsters have can be not the slightest doubt that polluted urban atmosphere and water systems has become a major health problem for North America. About half of the 135 million tons of pollutants poured into the air over the U.S. is from the nation's motor vehicles. New York City for example, pumps 730 pounds of filth into its air each year for every resident of the city. The air that kills is not as well known just yet to Canadians, but governments are slow to impose much stiffer laws than we have at present in order to protect citizens against pollution. There is medical evidence that air pollution is linked to lung cancer, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, asthma and other serious chest and lung diseases. Yet we move at a snail's pace in coming to grips with the problem. We will of course deal with the problem, and likely fail. What worries us the most is how are we going to deal with man's plain cussedness. That's our real problem.

Air That Kills !

Among today's cynics it is fashionable to make prophecies on how man eventually will destroy himself. There are those who predict that human beings will burn themselves out of existence with nuclear bombs. Others say that overpopulation will lead to world-wide famine, starvation and eventually extinction. Another possibility, so say others, is that mankind will eradicate himself with gadgets, such as motor vehicles which one day take more lives in the U. S. than the Viet Nam war. Recently a new theory is that mankind in time will choke to death by breathing only polluted and poisoned air. Others say that taxes will soar until mankind will become extinct by choking in anger and frustration.

Obviously most of these pessimistic assessments of human kind's future are fairly far-fetched. The genius of man somehow seems to have saved him from calamity at the last moment. At the same time, there rights too. One, surely is for emotional security. There isn't very much available when they are left to the devices of ever-changing babysitters.

There are many reasons why wives work. For some it is an economic necessity, for others it is right for a variety of reasons. However it is hoped the Commission will do something to add strength to the morale of those who would and could do a first-class job of mothering if the general public would let them alone.

Alberta Girls Named Expo Guides

Four Alberta girls have been named guides to the Western Canada Pavilion at Expo 67, according to an announcement today by H. E. Martin. Alberta representative to the pavilion.

Miss Booka Halpern, 11311 108A Ave., and Miss Marilyn Pilkington, of 11404 58 Ave., both of Edmonton; and Miss Cecile Denise Dansie, of 308 24 Ave S.W., and Miss Dee Corcoran, of 811 15 Ave. S.W., both of Calgary, have been appointed Alberta members of the 16-girl guide staff. Four are nominated from each of the western provinces.

Miss Pilkington, student at the University of Alberta, has been the recipient of many scholarships and awards for services with the Students' Union. She is vice-president of the Students' Union for the 1966-67 term, as well as holding many other offices in university activities.

Miss Halpern is librarian assistant with the University of Alberta. She has been active in athletic programs and has served as a swimming and gymnastics instructor.

Miss Dansie, a laboratory technician with the Holy Cross Hospital in Calgary, is past president of a section of the Young Christian Students, and a member of the Canadian Society of Laboratory Technicians. She was active in student activities while at school in St. Boniface, where she lived prior to taking up residence in Calgary.

Miss Corcoran, educated in Montreal, Alberta, was active in student affairs while at school, and is secretary to the local C. Y. C. group. She is employed with a trust company in Calgary.

All guides are fluent in both English and French. Miss Dansie has some proficiency in Italian, while Miss Halpern speaks German and Dutch in addition to French.

All are taking correspondence training to acquaint them with the story of Western Canada, historic sites, socially and economically. All guides will be responsible for answering queries from visitors, about this area in its entirety and not only those referring to the province in which they resided.

The guides will be flited next month in Winnipeg with their two sets of uniforms and early in April will travel to Montreal where they will undergo a further course of training before taking up their duties at the Western Canada Pavilion when the exhibition opens April 28.

CANVASSERS GRIPE ME!

I don't know whether it's the weather, but certain species proliferate in this country with the rapidity of rabbits. One is the chairman of the committees. There's one for every snowbank in the nation. Another is the guest speaker. There's one at the bottom of every barrel. And another is the canvasser. In some smaller communities, there are more canvassers than non-canvassers.

A canvasser is a weak-willed person who can be talked into asking other people for money for a "Good Cause" or even, more popularly, a "Worthy Cause." The number of Worthy Causes in this country is only exceeded by the number of hitchhooiked birds of both sexes who allow themselves to be put on the list of canvassers.

And I know whereof I speak. In my day I have canvassed for the blind, the retarded, the resort owners, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and seventeen other Worthy Causes. About the only thing that I haven't done is sell cookies for the Girl Guides.

And I've hated every minute of it. The trouble is that the average Canadian citizen heartily detests the bending over of cash to an intangible. At heart he's a generous soul. He knows the Red Cross does good work, that something should be done for the blind and that we need a school for retarded children.

But he can't eat them, smoke them, drink them, or even attach them to his car. Therefore, the fellow who will fling down a ten in the liquor store as though he grew the lettuce, will dourly, head shaking, peel off a couple of thin one-spot for the Sally Ann. The housewife, who buys her weeds by the carton, will spend 30 minutes haggling for 3 quarters for the Cancer Society.

And I know just how they feel. I'm the same.

Some day, somebody is going to rap at my door for a Bad Cause: a free crock a day for alcoholics; a home for wayward pool players; a home for unwed fathers And I'm going to hand over $20 cash without even batting an eyelid.

This preamble, as you have probably gathered, is because I got back cred once again into canvassing for a Good Cause.

This time it's a community swimming pool. A year-round pool. There's no natural flood lake within 75 miles of the town. Nor even a river. Nor even a creek. Nor even a puddle.

Nearest lake is Lake Winnipeg, 75 miles away. Nearest river is the Red, 60 miles away. Nearest creek is the Assiniboine, 50 miles away. Nearest puddle is a mud hole in the middle of the main street, 3 miles away.

Hence the town's decision to build a swimming pool.

Food Catering Workshop

When your group caters to banquets and such do you always spend hours "haggling" over the price to charge? Do your host, hogs and head ache every time the day is finished? Is there always someone wanting to know "what I can do?" and proceeds to get in everyone else's way? If so, then your next step is to attend one of the Community Food Catering Workshops being held in the following locations:

Killam — March 31

The C.V.P. program for Good Friday evening was well attended. Many favourable comments were heard concerning the film that was shown entitled, Fast Way Nowhere. The young people gathered at the Norman Erickson home for a time of fellowship after the evening program.

We were glad to welcome the Walter Bartnesks on Sunday morning after an absence of several weeks on vacation.

HOME BUILDING SCHOOL!

An excellent school to help people plan their new home was held in Sedgewick on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 21st and 22nd. Information was discussed dealing with basements, floor plans, interior and exterior design and floor coverings, etc. Sources of credit and precautions with contracts were presented.

Although the attendance was low those attending were most appreciative of the help they had been given. Help is available to people who plan to build homes through the Extension Office locally and by the Home Design Specialist from Edmonton. Feel free to ask for help at any time.

BE CAUTIOUS!

Don't expect something for nothing if a fly-by-night salesman appears at your door selling home improvements.

According to Dianne Hammer, the Home Design Specialist with the Alberta Extension Service, this type of salesmen often explain that he needs a "show home" to demonstrate his product because his firm is new. He says he will pay for each new contract obtained in the area as a result of the advertising he gets by using your home to demonstrate his product. To get such plans underway, however, he needs a deposit which will be paid back in the form of bonuses or other contracts. He neglects to say that he is calling on all the houses in the area and making the same arrangements he is making with you.

Every direct salesman in Alberta is required to carry and to produce, upon request, a direct sales license which identifies himself and the company he represents. If he cannot produce a license, tell him you are not interested. Even if he has one, it is a good idea to phone your Better Business Bureau in Edmonton or Calgary before committing yourself. As the Better Business Bureau says, "investigate before you invest!"

School Contract Totals $297,116

DAYSLAND — Contract for construction of the new High School at Daysland has been awarded to the W. J. Bennett Construction of Edmonton. After several delays due to plan changes and other procedural reasons, the contract was awarded last week to the lowest of nine bids.

The Bennett bid was for $297,116, while the other eight bids ranged from 299,676 to $335,173.

Work is expected to get under way as soon as ground conditions permit, and according to Trustee John Polehuyko of Daysland, Bennett Construction has stated that the project will be completed by August 30th.

The project will include a man-way school addition of 3 classrooms, one science experience classroom, one science preparation and storage room, two ancillary rooms, and one garage laboratory; one industrial arts addition, showers and downstairs washroom addition to the Principal's office, Vice-Principal office, 2 counselling rooms, Secretary and general administration; Conference Room; Staff Centre, plus other non-instructional areas as deemed necessary to provide a functional educational unit with the limitations set forth in the regulations under the School Buildings Act.

Also included in the project is renovations to existing areas, landscaping and paving court, plus furniture and equipment.

The building of the school in the Town of Daysland is a follow-up of the Board's decision a year or two ago to centralize the divisional high school program at Sedgewick and Daysland. Students from Heisler & other districts are currently being brought into Daysland by bus, and this influx taxed the facilities to the extent that classes are currently being held in the Community Centre which was recently constructed.

Lougheed Bingo Won By Mrs. A. B. Flobert

The Lougheed Play-at-home Radio Bingo has been won by Mrs. A. B. Flobert of St. Lina, Alberta, with card No. 3555 Serial #3 32, sold by Mrs. Anderson at the Thorien Hotel.

Here is her story as told to Lloyd Cameron at her log house 12 miles North of Moon Lakes from Highway 21A:

"Joe and I had been to Glendon Saturday afternoon, March 11th to see the Doctor. On the way home we stopped at Therien for a quick beer. Mrs. Anderson asked if we would be interested in a bingo ticket. Joe took a ticket on the Ranchman's Bingo, but I said I didn't want bad luck. I still own for a living as I'll try the cash bingo. Mrs Anderson brought a bundle of tickets and I shut my eyes and pulled one out. She took it, filled it out and told me I had a blanket. Everyone there was really excited. They shook my hand, slapped my back & started trying to borrow money. It was the first time I had ever won any bingo, raffle or anything, and it was a real big thrill."

Mrs. Flobert went on to tell of coming to St. Lina district from U. S. A. with her parents in mid-winter when she was 10 years old. At that time Vegreville was the nearest railway point (three day drive with horses). She has lived in that same district since 1916. She and one of her five sons operate a farm in partnership with Joe Kostiniuk. She says half of her winnings will go to help Joe get a new tractor and part of the other half will get some new furniture.
